Raven players visit new mothers, newborns at Franklin Square

Crockett Gillmore (right) and John Urschel (not pictured) spent a lot of time visiting with new mothers on Monday as part of the Pass It Forward campaign in conjunction with Verizon, which sees members of the team perform random acts of kindness in the community.

- Article & photo by Patrick Taylor -
 With Joe Flacco's big arm leading the way for the Baltimore Ravens, it's safe to say the team knows a thing or two about passing it forward (just ask Mike Wallace). But members of the team - both past and present - are passing it forward in a different way this season.
 On Sept. 8, Verizon and the Baltimore Ravens announced that they would combine forces for the "Pass It Forward" campaign, which is meant to promote the community-based idea that, big or small, every deed counts. On Monday, Sept. 19, they put that partnership into action all around the Baltimore area.

Multiple Ravens players filled up gas tanks in south Baltimore, while others paid for tolls at the Fort McHenry toll plaza. Some hung around the Maryland Zoo in Baltimore, paying admission for those looking spend a day with wild animals. And two, tight end Crockett Gillmore and guard John Urschel, took time to visit new mothers at Franklin Square Hospital in Rosedale.
 "I've never seen babies this small or this new," said Urschel, who stands at 6'3" and weighs in at approximately 300 pounds.
 "Well I just had to deliver one over 10 pounds, so they aren't all that small," quipped one nearby nurse.

 Urschel and Gillmore, along with members of the Ravens' community relations team, visited over a dozen rooms in Franklin Square to meet new mothers and drop off a care package that included a book, baby boots, a beanie, a bottle and a bib.
 "MedStar has had a longtime relationship with the Ravens, and we're always proud to bring them in," said Debra Schindler, regional director of Media and Public Relations for MedStar. "Not only is it exciting for our patients, but for [our staff] as well."

Deckelman, a 'legend' on the water, leaves behind a legacy of helping

- By Devin Crum -

On Thursday afternoon, Sept. 15, Jack "Elvis" Deckelman II, described as a "legend" on the waterfront in eastern Baltimore County by those who knew him, passed away at the age of 71.

Bob Palmer, who along with Deckelman was a founding member of the Marine Trades Association of Baltimore County, said he met Deckelman in 1985 and considered him a very good personal friend who was "always there."

The Deckelman family goes back to about 1930 on eastern Baltimore County waterways, according to Palmer, and have been involved in the marina, marine towing and marine salvage businesses.

Although the business has more competition now, "for a long time he was the only local tower that was there when you needed him," Palmer explained.

"He was a character and a half," Palmer said of Deckelman, who he called "one of the originals on the water." Palmer added, though, that Deckelman was always ready to help others.

Palmer noted endearingly that Deckelman was "a little rough around the edges. But that just comes with being on the waterfront for all those years, I guess," he said.

"If you were a friend of Jack's, you were a friend of a good guy," Palmer commented. "And if you weren't really a friend of his, he'd let you know it," he laughed.

Jeanie Riley, another longtime friend of Deckelman's, said they have been "very dear friends" since they were both teenagers. She pointed out that she remembers when Deckelman's two sons, Jack and Jeff, were born, adding that she has a son of her own just one year younger than Jack.

"[Ours] was a group that just stuck together, through everything," Riley explained, adding that they were always there for each other when they needed something.

She said they had both been born into the marina industry, following in their fathers' footsteps.

"He took it all the way to another leap with the towing business," Riley said.

She also said that if anyone in the neighborhood or on the water ever needed help with anything, Deckelman was always there.

"He didn't know what the word 'no' meant," Riley said. "He did anything to get it done, and that's just the type of man he was."

"That was Jack; Jack was the water," she stated.

Riley also explained that Deckelman's "Elvis" nickname came from his love for Elvis Presley going back to when he was a teenager.

"He idolized Elvis, in no uncertain terms," Riley said.

Deckelman had the Elvis hairstyle, an Elvis Boulevard street tag at his marina, had visited the Graceland estate in Memphis, Tenn., several times and even had an Elvis Christmas tree.

"He could be rough at times, but he had one of the kindest hearts of anybody on the waterfront," Riley affirmed. "He was a gem that's going to really be missed."

Although the Deckelman family could not be reached for comment, Rockaway Beach/Turkey Point Improvement Association Vice President Kevin McDonough said the community mourns Deckelman's loss along with the family.

"When you think of Baltimore County waterfront, you have to think of Jack Deckelman," McDonough stated.

McDonough, who is also involved in organizing the Middle River Fireworks Extravaganza, said Deckelman was always involved in helping with the event and was its "saving grace" this year.

According to McDonough, the company that previously donated the towing for the barge platform from which the fireworks are fired was financially unable to do it this year. And other companies were asking very high prices to get the job done.

But Deckelman stepped up to give them an affordable price and ensure the fireworks could go on, McDonough said.

McDonough also referenced Deckelman's quick action to prevent further disaster in 2013 when a boat caught fire at Baltimore Yacht Club.

In that incident, three boaters had neglected to turn off their boat's ignition while refueling which resulted in an explosion, throwing all three into the water. Deckelman, who arrived on-scene before police, firefighters or U.S. Coast Guard personnel, pushed the flaming vessel out into Sue Creek before it could drift into other boats docked at BYC and potentially spread the blaze.

"Had it not been for Jack's quick thinking, it could have been something that was really fatal," McDonough commented. "He was not only a local legend, but a bit of a local hero too."

"The impact that he had in the little amount of time that I knew him was quite impressive," McDonough continued. "I can guarantee that his legacy will live on in eastern Baltimore County for decades to come."

Jack Deckelman II leaves behind his loving companion of many years, Laura Wilmoth; two children, Jack III and Jeffrey; brother, Alan "Mort" Deckelman; several grandchildren and many other loving relatives and friends.

Communities have mixed feelings about Sixth District CZMP decisions

- By Devin Crum -

The Baltimore County Council voted on Aug. 30 to finalize their decisions on new zoning designations around the county. And ever since, communities throughout the seven councilmanic districts have been poring over those decisions to digest exactly what was done.

In the Sixth District - which includes Middle River, White Marsh, southern Perry Hall, Overlea, and parts of Rosedale and is represented by Councilwoman Cathy Bevins - some zoning change requests were granted, opening the door for new development, and others were not.

Bevins has been criticized by some since the 2012 Comprehensive Zoning Map Process (CZMP) for allowing more development through higher density zoning decisions in the district.

But she has maintained that she visits each property raised as an issue during the year-long CZMP and assesses them in an effort to make appropriate decisions for smart growth. And much of the criticism results from frustration over recently begun development projects that were actually approved before Bevins was elected in 2010.

One of the highest-profile zoning issues raised during this year's CZMP was the nearly 80-acre property along Philadelphia Road in White Marsh slated as the future site of the Paragon Outlets.

Paragon Outlets White Marsh Center, LLC requested this year that their property be changed from a light manufacturing zoning designation to Business Major to allow the outlet mall by right, regardless of the pending ballot referendum. Bevins obliged, allowing the project to move forward, stating that the property was "designed for retail."

"It was designed for exactly what's happening at the Avenue [at White Marsh] and at White Marsh Mall and along Campbell Boulevard," she said. "I only live a couple of miles from it, so if I was afraid to have the traffic and the people I wouldn't have wanted to do it."

Bowleys Quarters resident Allen Robertson noted at the Sept. 7 meeting of the Essex-Middle River Civic Council, however, that a petition drive could be planned to put the zoning decisions on the 2018 ballot in order to stop the new outlet mall from proceeding.

Another property for which some expressed opposition to a zoning change was the site of the Fullerton Manor Bingo building on Belair Road in the Overlea-Fullerton area.

Royal Farms requested a change to BL-AS which allows for a convenience store-type business with gas pumps. Bevins granted the change over the objections of some neighbors who were concerned about traffic and other issues.

She justified her decision in that several community associations in the area wrote letters of support for the project and that it would hopefully bring about some revitalization of the Belair Road corridor.

"We're trying to revitalize Belair Road," Bevins explained. "We need some new, shining businesses; we need to create some jobs."

"The [Royal] Farms store is something that, they give back to the community, they give back to the schools, it's a business that does not create traffic," she continued. - see ZONING on page 7 -

Schindler described the visit as "a big morale boost" for the staff to get a visit for the Ravens. She said that in the past Raven players and cheerleaders have visited those receiving cancer treatment and for patients in the orthopedic wing.
"This opportunity to have them come and visit our mothers and babies is new," said Schindler. "Of course, who can't resist our new babies. It's always a happy time in there for the moms and this just adds to it."
The Pass It Forward campaign will be running through December, and the Ravens are asking members of the community to do their part as well, passing along kindness whenever possible. Baltimoreans are encouraged to share their own personal random acts of kindness using the hashtags #VerizonBAL and #RavensFlock.
"The Baltimore Ravens have a strong commitment to making a difference in our community. Pass It Forward is a great opportunity to inspire more kindness and generosity in the Baltimore region," says Dick Cass, president of the Baltimore Ravens. "We are beyond excited to team with our long-time partner Verizon Wireless to bring the Pass It Forward campaign to Baltimore."

ued. "Those types of businesses serve the traffic already on the corridor."

Bevins also denied some requests in her district, such as on the 32-acre Stokers Farm property south of Bird River Road in Middle River. A developer had requested DR 16 on that property which would have allowed up to 524 residences on the property in the form of apartments. The councilwoman denied the request, calling it too dense for the area.

She also granted no change for a 7.5-acre property abutting the Bowerman-Loreley Beach community in White Marsh where a developer intended to build nearly 80 townhomes. Instead, Bevins announced that she has been able to secure Program Open Space funding to preserve the land as public open space.

On other properties, Bevins compromised between the community and a property owner's request. For instance, at an 11.7-acre property on Leland Avenue in Middle River, the developer had asked for a zoning change from light manufacturing to DR 16, which would allow up to 187 homes to be built. Bevins granted a zoning of DR 3.5 instead, allowing up to 40 homes on the undeveloped parcel.

And at the site of Vince's Auto Parts in White Marsh, a developer had requested a zoning of DR 10.5 on the 32-acre site, but was granted DR 5.5. This decision allows 178 homes to be built instead of 340, and the site will undergo an environmental clean-up, Bevins said.

EMRCC President Bob Bendler said they got some of what they wanted from the CZMP, but not all. In general, they were looking to restrict increased housing density in the district and focus development in areas that are equipped to handle it.

The organization expressed concern over the decisions on three properties in particular because of density and traffic concerns.

On two properties along Mohrs Lane in Nottingham near Philadelphia Road, the owners had requested zoning changes to Business Major with the intent of putting in new retail centers at the sites. But the EMRCC membership is concerned about the traffic problems that could arise since the Maryland State Highway Administration currently has no budget for expanding Philadelphia Road in that area.

The third site, a total of about 29 acres along Rossville

Boulevard in Rosedale, requested and was granted a change to OR2, which allows office space as well as housing up to 10.5 units per acre.

Bevins said the plan there is for townhomes, with the potential for professional office buildings, noting that CCBC and Franklin Square hospital - the county's second-largest employer with over 3,400 employees - are both "bursting at the seams."

She explained that some hospital employees work up to 14-hour shifts and want to be able to get home in a short amount of time, but are not interested in renting anything already available in the area.

Bevins also pointed out that the property falls under the purview of the South Perry Hall Improvement Association, which is very active with zoning issues and did not oppose the decision.

MDE gives update on oil leak at North Point Government Center

- by Patrick Taylor -

Members of the Maryland Department of the Environment (MDE) stopped by the Eastfield-Stanbrook Civic Association (ESCA) meeting on Tuesday, Sept. 6, to give an update on an oil spill that was leaking into Lynch Cove.

Back in February, residents in the Eastfield-Stanbrook community noticed that the water in Lynch Cove in Dundalk had been emitting a petrol odor and had a grayish color. This was reported to the MDE, according to Drew Miller and Chris Ralston, who work in the oil control division of the state agency.

Miller stated that it was investigated two days later, but that nothing could be found. Baltimore County had also investigated the issue and couldn't find anything wrong with the water. On Feb. 20, an emergency response team was sent out to Lynch Cove and a heavy sheen was detected.

It was around this time that it became apparent there might be an issue with the underground oil tanks that provide heat to the North Point Government Center building. Baltimore County conducted a tightness test on the tanks and determined that things were up to par. But, according to Miller, the MDE took a look at the test and required Baltimore County to retest the tightness in front of MDE inspectors. The tank inspection failed and was immediately shut down.

On Feb. 25, all oil was removed from the underground tanks and put in above ground tanks. After that, oil stopped leaking into Lynch Cove. By Feb. 29, it was determined that all of the tanks would have to be removed from underground. The removal took place on March 10.

A month later, a report calling for additional testing was filed, and on Aug. 11 and 12, soil and water samples were taken from the area. According to Miller, a "couple borings did have elevated levels of petroleum, but the residual impact is still being addressed.

Miller told members of the ESCA that when the tanks were dug out, it was discovered that corroding pipes were leaking oil directly into a terracotta pipe which led to a storm drain which led directly into Lynch Cove.

"This was just the perfect storm of circumstances," said Miller.

A tracer dye test showed that it took just nine minutes for fluid to get from the terracotta pipe out to Lynch Cove.

At one point early in the process back in February, a boom was placed on the drain that leads to Lynch Cove. The MDE thought that it was put in place by Baltimore County, but in actuality it was placed by a local resident who managed to get an absorbent sock, known as a sorbet boom from a fire station. But the boom didn't stretch across the length of the drain, so oil from the tanks was basically just flowing around it. Miller stated that Baltimore County had been ordered to maintain the boom, and that he believed that it was in place for a while as the leakage occurred. But residents claimed that just days after being installed, the sock washed up onshore.

Many in attendance questioned whether Baltimore County would face any type of punishment for the spill, and Ralston noted that the MDE is evaluating what punitive measures to take. One resident claimed that Baltimore County told her that the community was responsible for cleaning up garbage around Lynch Cove, at which point Ralston noted that if the garbage had been touched by oil, the onus was one Baltimore County to clean it up.

"Baltimore County is responsible for cleanup of everything the oil touches since the spill originated from their land," said Ralston.

The effects of the spill are still being determined, but Ralston and Miller remained optimistic that little damage was done.

"Usually with spills like this, it takes a long time to figure out that there's something going on," said Ralston. "But we think this was caught pretty early. But if you have any concerns in the future, you can call the 24-hour tip line at 1-866-633-4686."

Bridget Jones gains a baby but loses the baby fat... and charm

- By Teddy Durgin -

A lot has changed in the 15 years since Renee Zellweger famously put on 30 lbs and adopted a British accent to play the title character in "Bridget Jones's Diary." The world has changed. Political leaders have changed. Zellweger's face has changed. But what she and director Sharon Maguire are trying to do with the new "Bridget Jones's Baby" is give the audience a sense of comfort and familiarity. On that level, the film works. On almost every other level? Like its title character, this sequel is a mess.

Zellweger was nominated for an Oscar in 2001 for her delightful turn as the boozy, klutzy Bridget Jones, who stumbles into a love triangle involving stuffy attorney Mark Darcy (Colin Firth) and rakish playboy Daniel Cleaver (Hugh Grant). They were legitimately funny characters, and all three performers were the consummate rom-com actors. The sequel a few years later felt more contrived, putting Bridget in a Thai prison. But eventually she got out and agreed to marry Darcy, catching the bouquet at her parents' wedding vows renewal ceremony.

More than a decade later, Bridget is... eh, still single, still boozy, but now reeling from Darcy having married another and Daniel being out of the picture completely. But all is not entirely the same. Bridget now has her dream job of producing a daily TV program called "Hard News" and has finally gotten down to what she describes as her "ideal weight."

I have to say, I found it a bit disappointing that Bridget no longer has her curves. The look of Bridget Jones was one of the most endearing things about her. I get it. The target audience comes to see a film like "Bridget Jones's Baby" for the wish-fulfillment fantasy. So, Bridget's now emaciated and the new man in her life can't be a divorced, fortysomething schlub with two kids he sees every other weekend. He's a hunky American billionaire played by McDreamy himself, Patrick Dempsey, who's never been married, has no kids and attends outdoor music festivals by himself.

Yes, in the 15 years since the original film hit, the U.K. has apparently been reorganized. There's England... Ireland... Scotland... and... oh, a new, little isle just off the coast called Fantasyland.

Dempsey is likable, but he's NO Hugh Grant. Even worse, the screenwriting team doesn't quite know whether to make Dempsey's Jack a nice-guy romantic or a calculating, formidable rival to Firth's Darcy who re-enters the picture and announces he and his wife are divorcing. Bridget ends up sleeping with both and becoming pregnant. While the film draws out the "Who's the Daddy?" dilemma until the very final scene, at least Bridget doesn't keep both men in the dark for very long that either one might be the proud papa.

Snowden finds Stone back in near-top conspiracy form

- By Teddy Durgin -

Every once in a while you realize something you've known for a long time, but just never really acknowledged. So here it goes: Joseph Gordon-Levitt is a REALLY good actor! Ah, this being a review of Oliver Stone's "Snowden," you thought I was gonna say something about the military-industrial complex run wild, right? About government's invasion of our privacies, Orwell's Big Brother future made real? Nah. I pretty much focus on writing and directing and acting. And that's what I noticed watching "Snowden." Gordon-Levitt's acting - he has become effortlessly good on screen.

He could easily have been one of those child actors who had his big TV series - in this case, "3rd Rock From the Sun" - and then faded into "Where are they now?" obscurity. But before that show, he had already proven his young acting chops in films like "Angels in the Outfield" and "A River Runs Through It." After the sitcom was over, he pursued work in independent films like "Brick" and "The Lookout" that grew him up in the eyes of casting directors and transitioned him into bigger-budget fare.

In "Snowden," Gordon-Levitt's innate likability smoothes over the "Is he a patriot/Is he a traitor?" debates among audience members and makes the film extremely watchable for both sides of that divide. Does director/co-screenwriter Oliver Stone take a side? Of course he does! He's Oliver Stone. He loves Edward Snowden, the young CIA insider who blew the whistle on a massive intelligence gathering apparatus that had the capability of hacking into every cell phone, laptop, e-mail and social media account on the planet. If you're looking for "fair and balanced," you're not going to find it here. In fact, you're really not going to find it anywhere these days. Enjoy the downward spiral.

This flick doesn't have the outraged passion of Stone's "JFK" or "Born on the Fourth of July." There's really nothing to uncover here, because everything seemingly has been uncovered and out there for public consumption since London's The Guardian published its series of articles in early summer of 2013. Stone is more content to chronicle the chain of events, using Hollywood A-list actors to dramatize the historical record. On that level, his film is a success. It does a good job showing Snowden's transformation from a young idealist eager to serve his country to a jaded operative appalled at the overreach he finds once on "the inside."

I will say the film lacks a strong central seduction dynamic a la Gordon Gekko/Bud Fox in "Wall Street." It comes close in the form of CIA puppeteer Corbin O'Brian (Rhys Ifans), who recruits Snowden, gives him enough of the truth to make him believe he's getting the whole truth, then sends him out into the cold. Ifans is strong early in the film, but then is only a sporadic presence for the rest of it. And he's really missed when he's not on screen.

Stone is so good in the "insider" scenes, it eventually grates on the audience how much time he spends on Snowden's moribund relationship with his girlfriend, Lindsay (Shailene Woodley), who drifts between lovey-dovey support of her man and teary "We're not communicating!" melodrama. Imagine if half of "JFK" was devoted to Jim Garrison's (Kevin Costner) trying to keep his marriage to Mrs. Garrison (Sissy Spacek) together at the expense of all the great shadowy conspiracy junk.

Overall, though, "Snowden" is solid. It tells a story that is still ongoing, and the screenplay by Stone and Kieran Fitzgerald is very adept at making computer jargon and hacker technobabble interesting and fairly easy to grasp.

Did I have an opinion of Snowden going in? Did I have a different one by the end? Honestly, when all this stuff came out in the press, I'd seen so many conspiracy movies that I just pretty much assumed the government was doing all that stuff already. To paraphrase Woody Allen, "I'd still rather live in this time than any other... mostly for the antibiotics."

"Snowden" is rated R for some sensuality and nudity.

JONES

Meanwhile, the subplots of the film never quite come together, like the one about Darcy defending some feminist punk-rock band and their free speech rights or Bridget and her staff facing possible age discrimination at the TV station when new, younger leadership takes over.

So, what does work? The chemistry between Zellweger and Firth. It's still there. It's still movie magic. Also, Emma Thompson (who co-wrote the screenplay) appears in a supporting role as Bridget's baby doctor, and her dry humor and comic timing are spot-on.

I just wish they had moved Bridget and Darcy into a more age-appropriate plot.

They were clearly headed to the altar at the end of the second film. Why not pick up the story a decade later, their 10-year marriage needing a spark, and a guy like Jack providing temptation. What WOULD Bridget be like as a mother? Why not put her in a smart workplace comedy in which she does find herself out-of-step with a younger demographic nipping at her heels and all of her insecurities come to the fore? Maybe there will be a fourth film that will pick up these strands. For now, the diehard fans of "Bridget Jones" have this film. But it's only for the diehards.

"Bridget Jones's Baby" is rated R for language, sex references and nudity.

Middle River man charged with hit-and-run

A Baltimore County man was charged last night in connection with a serious hit-and-run of a teen-age pedestrian following a two-week investigation by Troopers from the Maryland State Police – Bel Air Barrack.

Helder Geovany Nataren Perdomo, 20, of the 800 block of Maple Crest Drive in Middle River, was being held at the Harford County Detention Center pending an initial appearance before a District Court Commissioner. Perdomo faces the charge of failure to remain at the scene of personal injury collision and other traffic infractions stemming from the collision on Aug. 29.

As a result of the troopers' investigation, Perdomo was identified as the driver of a dark sedan that struck a teen-age girl in the 1100 block of Baldwin Mill Road in Jarrettsville. The teen, who was transported to Upper Chesapeake Medical Center in Bel Air, was treated and released for non-life-threatening injuries from the crash, which occurred shortly before 5 p.m. The hit-and-run crash involving the 15-year-old girl was particularly alarming since it occurred during the first week of school for students in Harford County.

Several witnesses tentatively identified the striking vehicle as a dark-colored, possibly navy blue, BMW four-door passenger vehicle. Witnesses told troopers the car was manufactured between 2000 and 2008; it also featured tinted windows. Witnesses advised the vehicle had one occupant, the operator, at the time of the crash. They told troopers the operator never slowed down after striking the teen and quickly fled.

Troopers conducted numerous interviews and an intense canvass, which led them to a business in the 3800 block of Norrisville Road in Jarrettsville. At the business, which was less than one mile from the crash scene, troopers found Perdomo and the striking vehicle. Troopers learned Perdomo worked for a business in the Jarrettsville area. Assistance from the community helped troopers locate Perdomo and his 2001 BMW 325i.

Police investigate street robbery in Essex

The Baltimore County Police Department is seeking the public's assistance in identifying two suspects responsible for an Aug. 24 street robbery in Essex.

The investigation has indicated that sometime between 2 and 2:45 a.m. on Aug. 24, a 21-year-old man left the Royal Farms store in the 1600 block of Middleborough Road in Essex after making a purchase. He walked up Middleborough Road and was approaching Hilltop Avenue when he was approached by two suspects. The suspects pointed handguns at him and demanded money and his cell phone. The suspects took the victim's cell phone, money, and box of Hot Pockets before fleeing the scene.

This incident is being investigated by the Precinct 11 Investigative Services Team. Anyone with information is asked to call police at 410-887-0230 or Metro Crime Stoppers at 1-866-7LOCKUP.

Precinct 11/Essex

First Degree Assault: Officers from the Essex precinct responded to a call at the intersection of Transverse Court and Middle River Road on Sept. 18. At 12:35 a.m., the victim was approached by three suspects in a vehicle. One of the suspects displayed a handgun while the other two suspects went through the victim's pockets and stole his cash. The suspects then fled in the vehicle.

First Degree Burglary: Officers were called to the 300 block of Retford Way in Middle River on Sept. 17 in response to a burglary. Sometime between 8 a.m. and 8:42 p.m., an unknown suspect entered the residence through an unsecured sliding door. The suspect stole a playstation, six games and two controllers.

Woman injured in Dundalk shooting

The Baltimore County Police Department has identified the suspect charged in connection with a Sunday afternoon shooting in Dundalk as 50-year-old Gary Martin Patterson Sr. of the 4000 block of Berlin Avenue in Brooklyn. Patterson has been charged with two counts of attempted first-degree murder, home invasion, and related charges. He is being held without bail at the Baltimore County Detention Center.

The investigation into this incident has indicated that just before 1 p.m. September 19, Patterson went to the home of his 39-year-old estranged girlfriend in the 4000 block of St. Monica Drive in Dundalk. He broke into the home through a front window, located her, and shot her multiple times. Another person in the home fought with Patterson, and was able to get the gun away from him.

The woman that Patterson shot was taken to an area hospital for treatment and is expected to survive.

Patterson was located outside the home, taken into custody, and treated for injuries he received during the fight with the other person in the home.

Investigators discovered that Patterson is a police officer with the Department of Veteran Affairs.

Current crime trends

Since Sept. 4, there have been three commercial burglaries along the Shipping Place corridor in the Dundalk Precinct. Cases occurred during early morning hours. Front and side window glass was broken in all cases. Items taken include registers and money. Anyone with information regarding these incidents is urged to contact Baltimore County police.

Prepare vehicles for harsh weather

As the seasons change, motorists must take steps to safeguard their vehicles, especially when the season changes from fall to winter. Each winter, many vehicles are subjected to sub-zero temperatures, snowfall and icy roads, and such conditions can take their toll on vehicles over time. Taking steps to prepare vehicles for winter weather is a vital step that can make cars and trucks safer for drivers and their passengers.

Battery

Old batteries should be replaced before winter begins. Without a strong, properly functioning battery, engines cannot turn over. Most batteries last between three and five years. However, extreme cold can compromise batteries, especially those that have been around awhile. Batteries are made up of acid and water, and cold temperatures can freeze the water, thereby affecting battery performance. According to AAA's Automotive Research Center, at 32°F, the average battery loses 35 percent of its strength.

Newer batteries can be protected by starting the vehicle each day to warm up and recharge the battery. Let the car run for at least 10 minutes if you cannot take an extended drive.

Exterior maintenance

Keeping a car waxed and sealed can help maintain a durable exterior finish. This includes not only the paint, but the rubber and vinyl parts of the car's exterior.

Winter is a good time to switch to a heavy-duty synthetic wax that can shield against water and road salts. High-quality sealants can be used on bumpers, trim and rubber door seals as added protection. Speak with an automotive retailer or even the car dealership if you are unsure which products will make your car's parts most durable for winter weather.

Do not stop washing your car just because the weather is cold. Slushy, wet roads and snow-melting salts can speed up the formation of rust or other decay on the undercarriage of the vehicle. These materials will need to be periodically cleaned off. Flush the underside of the vehicle whenever possible, taking advantage of any dry, slightly warmer days.

Tire pressure

According to the automotive retailer Pep Boys, vehicle tires lose a pound of air pressure for every 10-degree drop in temperature. Many modern cars will alert to changes in air pressure, and drivers should be diligent in maintaining the proper tire pressure. Fuel economy as well as handling ability can decline when tires are not inflated properly. Tires can be refilled at many gas stations for little cost.

Wipers

Visibility is key in hazardous weather conditions, and keeping the windshield clean is a priority. This means ensuring there is enough windshield wiper fluid in the car and that it is a product that will not freeze.

Wiper blades can freeze and crack in the winter. Older blades may be more susceptible to damage. It's a worthy investment to replace existing wiper blades at the start of each winter. Cold weather requires drivers to amp up their vehicle maintenance routines. Consult with a mechanic or automotive retailer for more ideas and products that can help your vehicles operate safely and efficiently this winter.

Indicators it's time for an air filter change

Vehicle maintenance can protect drivers' investments and help their automobiles run efficiently. When operating at optimal capacity, an air filter improves fuel efficiency while ensuring vehicles accelerate smoothly without taxing the engine. But when air filters are clogged, fuel efficiency is reduced and emissions are increased. Drivers can check their owners' manuals to determine the recommended intervals to replace air filters, but the following are a handful of indicators that suggest it's time for a change.

- Gas mileage: Unless you just purchased your vehicle, you likely know how many miles you can drive on a full tank of gas. If that gas mileage is suddenly slipping and you find yourself visiting the filling station more frequently, then it might be time to replace your air filter.

- Engine light: Drivers may be alerted to engine issues when the "Check engine" lights up on the vehicle's dashboard. This light may come on to indicate a problem with the air filter, as clogged air filters reduce air flow to the engine, resulting in an imbalanced air-fuel mixture that adversely affects the engine.

- Starting and idling problems: Vehicles sometimes don't start up as smoothly as they once did, and drivers may also notice vehicles are not idling smoothly. These symptoms may indicate misfiring spark plugs that are being polluted (and made less effective) by a dirty air filter that is reducing the flow of air to the engine.

- Acceleration difficulties: Automobiles that are operating at peak capacity accelerate quickly. But dirty, worn out air filters adversely affect acceleration. Drivers who notice that their cars are struggling to accelerate when stoplights turn green or on highways may need to replace their vehicles' air filters.

WATER PUMP FAILURE

If you notice a coolant leak that seems to be coming from behind the timing belt cover on the engine, or you notice that your temperature gauge is beginning to fluctuate, you may need to replace the water pump. This impeller pump, which is usually located under the timing belt cover on the side of the engine, is responsible for circulating coolant through the engine that absorbs the heat produced by combustion. The pump is driven by the engine's drive belt. If this belt becomes loose or worn, or breaks, the pump stops working and the engine will soon follow unless immediate action is taken. Water pumps usually last about 90,000 to 120,000 miles, but may fail sooner.

A worn water pump can have disastrous consequences, leaving you stranded on the side of the road with an overheated engine. That's why you should bring your car in for regular preventive care. Our ASE-certified technicians can catch a small problem, like an aging water pump, before it turns into a giant headache, with even bigger repair bills. Let us get you back on the road.

Open Mon.-Fri. 7:30-5. We fix check engine lights!

HINT: If a low-pitched grinding noise is coming from under the hood, it may be an indication that the water pump bearing is going bad.

Choose the right tire for the season

Tires undergo a lot of wear and tear, which only highlights the importance of proper tire maintenance. But many drivers do not give tires a passing thought until there is a problem. Also, some drivers think that all tires are the same, failing to realize that the kind of tires vehicles need depends on various factors. In addition to the size and type of vehicle, drivers should consider the type of driving they do and the driving conditions they routinely encounter before choosing tires for their vehicles. The following are descriptions of common tire types and the conditions in which they might make the best fit.

All-season

All-season tires provide all-season versatility, good wear and ride comfort. They can be dependable tires and offer light snow traction as well.

All-season tires provide adequate protection in many conditions, but do not offer specific benefits in any one area. They're likely to be satisfactory for a vast array of drivers. All-season tires are typically offered in touring and passenger types. Touring will provide lower road noise and better handling, while passenger varieties offer a smooth ride and longevity.

Summer tires

Summer tires are designed to offer traction and maneuverability in warm weather. Orbital grooves and complex treads maximize traction in hot, humid weather. If you live in an area where the temperature is consistently steamy, summer tires may be a good investment.

Winter tires

A safety precaution for many people who live where conditions often include snow, ice and cold weather, winter tires can be lifesavers. These tires are designed using several different types of rubber, and feature tread designs that maximize traction during inclement conditions. Studdable winter tires provide the extra security of added studs to enhance traction on ice. Performance winter tires offer better dry road handling, but traction on snow and ice may be compromised.

Performance tires

Performance tires offer a sports car feel. These are meant for drivers who want to feel the road and increase low-speed traction. The higher the level of performance, the increased level of handling and stability at high speeds.

Truck tires

Trucks, pickups and SUVs also have a variety of tire types. There are off-road varieties, which will offer an aggressive tread design for off-road traction and other obstacles. Light truck tires help provide durability and traction. Specially designed SUV tires may be large, but can still offer comfort-focused applications designed for on-road driving. Drivers looking for better performance from their tires should speak with a tire retailer about the options available to them.

How to prevent car theft

Few motorists think much about preventing vehicle theft, until their cars are stolen. According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, a vehicle is stolen every 44 seconds in the United States. Many of those are recovered, but being victimized by car thieves can be a nervewracking and unsettling experience for car owners. While car thefts are unpredictable, they can be prevented. While even the most proactive anti-theft car owner can be victimized by car thieves, there are ways to reduce that risk.

- Avoid the most stolen vehicle makes. The 2016 "Hot Wheels" report from the National Insurance Crime Bureau lists the most frequently stolen vehicles from 2015, the most recent year for reporting. These include: the 1997, 1996 & 1997 Honda Accord; 1998 & 2000 Honda Civic; 2005 & 2006 Ford F-Series pickup truck; 2004 & 2005 Chevrolet full-size pickup; and the 2014 Toyota Camry.

- Lock your car. Keep your vehicle locked at all times, even when driving. Many cars are stolen while left unlocked, even though power locks now require just the push of a button to lock the entire vehicle. Similarly, close all windows and the sunroof when the car is parked.

- Keep the vehicle registration in your wallet. Geico notes that car thieves can escape arrest if they can produce the vehicle's registration upon being pulled over. Keep your registration out of the car and on your person.

- Keep track of your keys. Do not hide a car key outside of the vehicle in the event you get locked out of your car. Thieves are aware of this trick and can steal your car.

- Keep valuables out of sight. Do not leave money, jewelry, electronics, or any other valuable items in plain sight in the car. Remove them promptly, or keep them in a trunk or under a cargo bed so they're not visible to thieves.

- Park in well-lit, heavily trafficked areas. Parking in a well-lit area can deter criminals, but parking close to building entrances and near parking lot security cameras adds extra layers of protection. If you must park in a parking garage, try to park close to the attendant.

- Employ an anti-theft device. Anti-theft devices include vehicle immobilizer systems and car alarms. Insurance companies may discount premiums for vehicles that are equipped with anti-theft devices.

- Use technological recovery tools. GPS technology can pinpoint your car if it is stolen and send that information to law enforcement officials. Some of these devices also can slow down vehicles or remotely block the car's ignition switch.

Motorists can take an active role in preventing car theft and safeguarding their automotive investments.

Dundalk rebounds as Overlea and Chesapeake fall

- by Patrick Taylor -

Last week's loss to Milford Mill put the Dundalk Owls in a bit of a tricky situation. Despite graduating a number of key players from last year's 3A state finalist team, the Owls looked very much like they'd be able to ride on the back of Darrius Sample for a trip back to the postseason.

The next five games for Dundalk are games that they should win very handily, but the final two games of the season are tough competitions against Franklin and Perry Hall, respectively.

Those two games will be tough for the Owls for many different reasons. First and foremost, both teams are very strong, which comes as no surprise. But besides being good, they'll be playing with a chip on their shoulder. Dundalk played a big part in keeping Perry Hall out of the post season last year, beating the Gators 55 - 34. They followed that by losing the season finale to Franklin, but they got their revenge in a more meaningful postseason game. And you better believe Franklin hasn't forgotten. Finally, Dundalk had the advantage of hosting both Franklin and Perry Hall to end the season last year. This year, the Owls will have to travel for their final two contests.

Dundalk's loss to Milford Mill means that they can't slip up for the rest of the season. They have the coaching and the talent to pull it off, but things certainly aren't looking too great for the Owls, despite sitting at 2 - 1 and despite the fact that there's still a lot of football to be played.

Now, anything can happen between now and Oct. 28 when Dundalk is slated to take on Franklin. In the past we've seen injuries take their toll on teams; we've seen teams that lack depth start to get tired; we've even seen dynamic and important players suspended for violating team rules. So is it the end of the world for Dundalk? Not quite. But should Dundalk slip up in any of their upcoming contests, this season will be shorter than they hoped.

The Owls took on Lansdowne on Friday evening, and they looked sharp on both sides of the ball against the lowly Vikings, walking away with a big 39 - 0 victory.

Sample led the way for Dundalk, throwing for 172 yards and adding 76 more on the ground. He also put up two touchdowns through the air and added two more on the ground. Running back Isaiah Antol continued to have a strong season behind the offensive line, racking up 69 yards on just 11 carries and adding two touchdowns.

While he did well to lead the team to a victory, Sample also had quite a few wayward passes that ended up in the arms of the Vikings. And while his four interceptions may seem like not much was going on in the passing game, Sample actually looked pretty solid throwing the ball. Granted, there was only a small number of shots taken downfield.

But what was good news for the Owls was that they were able to get their running backs involved on a variety of plays - screens, little dump offs, wheel routes, etc. - instead of just the usual pounding. Having backs with the ability to receive is key, and Dundalk has that in spades. No matter who they rotate in, they always have that safety valve.

But where Dundalk looked really good was on the defensive side of things. Besides shutting out Lansdowne, the Owls defense made a lot of big plays.

The defensive line was fierce all game, racking up multiple sacks and quarterback pressures. They also did well finding holes in the offensive line to plug up the run, picking up quite a few tackles for loss.

The linebacking unit did well in underneath coverage and also did well to clean up anything that happened to make its way past the line.

But the real accolades have to go to the defensive backs, who pulled down interception after interception. Not only that but their tight coverage of Lansdowne receivers provided a lot of time for the defensive line to be disruptive up front.

The Owls have a mountain to climb the rest of the season, but they certainly have the ability to get back to the postseason despite their loss to Milford. This weekend, Dundalk will take on the Patapsco Patriots for a battle of Dundalk. The game will be played at Patapsco at 1 p.m. on Saturday, Sept. 24.

Around the league

The dream beginning ended for Chesapeake on Friday afternoon, as the Bayhawks were upended by Randallstown by a score of 14 - 0. Chesapeake's defensive unit has looked strong all year, and that continued on Friday. However, their offense has been sluggish at best.

Overlea is another team who had their perfect season dashed, losing to Bel Air on Saturday by a score of 39 - 0. Like Chesapeake, this team is strong defensively but a bit lacking on the offensive side of things. That should make things interesting when these two teams face off this weekend. My prediction - neither team scores and they're engaged in a back-and-forth game for the rest of eternity. But realistically, Overlea has the offensive advantage here and should come out with a win.

Elsewhere, Eastern Tech couldn't get things straight against Hereford, falling 14 - 0. Sparrows Point upended Loch Raven by a score of 23 - 12, while Perry Hall just managed to hold onto a 24 - 22 win over Kenwood. Finally, Patapsco took down Towson in overtime, winning 20 - 14.

Long Beach Oyster House rebrands, looks forward to winter months

- Article & photo by Devin Crum -

Long Beach Oyster House (formerly Long Beach Restaurant and Tavern) has a new owner who has already given the restaurant's menu a makeover, and is working on some physical upgrades as well.

Manager Jason Slep, who, with his wife, purchased Long Beach back in February, has a lot of experience in the restaurant and bar industry and wanted to create a unique identity for the establishment.

A coworker and I decided to visit Long Beach for lunch recently to check out the new menu and we could not have been happier with our choice.

Now, being an oyster house, oysters will be a big part of the restaurant's menu and brand going forward. Slep even revealed that he is considering converting the back of the upstairs bar to an oyster raw bar and display case. So naturally, we had to sample some of their offerings.

My coworker was not much for oysters, so I slurped them all down myself, trying out four of their varieties. All were delicious, especially when garnished with Long Beach's spicy cocktail sauce. But being a bigger fan of the saltier varieties, the locals (being somewhat salty from our brackish water) and the Salt Points (extra salty) really stuck in my mind.

The menu offers several varieties ranging from somewhat sweet to salty for all the oyster connoisseurs out there. And if you're not big on them, you'll still find something to love on Long Beach's excellent menu.

Following the oysters, we started off with the Fire-

Long Beach has a wide variety of oysters for those who love them, and a great menu for those who don't.

cracker Shrimp and the Ahi Tuna Salad, as well as some Crab Avocado Dip.

As you might guess from the name, the Firecracker Shrimp had a kick of spicy heat as the breaded, fried and glazed shrimp were served with fresh jalapeños in a lettuce bowl. But if you can get past the heat (or even enjoy it, like me), there is a honey-like sweetness to the glaze as well which gives it great balance.

The Crab Avocado Dip was a great starter as well with its fresh, light flavors of avocado, crab and corn salsa to wake up the taste buds and get the digestion started.

And although it was still the beginning of the meal, the Ahi Tuna Salad was off to an early lead as my favorite dish. It began as a standard garden salad, but added in artichoke hearts, roasted red peppers and seared sushi-grade ahi tuna and finished with a cucumber wasabi dressing. The fresh, cool tastes of the vegetables combined with the savory tuna flavors make it a great dish for the summer and fall seasons.

The next dish turned out to be my coworker's favorite with its conventional style and local flair. I'm speaking, of course, of the Maryland Melt, which is Long Beach's take on a traditional grilled cheese sandwich. The difference, though, is that this one adds in tomatoes, crab meat and bacon, which flowed out the sides with each spectacular bite.

Next up were the fabulous Mahi Tacos, consisting of blackened mahi mahi on mini tortillas, with a mango salsa and a creamy sauce drizzled on top. Warm and fresh, they were the perfect mix of sweet and savory - great if you're looking for a beachy meal at home.

And finally, the Chicken Monte Blanco capped off our meal. Although somewhat uncharacteristic of the rest of the meal, it seemed to me more the type of dish you might find in an upscale restaurant. The white wine sauce with the pasta, the chicken and the crab with artichoke hearts gave it a lighter feel while still working as a delicious, filling dinner dish.

Overall, it was truly and wonderful dining experience.

Slep noted that he got his start in the industry at a fairly young age after his uncles bought a bar in 1992. He worked in and around that and future establishments they owned, learning all about it. They now own the nearby Sunset Cove as well, along with two other establishments in Harford County.

But Long Beach is his first attempt at breaking out on his own while taking what he has learned and applying it there. Although the dining has been revamped, much of Long Beach's social character which made it popular in the past has been retained, specifically the live music on weekends.

And more upgrades are coming as well. Slep has already improved access to the deck outside and plans to install a large tent to be able to keep it open year-round, regardless of the weather. He plans to make the establishment a Ravens Roost as well.

Being an oyster house, Slep is looking forward to the winter months too, since oysters are traditionally on the menu in months with an "r" in them, of which there are plenty left to come.

He said business has picked up since he has owned Long Beach, but "Winter is when we believe will be the busy season here, not summer."

Deplorable lives matter

- By Delegate Pat McDonough (R-7) -

In a recent speech to the LGBT community, Hillary Clinton stated in part, "You could put half of Trump's supporters into what I call the 'basket of deplorables' who are the racists, sexists, homophobics, xenophobics, Islamophobics - you name it." This is the same presidential candidate who expressed, in numerous speeches, a desire to unite the country. Her previous comment is hypocrisy on steroids when it comes to promoting unity.

Clinton's remarks are similar to those expressed by then-presidential candidate Barack Obama in 2008 when he stated, "It's not surprising they get bitter; they cling to guns, religion or antipathy for anyone who is not like them or anti-immigrant sentiment or anti-trade sentiment." Presidential candidate Obama was attacking what he considered to be the "deplorable" Americans of that election.

These types of comments are becoming typical of the modern left, the power elite and the radical Democratic Party. The Democratic Party of today is not the party of our parents or grandparents. Harry S. Truman or John F. Kennedy could not capture the presidential nomination of their party in today's world of radical left policies. The patriotic Democrats of Dundalk, Essex, Middle River and other communities have as much in common with the Clintons, Obamas and Dutch Ruppersbergers of the world as a dog and cat sharing a meal. The power elite and the establishment love to demonize working people, moderates, conservatives and independents. They will attack anyone who does not worship at the altar of big government, the entitlement culture, politically correct censorship and the promotion of a weaker America.

The truth of the matter is the "deplorables," as defined by Clinton, are sick and tired of living in a world where jobs disappear and are no longer available, young people are victimized by heroin, and illegal immigrants and radical Jihadi's flow into our communities through open borders created by Clinton, Obama and others. While we suffer from these policies, Clinton attends million-dollar fundraisers in upscale California mansions, headlined by the likes of Barbara Striesand. Dutch Ruppersberger, who has endorsed Clinton and votes with Obama 92 percent of the time, sits on more than a million dollars in campaign funds which he extracted from special interest groups that the Congressman regulates.

The liberal biased media protects Clinton and the Baltimore Sun censors any information about the Pat McDonough Congressional campaign vs. the Dutch Ruppersberger campaign. That tactic is used to keep the so-called "deplorables" in the dark and uninformed.

The transformation of America by President Obama, Hillary Clinton and Dutch Ruppersberger has made it clear that the nation is moving in the wrong direction. This is the last generation that can make a difference and change our course. It's not only time to make America great again, it is time to make America greater than ever. It is time to rise to the occasion, answer the call and prove on election day to Clinton, Obama and Ruppersberger that, indeed, "deplorable lives matter."

I, personally, no matter what label Hillary would bestow on me, would rather continue to be a representative who speaks the truth and who always puts my constituents and their needs above all else.

Post-Labor Day school start now official

- By Delegate Eric Bromwell (D-8) -

On Aug. 31, Governor Hogan signed an executive order altering the start date of Maryland's public schools to after the Labor Day holiday, beginning with the 2017-2018 school year.

The 180-day school year will have to be completed by June 15. The idea is that all children will receive the same amount of instructional hours with the late school start. In addition, the executive order allows for a waiver to the Maryland State Department of Education to be exempt from the post-Labor Day start date. The waiver must be submitted annually and be based on compelling justification.

Supporters of the later school start claim it is a positive change for the economy and for Maryland families. A 2013 economic impact study by the Bureau of Revenue Estimates documented that the later start could generate an additional $74.3 million in economic activity. Included in that figure is $3.7 million in new wages and $7.7 million in additional state and local tax revenue. The longer summer break gives families more time together. According to a poll conducted by Goucher College, 72 percent of Marylanders strongly support a post-Labor Day school start. In addition, 25,000 Marylanders signed a petition urging the state legislature to adopt a post-Labor Day school start date.

A nonpartisan task force to determine the later start's impact on education, including teachers, school board members, PTA members and chaired by the Maryland State Department of Education, concluded by a 12-3 vote that the post-Labor Day start inflicted no adverse effect on education. Supporters like to remind us that most of the state's current population attended school at a time when the school year began after Labor Day.

During the 2016 General Assembly session, I was the lead sponsor of HB 1349, which would have changed the start of Maryland's public schools to after Labor Day. That bill was defeated when the Senate voted down the cross-filed bill.

While I obviously agree with the policy that Gov. Hogan announced, I am left wondering if it is within the authority for the governor to issue such an order. An attorney general's opinion should be here soon to clarify; nevertheless, it is rare for a governor to announce an executive order with this type of broad reach. Decisions like these have always been up to each local school system. Other questions remain, like what is considered criteria for applying for a waiver? Can each jurisdiction handle the change before the next school year? Will this change cause students to miss traditional holidays to make up time?

Having said that, I hope my fears are unwarranted, and I hope that this drastic change in the school starting date goes off without a hitch. Either way, however, I have a feeling that the legislature will be taking a closer look at this policy in 2017. Between now and then, I hope you will let me know your thoughts on this or any other issue that's important to you.
