Middle River fire, rescue companies form new organization

Middle River Volunteer Fire and Rescue Company Chief Shane Pule (left) and President John Dulina (center) received a certificate of recognition from Tom Ludwig, vice president of operations for the BCVFA, for completing the merger of the two companies.

On Wednesday, Aug. 31, the Middle River Volunteer Ambulance and Rescue Company, station 52, and the Middle River Volunteer Fire Company, station 22, finalized their three-year merger process to officially become the Middle River Volunteer Fire and Rescue Company, station 74.

The merger process began in 2013, and the new company's chief, Shane Pule, said it took three years because there were so many moving parts involved.

"Within Baltimore County, we are the first stations that were pursuing a consolidation," Pule explained.

"Through the years, you've seen stations either come or go," he continued. "Now we're looking at two equally strong companies at this point that are coming together as a consolidation and bringing those assets together to work as one."

He added that it takes time to bring the personnel and assets of two companies together and make sure none of their assets or processes are being duplicated, as well as to write completely new bylaws for the new organization.

Following the corporate merger, the new organization is looking to eventually ern Boulevard corridor for both visibility and accessibility purposes, according to Pule. "That gives us improved response time build a new facility closer to the East-and more of an ability to actually get to the areas that we service," the chief explained.

Station 22's location at 1100 Wilson Point Road is nearly a mile from the nearest intersection with Eastern Boulevard, and Station 52's address at 2000 Leland Ave. is opposite the railroad tracks from the thoroughfare, which makes an efficient

County employing new anti-dumping measure in Edgemere

- Article & photos by Devin Crum -Baltimore County Department of Public Works (DPW) employees began installing a new fencing system along Morse Lane in Edgemere on Thursday, Sept. 1, in hopes that it will stop the illegal dumping happening there - or at least make it easier to clean up.

Seventh District County Councilman Todd Crandell, whose district includes Edgemere, requested funding from the county administration to install wooden bollard-and-cable fencing along a 500foot stretch of Morse Lane. The secluded roadway, he said, has been a "chronic dump site" over the years. The project is expected to cost $4,829.73 and be completed by Sept. 15.

The new fencing is being installed along the county's right of way on Morse Lane to act as a barrier to people pulling off the road and dumping on the adjacent railroad property.

"The thought is, if we make people actually have to stop on the road - which makes them a lot more visible - then they'll have to throw [their trash] over the bollard-and-cable system, that will be on the county right of way and DPW will go out and pick it up," Crandell explained.

The railroad company installed jersey walls to prevent access to their property, which Crandell commented he is "not a huge fan of, aesthetically," but they do not clean up the dumped material left there. And DPW employees technically are not allowed to go onto that property to get it.

"So it just sits there," he said.

Crandell said he was glad the county administration approved the project, which was not part of the capital budget.

However, the fencing will not cover all of Morse Lane. So they may have to revisit the issue if they notice that the dumping simply moves down the road.

Crandell downzones Fort Howard, explains decision to community

- By Devin Crum -

NEWS

On Tuesday, Aug. 30, the Baltimore County Council voted to finalize the new zoning maps, deciding to change or keep the same the zoning on more than 500 properties around the county.

The vote brought to an end the Comprehensive Zoning Map Process (CZMP), which occurs every four years in the county, and included Councilman Todd Crandell's decision to drastically reduce the allowable housing density at the nearly 100-acre Fort Howard property.

At the Thursday, Sept. 1, meeting of the North Point Peninsula Council (NPC) Crandell briefed community members about what has gone on in the county during the summer while the group has not held meetings, including the recent timeline of the Fort Howard saga and the intricacies of his zoning decision there.

Crandell opted to change the property from allowing 5.5 homes per acre over much of the swath to just one home per acre.

He said he did this because he thought Fort Howard Development, LLC and the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) were moving toward a "reasonable" project something that had a veterans focus and that controlled the number of housing units that could be built on the property knowing all of the issues with traffic, infrastructure and schools. But he left a Washington, D.C., meeting with VA officials feeling like he and the community were being bullied.

In an effort to get a quality project that would result in a restored Fort Howard, Crandell proposed legislation this summer which would have created an overlay for the property. It would have allowed no more than 400 homes to be built on the property and included certain other amenities for veterans and the surrounding community.

"So I thought we were heading down a [productive] road, and then a man in blue neon pants jumped on stage and announced he was in control of everything when he really wasn't," Crandell said.

He was referring to Armando Cignarale, a developer who claimed to be the new developer for the Fort Howard property at a community meeting on June 29.

Following that meeting, in mid-July, Crandell met with VA officials, who he said levied the threat of having to surplus the property, "and they really went backwards on what the plan was coming together to be," he said.

"They said, 'Todd, we really need to do apartments,'" Crandell said, adding that they now wanted to construct 200 apartments along with townhomes and single homes.

"I told them flat-out I can't let that happen," the councilman said. "I pledged as a candidate and then as an elected representative that I would protect the [North Point] peninsula from overdevelopment."

Immediately following that meeting, Crandell announced his decision to withdraw his Fort Howard overlay bill and his intention to downzone the property and told the VA and the developer to come back to him with a workable plan. "I'm a steelworker's kid from Dundalk; I don't respond to threats or being bullied too well," he said.

He noted that, as of Thursday night, he had not heard from VA officials or the developer's attorneys about the Council's decision to adopt the new zoning maps two days earlier.

Crandell announced that, as far as he knew, Cignarale is no longer involved in the redevelopment of Fort Howard, and that the new developer looking at the project is Sam Himmelrich of Himmelrich Associates, Inc.

Fort Howard Development, LLC did not respond to a request for comment on the developers involved.

Himmelricĥ, Crandell said, does not have a long history of development in the county, having done most of his work in Baltimore City. He said Himmelrich often uses historic tax credits to his advantage to help investment in his projects.

"In my opinion, he's the most reasonable developer that I've come across so far in this process," Crandell stated.

"I don't know, necessarily, what the answers are, but what I do know is that we need some help from the federal government," he continued.

Crandell said the issue has been difficult for him to deal with because the VA will not share the terms of the Enhanced Use Lease with him or the public. The Baltimore County attorney has also asked for it, along with several media outlets and private citizens via Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) requests. But the VA has yet to oblige.

"So it's very difficult to know what parameters we're working with if we can't see the lease," Crandell said.

The development is made further difficult because it is onerous on the developer, requiring them to restore the historic structures on the property, which will cost millions of dollars.

"So the developer then has no choice but to try to up the number of housing units so he can offset the high cost of development," Crandell explained. "I don't think it's the developer's fault and I certainly don't think it's the community's fault - that the VA neglected the property for so long that it's costing millions of dollars."

He opined that developing the property may be the only option left at this point, though, claiming that keeping it as a park or returning it to a functioning VA hospital is simply not realistic.

"It's not going to be a park. I don't think that's realistic" because of the restoration it needs, he said. "That's the challenge."

School heat policy gets tweaked as Hogan announces post-Labor Day start time

- by Patrick Taylor -

The new school year got off to a rocky start for Baltimore County Public Schools (BCPS), with two of the first four days resulting in closures for the 37 schools without air conditioning in the county. This prompted the Baltimore County Board of Education to revise their newly adopted heat policy.

By an 8 - 3 vote, the Board of Education passed a new policy that will allow schools that lack air conditioning to stay open unless the heat index is forecast to reach 90 degrees by 11 a.m. If the heat index is expected to reach 90 degrees by 3 p.m., parents may keep their children home and get an excused absence.

Originally, the policy called for schools to be closed if the heat index hit 90 degrees at any point during the day.

Members of the board stated that they had been inundated with letters, emails and phone calls since the original heat policy took shape in the early part of August, prompting them to revisit the policy.

Board members Ann Miller and Kathleen Causey had plenty of questions for Superintendent Dallas Dance, and questioned whether he was doing everything in his power to ensure that students were able to learn in the best environment possible.

Had the Board of Education not intervened when they did, schools would have been shut down a third time in the second week of schooling.

"We all support healthy school environments," said board member Edward Gilliss. "But sometimes those bright-line policies need to be changed."

According to the board, many members received frustrated emails from parents ranging from athletics and parent work schedules to meals provided to students. Gilliss stated that these issues were not all considered when the board made it's original ruling in early August.

The air conditioning battle prompted intervention from Governor Larry Hogan, who last week announced that beginning next year, public schools will start after Labor Day.

Announcing the new executive order in Ocean City, and flanked by Comptroller Peter Franchot, Hogan stated that school must begin after Labor Day and end by June 15. Schools are still required to complete 180 days.

Citing a Goucher poll showing that Maryland residents favored starting school after Labor Day, Hogan noted that such a change had been advocated for in the past by a bipartisan task force created by then-Governor Martin O'Malley. Franchot has long been an advocate of starting school after Labor Day, though historically he has been in favor of it due to the economic benefit of an extra week of vacation. Recently, however, he's been more vocal about the heat issues in Baltimore County and in the city.

NEWS

"This is not rocket science," said Franchot. "They have to start after Labor Day and get out by the middle of June. In between, they can do anything they want with their schedules."

Dance was not to pleased with the announcement, saying, "Many of us are trying to think about 'How do we give our kids more time in school?"" Dance then said some school breaks might need to be cut.

He said they have tentative ideas and concept drawings for the new facilities as far as what they would like to have, and they would like to be as close as possible to the current location. But a new site has not yet been determined.

However, they have had some informal talks with Lockheed Martin about using their ball fields at the corner of Wilson Point Road and Eastern Boulevard, according to the company's assistant chief, Paul Sullivan.

The new company will continue to serve chiefly Middle River, but their true reach extends far beyond that and the merger will allow them to more effectively meet the rising needs of an ever growing area.

In addition to Middle River, the company's engine service responds to multiplealarm calls in Essex, Chase and Golden Ring communities. The ladder truck and squad services go from the Baltimore City line to the Harford County line and as far west as Belair Road.

But the water and dive unit is the only fire department dive rescue service in the entire county.

"So that will travel the whole county," Pule noted, adding that they have also been known to go out of jurisdiction for mutual aid services in surrounding counties and as far away as West Virginia.

Baltimore County Volunteer Firemen's Association President Glenn Resnick said the new company's endeavour makes the entire BCVFA stronger. "We are very proud of you for leading the way in consolidating two companies to make one very strong organization, and that is the future of our association," Resnick commented.

BCVFA Vice President of Operations, being an "east-side guy" with the Wise Avenue VFC, said he was excited about what has occurred and what is to come from the new company.

He pointed out that the naming and station number designation of the new company allows the history of the new station to remain intact and unified into one company.

The new station number, 74, resulted from the addition of the old numbers, 52 and 22. And the new company's patch incorporates features from the histories of both companies, which have a combined service of 139 years.

Bob Bendler, a community leader via the Wilson Point Civic Improvement Association and the Essex-Middle River Civic Council, said he was pleased that the merger had finally been completed.

Bendler also served with the county fire department for about 10 years in the 1980s. "And even back then, both of these companies had excellent reputations for the services they provide," he said.

He also affirmed that he and the WP-CIA would be happy to help in any way they can in fundraising and advocating for the new facilities.

"The residents of Wilson Point don't want to see you leave," Bendler said. "But if you have to, we're going to help in any way we can to make sure it gets done successfully."

DUMPING

- continued from page 1 further the fence down Morse Lane," the councilman said.

Illegal dumping is sometimes done by private contractors who do not want to pay to deposit their scrap building materials in the county landfill or other acceptance facility. Other times it is done by residents who do not have either the time or means to take their large trash items - like sofas, mattresses and the like - to the Eastern Sanitary Landfill in White Marsh, which is open from 7 a.m. - 3:30 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays. And the county discontinued its roadside bulk trash pick-up several years ago.

Crandell said the lack of bulk trash pick-up is part of the problem. He has asked for the program to be included in both capital budgets since he took office, but his request was denied both times.

DPW workers began installing the bollardand-cable fencing on Sept.1 and are expected to finish by Sept. 15.

He noted, though, that he had recently assisted local police officers in digging through some trash that had been dumped in the area to find evidence of who it belonged to. And that evidence led to charges being filed against one individual who had allegedly been paid to dump the material for someone else.

"It's been a problem for years," Crandell said. "I don't know if [the fencing] is a 100 percent solution, but we had to take some sort of action to see if we could alleviate it somehow."

County law changed last year, via a bill introduced by Crandell, to raise the minimum fine for illegal dumping to $500.

It is unclear if that law change has had any real effect. But Doug Anderson, Crandell's legislative aide, said at least it brought some attention to the issue, which is a problem county-wide.

Household furniture and appliances are accepted for free disposal or recycling at the Eastern Sanitary Landfill, but many choose to dump them illegally instead.

Discarded shingles, mattresses and other materials litter a wooded area of the railroad property along Morse Lane near where the new fence is being installed.

By The Docks takes home five Best of Baltimore awards - by Patrick Taylor -

Award season is always kind of tricky to navigate - after all, the "experts" don't always have sound opinions. However, one thing that's tough to dispute is a vote straight from the people, and in Baltimore Magazine's recent "Best Of Baltimore" poll, the readers showed a lot of love to By The Docks.

The voters selected By The Docks for Best Crab Cake Sandwich, Best Crab Balls, Best Crab Dip, Best Cream of Crab Soup and Best Crab Imperial. The recognition left owner John Kanellopoulos floored.

"We take a lot of pride in this, it's a big honor," said Kanellopoulos. "This is all customer based, and that's what makes this even better."

Kanellopoulos heaped high praise on chef Jose Antonio Villanueva, whose work in the kitchen has returned By The Docks to its former glory. This is the first batch of awards to come out since Villanueva returned to the kitchen (he had previously worked there when it first opened) and the restaurant's return to form has been cemented.

"The good thing is we're bringing people back into the area," said Kanellopoulos. "People are coming from Pikesville, Owings Mills, Bel Air. People are even coming in from Delaware and central Pennsylvania."

Since the announcement from Baltimore Magazine, Kanellopoulos has stated that he's seen an uptick in business.

"The thing about this place is that it isn't the Harbor," said Kanellopoulos.

"People are coming here solely because they know that this is the area where you get great seafood."

Kanellopoulos also had plenty of high praise for the rest of his staff, stating that "without good service, you aren't going to get customer's that want to support your restaurant.'

"The waiters, the cooks, they all have a great drive," said Kanellopoulos. "Our chef is a fierce leader, just the way he gets everyone going. He has a lot of knowledge and the staff listens attentively. Guys are building their futures through our chef, and he's truly the best of Baltimore."

Perry Hall, Dundalk start off season on right foot

- by Patrick Taylor -

On Friday night, football season kicked off around the state with a slew of exciting games. Usually at the beginning of the season there are a few certainties, but this year is shaping up to be one of many questions. Mainly, who will emerge as the top team in the area? Dundalk, Perry Hall and Eastern Tech were the top three teams last year, but all three have lost key components and each team lost a large portion of starting players.

For Dundalk, things should be a bit easier considering they still get to ride the wave of Darrius Sample. But for Tech and Perry Hall, their loss of immensely talented skill position players leaves some question marks.

For both Perry Hall and Tech, their rush attack has been key over the last few years. Unfortunately, many of those pieces are now gone.

Still, given Perry Hall's school size and history, it would be foolish to bet against them. They showed that on Friday night with a big 33 - 28 victory over Aberdeen in an absolute barn-burner.

It would also be foolish to bet against them when they have Anthony Jordan. Jordan plays free safety and wide receiver/running back for the Gators, and he had an absolutely stellar game against Aberdeen on both sides of the ball. He tore off big run after big run, scoring a touchdown on a ten-yard run up the middle in the first. While he was effective all night long in moving the chains, he was most effective on the defensive side of the field, recovering one fumble while forcing two others, including a game-saving tackle as Aberdeen looked to cross the endline towards the end of the game.

But he wasn't just impressive because of his stats. Where Jordan stood out most was in the open field, frequently stuffing Aberdeen running backs before they had an opportunity to bust off a big run.

Also deserving of praise is Tyrone Smith, another defensive back who did well tackling in the open field. In fact, it was Smith who recovered the fumble in the endzone forced by Jordan.

Finally we come to Donte Cloude, who was arguably the most important offensive player of the evening for the Gators. Cloude is the primary return man for the Gators and showed great prowess in that role, giving Perry Hall wonderful field position each time he returned one.

But what really makes Cloude special is his versatility. The diminutive and shifty Cloude not only did well on little dump offs, he also did well stretching the field, scoring his touchdown on a 35-yard bomb down the right sideline. Earlier in the game, Cloude threw for a touchdown on a flea flicker reverse.

The Gators showed a lot of promise on Friday night. Offensively they fell into a few traps here and there, but for the first game of the season this unit played very well. The offensive line, led by right tackle Jake Magee, looked very strong and opened up holes for the rush while stifling Aberdeen's defensive line. Overall, it was a solid performance despite giving up 28 points. If their defensive unit can correct a few mistakes and not be so reliant on big plays, this is a major team to keep an eye on. Perry Hall has a tough matchup this weekend as they travel to Franklin for a 7 p.m. game.

Around the league

To the surprise of absolutely nobody, Dundalk got their season started off with a big 39 - 0 win over Kenwood. Sample gave his team an early cushion and was able to ride out his team's defensive prowess for the remainder of the game. Dundalk will host Milford Mill on Friday at 6 p.m.

Eastern Tech got their season started off on the wrong foot, losing to Owings Mills by a score of 18 - 9. The Mavericks put on a strong defensive display, led by their corps of experience linebackers. Butt offensively they struggled to get much of anything going throughout the contest. Tech will look to rebound when they travel to Middletown for an away match at 7 p.m. on Friday.

Overlea impressed in their debut, stomping Western Tech by a score of 25 - 8. Overlea surged at the end of last year and returned a lot of key players on both sides of the ball. And with a very manageable schedule, this is a team that is hoping to make a late run into the postseason.

Chesapeake had to wait a little while last season to secure their first win, but this year they got off to a strong start, upending Loch Raven by a score of 14 - 8. Chesapeake has a strong defense, and if they can play at their peak they'll manage to pull out a few more wins. We'll keep our eye on them over the coming weeks.

Sparrows Point got off on the wrong foot, getting trounced by New Town by a score of 50 - 14. The Pointers will look to bounce back on Friday at 7 p.m. against Randallstown.

Patapsco was handled with relative ease against Catonsville, falling by a score of 21 - 6. The Patriots travel to Dulaney for a 1 p.m. game on Sept. 10.

The Maryland State Police and the Maryland Department of Transportation came together at the Maryland Food Bank's Baltimore headquarters on Aug. 31 to sort donated items and kick off the fourth annual Hunger Action Month food drive, a month-long collection effort.

Throughout September, which is nationally known as Hunger Action Month, Marylanders will have the opportunity to donate nonperishable food items at a variety of events across the state. From Oakland to Salisbury and various counties in between, MSP and MDOT representatives will be out in full force to collect donations for those in need. The full list of events* can be found online at www.mdfoodbank.org/hungeraction/food-drive-drop-events. Select MDOT locations will also accept food donations throughout September at MDOT Food Drop Off Locations. Additionally, supporters who can't make it out to these events can donate food online using the MSP and MDOT virtual food bank platforms.

The centerpiece of Hunger Action Month is the food bank's Be a Voice Campaign, which encourages Marylanders to spread the word about the issue of hunger by snapping speech bubble selfies and sharing them via social media. Information about the Be a Voice Campaign is available online at www.mdfoodbank. org/hunger-action-month.

With so many struggling in a tough economic situation, donations are more important than ever. Donations of any size are more than welcome. If everyone does their part, we can end hunger.

Middle River man charged with assault after attack

A Middle River Man has been arrested after he threatened another man with a chainsaw during a fight.

Just before 7:30 p.m. on Aug. 29, Baltimore County Police responded to a home in the 11100 block of Bird River Grove Road in White Marsh. When officers arrived at the scene, they located one man in front of the home with an injury to his forehead and another man in the home with a cut to his hand.

The investigation has indicated that the two men had gotten into the argument inside the home. The argument turned physical and the man who owned the home told the other man, who had been staying there, to get his things and leave. The man who had been staying at the home retrieved a chainsaw from his truck, started it, and moved towards the other man.

The man who threatened the other man with the chainsaw was taken into custody. While in custody, he was transported to an area hospital for treatment of injuries. He has been identified as 43-year-old Michael Brian Dobihal of the 7000 block of Oliverwood Road in Middle River and has been charged with first-degree assault and second-degree assault.

DogFest to memorialize local homeless animal supporter after sudden death

Baltimore Humane Society's DogFest Walk & Festival on Saturday, Sept. 17, will memorialize Jason Webster, a local man whose death came suddenly in July. Webster, an ardent supporter of the Baltimore Humane Society, was a DogFest Walk Ambassador for several years. DogFest is Baltimore Humane Society's largest fundraiser of the year which attracts thousands of animal lovers, kids and dogs. The festival includes a one mile walk on their wildlife sanctuary with supporters who have raised money for the no-kill shelter's animals.

Sadly, Webster unexpectedly passed away on Thursday, July 7. He was 38 years old and died of a heart attack. Jason's love for his dog, Santana, was known by all who knew him. He recently moved into a new home, extremely happy that his beloved pet would have a large yard to run and play in. He had installed a swimming pool for Santana and was working on the yard fence posts the day before he passed away.

Jason is described as a selfless person who always came to help anyone in need. For the past several years he was a supporter of Baltimore Humane Society's DogFest Walk. Baltimore Humane Society is dedicating the 2016 DogFest Walk to honor Jason's memory and loyal support. Through his efforts, countless homeless pets have been helped.

Last month Webster started his fundraising campaign with a goal of $500 to raise funds for the animals. His family is requesting the community help them reach and surpass Jason's goal by making a donation and then continuing to pass the form around by copying and pasting the link to post online or forward by email. They are also requesting that people also pay their respects by registering and joining the walk the day of DogFest on Sept. 17.

If you can't walk, but would like to donate in Jason's memory, you can make your donation at DogFest.org by clicking on the Jason Webster Memorial link.

New grading policies discourage achievement

After reading the grading guidelines for the 2016-2017 school year, I am convinced this disturbing new policy needs review. As the mother of five, ages 15 to 33, and to two exchange students for four years, our family has experience with the following schools: Pinewood Elementary, Ridgely Middle, Dulaney High School, Baltimore Lutheran (Concordia Prep), Calvert Hall, Loyola and SPSFG. Over the years I have seen many policies implemented - some which were successful and others that failed.

According to the policy, the board has stated that "learning is our core purpose." Although I would agree that this is a primary objective, it is equally important to facilitate character development in our students. When behavior, attendance and homework are not used to calculate grades, we teach our children that the most important thing is the test grade alone and we dismantle character development and personal responsibility. A grade needs to incorporate the entirety, that will involve some subjectivity on behalf of the teachers.

Schools need to partner with parents encouraging respect, motivation and effort. A smart kid who gets good grades and does not work hard does not encourage others, especially one that works really hard but doesn't have the same intellectual ability. Great effort, in any situation, can certainly yield successful people, but no longer in Baltimore County schools. Students who do not test well and work hard are set up for failure with these guidelines.

This grading system actually discourages effort since it basically has no value reflected in the grade. So while learning is our core purpose in school, our ultimate goal should include developing a student's ability and passion to become respectful and successful adults. Grades should reflect the academic achievement and effort (homework, participation in class and attendance). Grades motivate. Giving a check for conduct may be enough motivation for elementary-aged students, but will not continue to motivate students as they get older. The concept that behavior and attendance are not used in calculating grades is very short-sighted. Employees who do not show up for work and have poor behavior are fired.

Why would this not be taught to our kids in school? This is a primary differentiation between the Baltimore County Public School system and other school systems here in Maryland.

All too often, expectations set are the expectations met.

Please consider the long term implications of this policy. As I have heard many times, "We not only have to want what we want, but we also have to want what our wants lead to." Linda Hurka

f

Too often we only hear about the negative things which happen in our communities and the lack of response by our elected officials. But I would like to tell about a positive situation in my community.

I live in the Harbor View neighborhood of Baltimore County. Several weeks ago, one of my neighbors called me about a problem with rat infestation coming from an embankment behind her house. The embankment was overgrown with weeds and bushes. The rats were coming into her and her neighbors' yards and she wanted to know if I knew who to contact to report the problem.

I contacted Bob Long, who is a state delegate for the Sixth District, and spoke to him and his chief aide, Ben. I also mentioned it to Georgia Bartrum, president of the Harbor View Neighborhood Association.

Georgia took pictures of the embankment, which is county-owned. She then contacted the County Inspector to report the problem. Bob Long's office also reported the problem to the County Inspector.

Within a week, the county had mowed the weeds and removed the bushes. Signs were also posted to alert the neighborhood that the county would be spraying to kill the rats.

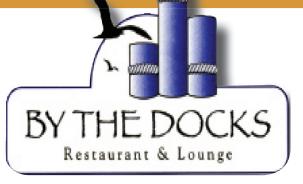

This shows what can be accomplished when people work together and our representatives and agencies are responsive to the community. It also shows that neighborhood associations do provide a valuable service and should be supported by the community.

ENTERTAINMENT

R.I.P. character actor extraordinaire JON POLITO - By Teddy Durgin -

I'm definitely sad over the passing of the great Gene Wilder. "Blazing Saddles," "The Producers," "Young Frankenstein," "Stir Crazy." What a legend! It's not a good feeling to be in a world where that man's no longer breathing. But, let's be honest, Wilder hadn't been on the screen in years. So, it's hard to actually "miss" him. But Thursday's passing of character actor extraordinaire Jon Polito? Now, that one hurts!

Despite being diagnosed with an incurable blood cancer five years ago, Polito continued to act. He'll be in one film ("The Maestro") hitting screens in 2017, and I had just seen him in an episode of "Major Crimes" back in July. He was the kind of guy who would pop up in a movie or a TV show for a scene or two or three and immediately make it cooler... funnier... better. Polito was one of those actors who would show up in a supporting role and you'd immediately smile. You'd most likely say to yourself, "Ahhh... THAT guy!"

That guy had over 200 film and TV credits to his name on the Internet Movie Database. He was never a star. His name never appeared "above the title," as they say. No, his great talent was he could play cop and crook, white collar and blue collar, cuddly and smarmy, with equal flair and believability. So many movie memories come to mind from "Highlander" and "The Rocketeer" to "Stuart Little" and "Flags of Our Fathers." And then there were the half-dozen or so Coen Brothers' movies he appeared in. "Millers Crossing" was probably his meatiest part, playing the gangster Johnny Caspar. But I loved his one scene in "The Big Lebowski," playing a bottom-feeding P.I. who has a run-in with Jeff Bridges' "The Dude."

He acted opposite everyone from Marlon Brando ("The Freshman") to Charlie Sheen (an episode of "Two and a Half Men"). And, yes, he guest-starred on pretty much everything, but most notably such sitcoms as "Seinfeld," "Scrubs," "The Drew Carey Show" and "Modern Family." His turn as jealous, hyper-hotheaded husband Silvio in "The Reverse Peephole" episode of "Seinfeld" is classic and still makes me chuckle just thinking about it.

But being an ol' Baltimorean, my favorite role of his was, of course, as the tragic Detective Steve Crosetti on the early episodes of "Homicide: Life on the Street." The NBC crime drama was filmed almost entirely in Charm City from 1993 to 1999. I loved Crosetti's crazy conspiracy theories about the Lincoln assassination and John Wilkes Booth, his amazement that women rarely bring reading material with them to the toilet and his quirky chemistry with Clark Johnson's Meldrick Lewis. I remember being just shattered after the third season episode titled "Crosetti" where we finally found out the character's fate (Polito was let go by the producers between seasons, and the audience learns in "Crosetti" that the character committed suicide without leaving a note).

I shall miss spontaneously yelling "Crosetti!" in movie theaters and in my screening room at home whenever he would suddenly pop up in a film or TV show. If it happened once over the years, it happened at least a dozen times. And every third or fourth time in the cinema, I'd get someone nearby chuckling at the reference.

Jon Polito was only 65.

Teddy's summer movie re-cap 2016

- By Tedy Durgin -

It's kind of confusing now when the summer movie season actually begins. Growing up in the late 1970s and '80s, it would always start with the Memorial Day weekend. That's right around the time we'd get a new "Star Wars" or "Indiana Jones" movie. Before that, the summer movie season wasn't really much of a thought until around the July 4 holiday. Actually, studios used to think audiences did not go to the movies in the summer, instead preferring to spend their time and money outside at ball games, the beach, fireworks and with their lovely families.

No more! It's really the first week of May that the season begins. It sort of turned back in 2002 when "Spider-Man" opened that week to get a jump on "Attack of the Clones" and has been that way ever since. That's when "Captain America: Civil War" hit this year. Heck, in previous years, we've even had flicks like "The Matrix" and a couple of the "Fast and Furious" actioners debut in cinemas in April and rake in the cash.

For the purposes of consideration for this summer recap, though, I indeed began with the great "Captain America" sequel and ended with the putrid "Mechanic" sequel. It seemed like a long time in between! As always, good recaps and retrospectives come in threes:

Three movies everyone should have seen: 1) "Hell or High Water;" 2) "The Nice Guys;" 3) "Pete's Dragon."

Three movies more people should have seen: 1) "The BFG;" 2) "Ghostbusters;" 3) "Alice Through the Looking Glass."

Three movies nobody should have seen: 1) "Nine Lives;" 2) "Mechanic: Resurrection;" 3) "Independence Day: Resurgence."

Three movies I wish I'd seen but didn't: 1) "Bad Moms;" 2) "Lights Out;" 3) "The Legend of Tarzan."

Three things that, once seen, can't be un-seen: 1) Daniel Radcliffe as a flatulent corpse in "Swiss Army Man;" 2) Groceries having an orgy in "Sausage Party;" 3) Dwayne "The Rock" Johnson as an overweight teenager singing En Vogue's "My Lovin'" while naked in a highschool shower in "Central Intelligence."

Three favorite performances (male): 1) Chris Hemsworth in "Ghostbusters;" 2) Jeff Bridges in "Hell or High Water;" 3) Sam Claflin in "Me Before You."

Three favorite performances (female): 1) Sofia Boutella, "Star Trek Beyond;" 2) Katy Mixon, "Hell or High Water;" 3) Viola Davis in "Suicide Squad."

Three greatest "Holy $#@%!" sequences: 1) The airport battle royale in "Captain America: Civil War;" 2) Quicksilver saving the entire student body of Professor Xavier's School for Gifted Youngsters in "X-Men Apocalypse;" 3) The remade chariot race in "Ben-Hur."

Three favorite lines of dialogue: 1) "Off! Off! Off!" -- sea lions Fluke and Rudder to fellow sea lion Gerald, who just wants to share their rock in "Finding Dory;" 2) "They like to get the landmarks!" -- Jeff Goldblum's David Levinson on the aliens taking out Big Ben and Parliament in "Independence Day: Resurgence;" 3) "This is what they call 'White Man's Intuition!'" -- Jeff Bridges' Texas Ranger to his Mexican-Indian partner, when a hunch turns out to be right in "Hell or High Water."

And finally, Three movies I am most looking forward to next summer: 1) "Dunkirk;" 2) "Spider-Man: Homecoming;" 3) "Wonder Woman."

Sept. 11, 2001 - The day that changed the world forever

- by Senator Johnny Ray Salling (R-6) -Fifteen years later, I remember the horror of 9/11 as though it was yesterday. When I heard that a plane had crashed into the World Trade Center, like most people, I envisioned a small private plane misguided by pilot error.

Within minutes, it became clear that at 8:45 a.m. it was an American Airlines Boeing 767 loaded with 20,000 gallons of jet fuel that crashed into the north tower of the World Trade Center. It created a blazing inferno instantly killing hundreds and trapping hundreds more. And it was no pilot error.

It was the beginning of a terrorist attack by 19 militants of Al-Qaeda. They hijacked four planes. The plan was to fly them into buildings in New York City and Washington, D.C. Eighteen minutes later a second Boeing 767-United Airlines Flight 175 sliced into the South Tower causing a massive explosion.

Neither tower could withstand the heat generated by the jet fuel. The South Tower collapsed at 10:00 a.m. and the North Tower collapsed at 10:30 a.m. Nearly 3,000 people died in the Towers or jumped to their death. More than 400 police and firefighters lost their lives.

At 9:45 a.m. an American Airlines Boeing 757 crashed into the Pentagon military headquarters, taking the lives of Moon Bounce Play Area • Crafts Obstacle Fitness Course 125 military personnel and civilians and all 64 passengers aboard the plane.

In the fourth hijacked plane, United Flight 93, passengers aware of the New York and D.C. attacks fought to overtake the plane. The plane hit the ground in a rural field in western Pennsylvania killing all 45 people aboard.

For days, television recorded the tragedy of families seeking information about their loved ones. In too many cases, there was no information. In the weeks and months of digging through the site, it became clear that there would be no survivors or bodies in the rubble. Body parts retrieved were matched with DNA to identify the dead.

The horror of 9/11 haunts us, but it is very real to those who assisted in the cleanup because hundreds of them have contracted and still struggle with cancer and lung disease from breathing the toxic dust and fumes.

You may wonder why I chose to recite the horrors of 9/11. Why not just have a solemnly worded memorial? I deliberately chose to remind all of us, including me, of the horror etched in our minds. I want 9/11 remembered in all its horror and tragedy because I want to make that memory as sharp and unrelenting as it was fifteen years ago. We owe those lives lost on 9/11 and their families no less.
