

Morrell Park Students Welcome Operation Warm

More than 100 local volunteers descended on Morrell Park Elementary/Middle School on Monday, November 14, 2016 to give new coats to every student to ensure that they will be warm during the coming cold weather. The volunteer coat give-away was conducted in collaboration with Operation Warm, a national program that distributes winter coats to children nation-wide. Principal Nichelle Johnson ensured that all 471 of the students received a coat donated by Baltimore City Fire Officers, IAFF Local 964, The Baltimore City Fraternal Order of Police Lodge 3 and Horizon Services. BSU alum teams up with Allstate to help students at HBCUs

By Stacy M. Brown

Luke Lawal, founder and CEO of HBCU Buzz, a news site for college students, shows love to his Alma mater and other historically black colleges and universities with a partnership with Allstate Insurance Company by raising scholarship for HBCU students across the country.

Through Allstate's "Quotes for Education" program, which provides financial support for students at HBCUs, Lawal and others hope to raise $250,000 this month alone. Each time an insurance quote is provided to a potential customer, Allstate has pledged to donate $10 to the Tom Joyner Foundation whose mission is to support HBCUs with scholarships, endowments and capacity building enhancements.

Since it was founded in 1999, the Tom Joyner Foundation has raised more than $65 million in support of 29,000 students who attend HBCUs each year. The foundation has also recommended internships, offered matching grant support and has provided career development to students.

Allstate has donated more than $1 million in scholarships to HBCU students since the inception of the "Quotes for Education" program in 2009.

"When I was an undergraduate, the most important thing for me was finding the right scholarship," said Lawal, whose parents are both HBCU graduates.

"Also, it was about finding the right adviser to give you the next internship, the next dollar toward books and to stay on campus. Now, learning about opportunities that can help students pay for college is tremendous for me," Lawal said, adding that some of his friends have used social media and other campaigns to help raise funds to remain in school.

On his HBCU Buzz news website, Lawal says he was taught by his mother to be a leader, to do something different to change the world. His mother graduated summa cum laude as an undergrad at Howard University and she earned a Master's degree from Howard's graduate degree program.

Lawal says the values his mother instilled in him, along with a host of mentors and internships have had a major impact on his life as a youth and as an adult. His work with Allstate and the Tom Joyner foundation is about paying it forward.

"Tom Joyner has done a great job rallying in organizations and it makes it easier when you have a company like Allstate who has a general interest in raising money for HBCUs," he said. "And, it's not just raising funds, it's the understanding of what's important and when I look at some of the messages that we receive, it's uplifting. You can just go online request a quote from Allstate and the money goes directly into the fund."

In September, Lawal traveled to Chicago to attend an event sponsored by Allstate with actor and rap star, Common, who is also an HBCU graduate.

"It was a pleasure to be an Allstate influencer and it was breathtaking to see what Common does for the community. It was even better to know that Allstate sponsored and helped make it happen," Lawal said. "Allstate is an amazing brand and I am so glad that I was able to witness what they do for the community."

Donald Trump stuns nation and world in upset over Hillary Clinton

By Lauren Victoria Burke, NNPA Newswire Contributor

New York real estate millionaire Donald Trump won the White House over former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton in the biggest and most stunning upset victory for the White House in modern presidential politics.

Trump's victory means that for the first time in U.S. history, an individual with no military experience or elected federal experience will be sworn in as President of the United States.

Clinton's defeat and call of concession that ended the race in the early hours of November 9, ended a completely unpredictable campaign season in which polls, prognosticators and so-called political experts were wrong over and over again regarding Trump's chances to win. As Trump defeated 16 other candidates during the Republican primary season, no one could explain his string of unexpected victories over more established candidates, some of whom were former or current governors and United States senators.

Republicans maintained control of the U.S. House of Representatives and the U.S. Senate, and gained control of the White House. Republican governors run 33 states. President-elect Donald Trump. Incredibly, House Democrats failed to pick up seats in Minnesota, Iowa, Florida, New York, Virginia and Pennsylvania— something no one predicted would happen. Ironically, Trump's triumphant election night also yielded a record number of African American congressmen (more than 50) who will now serve on Capitol Hill during Trump's first year in office.

Clinton is expected to win the popular vote, as votes continue to be counted. There is no doubt that Trump's victory is a rejection of the presidency of Barack Obama, the first African American president of the U.S. It is also a victory for the so-called "alt-right" wing of the Republican Party that has been a leading incubator of opposition and obstruction to President Obama for the better part of eight years.

Clinton lost the key states of Wisconsin, Michigan, Pennsylvania and North Carolina by less than two percent of the vote. The much-discussed "lack of enthusiasm" that has plagued the Clinton campaign has been a point of focus by many political observers for months. Though almost no one predicted that Trump would win, the Clinton campaign's lack of specific and sustained grassroots-level investment in traditional Democratic voters will likely be a chief scapegoat for her loss.

Trump's victory is no doubt a statement of white backlash against the successful programs and policies implemented during President Obama's tenure. The bottom line is that on Trump's victory inauguration on January 20, 2017, an African American will no longer control the White House and opens the door to a decidedly different type of president who has not detailed any specific and clear agenda.

Re: No Position For LT. GEN. Flynn (Ret)

We have to support Donald Trump so he can hopefully perform well as President. He won the election, and a large segment of the U.S. population has spoken. I agree with many of the policies he wants to implement, and I believe he will stop the nasty rhetoric that he used in the primaries and the general election. I am convinced his rhetoric was contrived to draw attention to himself and away from other candidates. Every time he said something controversial he received extensive and free media coverage and he was in the spotlight. He played the media very well.

The next step is for President-Elect Trump to fill Cabinet and advisory positions. Due to his lack of political, government and military experience the appointment of highly qualified people to key positions will be critical in determining the success of his Presidency. Early information on his possible appointees indicates he will surround himself with qualified and competent people. Rudy Giuliani, Newt Gingrich, Chris Christie, and others being mentioned are potential viable candidates.

One person mentioned for the position of Secretary of Defense, former LT. GEN. Michael Flynn (Ret.), should not be considered for any position. Flynn might be a Jew hater or at the very least be biased against Jews. In a CNN report that Clinton's campaign blamed Russia for leaking DNC emails Flynn tweeted the following: "Not anymore, Jews. Not anymore." Flynn is a Trump advisor and it is amazing to me that Trump has kept Flynn around. What is incredible is a bigot like Flynn could make it to the highest levels of our Army. I was enlisted and an officer in the Navy, and I never encountered a high-ranking officer with biased views like Flynn.

In addition to his personal bias against Jews, I don't see how Flynn as Secretary of Defense could interact with Israel. Israel is a key ally in the Middle East who we need to help us contain and thwart the radical Islamic terrorism prevalent in Middle East countries. If Israel goes down, Europe could be next, and then they will come at us.

Haters should not be included in the Trump administration. I look forward to a successful Trump Presidency that embodies the unbiased spirit of the American people.

Trump's Greatest Victory: Not over Clinton but the Media

It was Wednesday, November 9, 2016—the day after Election Day. I woke up at 5:30 a.m. and looked at my phone and saw that I had already received text after text expressing shock and disappointment. I had no time to fully process what had just occurred because, unfortunately, I had to get to work. I got dressed in a frenzied state, headed out the door and barely made it to Baltimore-Penn Station to catch the 7 a.m. MARC train to Washington D.C.

It was only after I was seated on the train, staring out the window at the fast changing scenery as the sun rose that I realized that the world hadn't come to an end. Needless to say, I'm sure I wasn't the only one who had that expectation when Donald Trump was declared the new President-elect.

In June 2015, when Donald Trump launched his campaign for the presidency as a Republican candidate, I burst into a fit of laughter. I thought that his campaigning for the most coveted and powerful position in the world was an act of senile delusion. I initially viewed it as a testament to the bravado, arrogance and spoiled desire to feed the large ego of a businessman who has found success many times over.

Trump, the real estate mogul with properties around the world, a reality television star and boisterous personality was now the opposing competitor to disrupt one half of a political dynasty—Hillary Clinton and a political establishment that could not stop this unforeseen force.

The campaign for the presidency was an assessment of character more than an the Los Angeles Times, The Atlantic and even Vogue magazine were unwavering in their support of Mrs. Clinton.

Trump didn't have the same showing of public support, but instead experienced a bevy of attacks from the media that sought to taint his chances of being viewed as a viable candidate.

The New York Times conveniently posted an article on October 1, 2016, showing Donald Trump's tax history of avoiding paying taxes for nearly two-

To his benefit, Trump marketed himself as an outsider of sorts. Someone who can easily identify with the rage from unfulfilled promises made by politicians, the politically correct way of addressing issues on the surface, or the over-policing of world, whilst moving at a snail's pace in making decisions to fix problems at home.

Donald Trump won in the end because of the ferocious points he made and his blunt way of communicating to the common man, which made him far more believable. Though contentious, he took a stand on what he believed in and could care less what anyone thought about it.

His rowdy approach to what could never be said beyond the confines of one's own home was alluring to those who needed a change. He struck at the hearts of the working class and the middle-class whose frustrations were palpable in a transitioning economy where wages are stagnant while the cost-of-living continues to rise. Ironically, he marketed himself as being a filthy-rich businessman with nothing to lose.

What can be plainly said is, perhaps the media has little or no impact when bitterness lies within the masses for not seeing better outcomes in their day-to-day lives. The same ole' same ole' was just not going to do—not this time around.

Maybe, for once, the media can find a way to accept this loss and take into account that what they said just didn't matter.

assessment of the integral parts of policies to be implemented, which would be advantageous to the average working American. It was a test of integrity, honesty and believability. For Clinton, the issue was the mishandling of classified information over a private email server. For Trump, it was his alarming divisive rhetoric about the harm of increased immigration and his blunt blows directed towards Mexicans, Muslims and African-Americans.

Unlike any other election that I've seen before, the media had no qualms in picking Hillary Clinton as the worthier of the two candidates despite her sudden change in stance on same-sex marriages, despite using a private e-mail server as Secretary of State, despite the accusations that the Clinton Foundation was being investigated for corruption, and despite her vote in favor of the Iraq War.

The New York Times, The New Yorker, decades, a loophole that could only be done by the one percent.

Additionally, a 2005 recording of a vulgar conversation between Donald Trump and “Access Hollywood's” Billy Bush about sexual conquests was leaked. Despite the unsavory scandal and a seemingly low public opinion, it didn't have any impact on Trump's march to victory.

In a society, where access to information is readily available on multiple devices by the touch of a button, it's interesting that the damning views continuously made by newspaper publications and television news anchors against the Donald Trump train did the opposite of what was intended.

Perhaps, what is more telling is that the media, no matter how hard it tried, could not override the desperate need for change, a different flavor, something unusual, something new.

Gwen Ifill:

Informed Today's Citizens, Inspired Tomorrow's Journalists

By Stacy M. Brown

American Peabody award-winning journalist, television news broadcaster, and author, Gwen Ifill died on Monday, November 14, 2016. She was 61.

Ifill was known for her deft work as moderator and managing editor of "Washington Week" and co-anchor and managing editor of "PBS NewsHour."

Reportedly, Ifill died at a Washington, D.C. area hospice after a battle with cancer.

The news of her death spread quickly remembrances and accolades poured in from all over the country.

"Working first for newspapers and later on television, Gwen brought a still all-too-rare sight into the homes of all Americans: a black woman delivering the news and sharp insight on our nation's political process," the Reverend William H. Lamar IV, pastor of Metropolitan A.M.E. Church in Northwest, Washington, D.C., said in a statement.

"Gwen covered more than a half-dozen presidential campaigns and her success inspired us all, inspiring a generation of aspiring young black journalists and young female journalists to follow the path she boldly blazed forward, no matter how many racist and sexist attacks she faced," Lamar said, adding that Ifill used her platform to mentor countless young people and her fame to give back to her beloved church and community.

When Ifill published the 2009 best selling "The Breakthrough: Politics and Race in the Age of Obama," she donated some of the proceeds to help restore Metropolitan's historic building.

The National Association of Black Journalists (NABJ) also mourned the loss of Ifill, a longtime member of the organization.

"I am saddened to hear of Gwen Ifill's passing. Gwen was a transformative voice among journalists. Her professionalism and poise, coupled with an innate doggedness to report the story, reverberated throughout the industry," NABJ President Sarah Glover said in a statement. "Gwen covered politics and the presidential race with class, wisdom and insight, separating her from the pack."

Ifill joined PBS in 1999, reporting on politics for NewsHour and moderating Washington Week. In 2013 she was named co-anchor of PBS' flagship evening news program along with Judy Woodruff.

Ifill was one of the most successful journalists to make the transition from print to television. Earlier in her career, she reported for The Baltimore Evening Sun and The Boston Herald American.

Later she was a local and national political reporter for The Washington Post and went on to hold one of the most respected jobs in the industry as a White House correspondent for The New York Times. When she made the transition to television, Ifill became the chief congressional and political correspondent for NBC News in 1994.

A long-time and dedicated member of NABJ, she was inducted into the Association's Hall of Fame in 2012.

Respected throughout the industry, Ifill co-moderated one of the presidential debates between former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton and Senator Bernie Sanders earlier this year, and moderated the 2004 vice presidential debate between Dick Cheney and John Edwards, and the 2008 debate between Joe Biden and Sarah Palin.

Ifill was the platinum standard for political journalists and she was such an inspiration to African-American women in the business, said former NABJ President Vanessa Williams. "She was a tough, smart reporter, with a warm, generous spirit who never hesitated to help, financially and with her time and talents, when asked, whether by NABJ or by a student who approached her for a few words of advice and a selfie."

Born on September 29, 1955, in Jamaica, Queens, to the former Eleanor Husband and Oliver Urcille Ifill Sr., an A.M.E. minister, Ifill was the fifth of six children and she was raised—as her father was periodically reassigned—in Queens, Staten Island, Manhattan, Buffalo, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts in church parsonages and stints in federally subsidized housing.

Charlayne Hunter-Gault, a former "NewsHour" correspondent, said that she and Ms. Ifill, both daughters of ministers, were equipped with a moral armor "that served her and me well as we traversed roads not usually traversed by women who looked like us."

Ifill never married. In addition to her brother Roberto Ifill, she is survived by another brother, Earle, a minister; and a sister, Maria Ifill Philip, who is retired from the State Department.

MECU Foundation donates to Baltimore City Schools, CollegeBound, Credit Union for Kids

Baltimore— The MECU Foundation presented $35,000 to CollegeBound Foundation, nine Baltimore partner schools, and Credit Union for Kids, at a reception on Wednesday, October 19, 2016. The money, raised at the 12th Annual MECU Charity Cup Golf Tournament in September, will be used to purchase school supplies and meet other needs for the young students.

“For 80 years, MECU has been committed to giving back to the local communities that we serve,” said Herman Williams, Jr., Chairman of MECU’s board of directors.

John Hamilton, Chief Executive Officer and President of MECU added, “The funds raised at our charity golf tournament support the needs of our Baltimore schools and assist CollegeBound Foundation in its mission to help students realize their dreams of a college education.”

Ravens passing game beginning to find consistency

By Turron Davenport

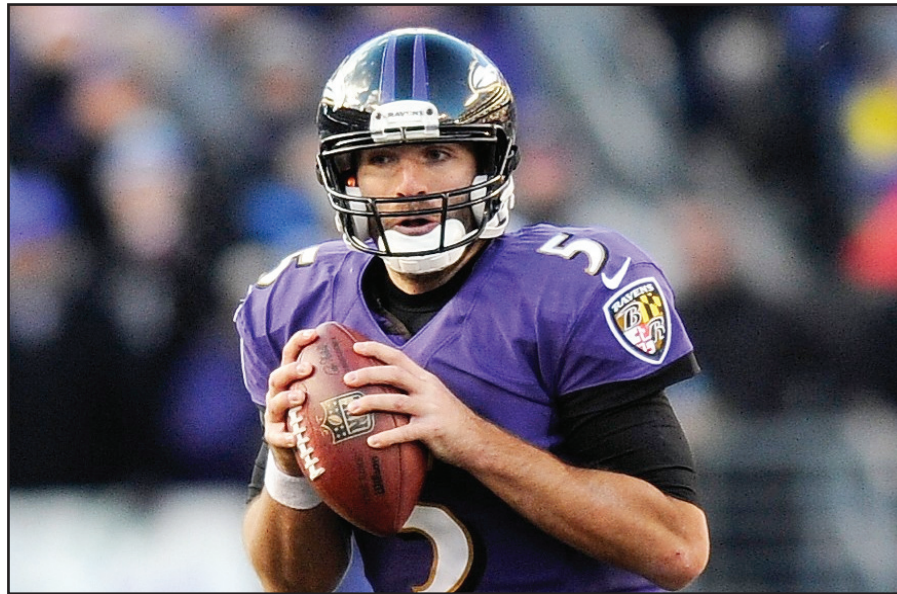

Baltimore Ravens quarterback Joe Flacco continues to work his way back into form after tearing multiple knee ligaments last season. The ninth-year quarterback has been a steady presence for the Ravens since taking over in 2008.

Flacco and the Ravens are now 5 and 4 and sitting atop of the AFC North. Fresh off a three touchdown and two interception performance against the Cleveland Browns, Flacco's touchdown to interception ratio is one-to-one. He has thrown nine touchdown passes and nine touchdowns.

The veteran quarterback has also completed 237 of his 379 pass attempts, placing him at a 62.5 percent completion rate. When Ravens head coach John Harbaugh was asked if he thought Flacco should be more cautious with the football earlier this week, he expressed confidence in Flacco's ability to work it out.

"I think that quarterbacks have to work that out for themselves," Harbaugh said. "You could start whipping the ball around there haphazardly, and some good things would happen, and some bad things would happen. It's definitely an art. It's definitely a science. It's a very difficult position to play. It happens fast. Good decision-making under fire is just something that you see when you see it. Joe is definitely his own harshest critic. He looks at those things very hard and studies them very hard. Nobody wants to play better quarterback for the Baltimore Ravens than Joe Flacco."

Harbaugh cited the hard work that Flacco puts in to be successful. He also acknowledged that there are some things to clean up which include protecting the football.

Baltimore's rushing attack struggled to find consistency despite new offensive coordinator Marty Mornhinweg's focus on running the football. As a result, the passing game is forced to pick up the slack.

Mornhinweg decided to utilize the hurry-up offense to jumpstart the offense against the Browns in the Ravens last game.

"You get the defense on their heels, and that's what it's all about," Flacco said after the Browns game last week. "That doesn't always come in the form of two-minute. I mean, there's ways to do that out of the huddle, too, and just hitting them with runs, hitting them with play-action, drop-back, screens, stuff like that, and today we just got into a little rhythm, two-minute wise."

The emergence of young players such as 2015 first round pick Breshad Perri-man and wide receiver turned tight end Darren Waller has helped Flacco and the passing game. Both Perriman and Waller scored touchdowns against the Browns.

Flacco has always shown a preference for throwing the ball to his tight ends. He is confident that he has found a new weapon in Waller.

"Darren's a big guy that runs well, has great hands," Flacco said. "He's a really talented guy. So, I think getting him involved and showing himself that he can do, too. Yeah, he's another guy that, once he gets out there and gets more playing experience, he'll start to really understand things."

The Ravens offense will need to be as effective as possible this week as they head to Dallas to face a Cowboys team that is firing on all cylinders. Rookies Dak Prescott and Ezekiel Elliott are both deserving of being included in MVP along with Rookie of the Year consideration.

The Cowboys are yet to beat the Ravens in the four games they have played against each other. If Flacco and the offense have it their way, the record will be 5 - 0 when they leave AT&T Stadium in Dallas on Sunday.

Tutors needed in under-resourced schools to provide literacy support

Baltimore— In the wake of a long, divisive campaign season, investing in community engagement and striving to bridge cultural and class divides has renewed importance. One thing that nearly everyone agrees with is that we want to provide educational opportunity to all children so they can pursue their dreams with purpose.

Learning to read proficiently in elementary school plays a crucial role in helping students achieve success, and Reading Partners is a place where communities can truly come together in service of that common objective.

Reading Partners is a national nonprofit that collaborates with community volunteers and local public schools in Baltimore to equip students with the foundational skills they need to be able to read at grade level by fourth grade.

The proven early literacy organization has been providing volunteer-led, individualized reading support to students in under-resourced public elementary schools in Baltimore since 2012. It is critical that Reading Partners students confidence. Tutors typically commit to one hour a week with the same student for the duration of the academic school year.

“The sense of accomplishment and joy that Reading Partners has brought into my life is really difficult to put into words. Thanks to Reading Partners, I have made a difference in children’s lives and that makes me so abundantly happy,” said Pat Yeager, a third-year tutor at the Historic Samuel Coleridge Taylor Elementary School.

There are countless inspiring stories of high-impact volunteerism taking place in Reading Partners reading centers in Baltimore.

Today, only one in five fourth graders from low-income families reads at grade level. Reading is the foundation for all future learning. Without developing the reading skills needed to read on grade level, kids won’t have an equitable chance to succeed in school or in life.

With the dedication of more than 14,000 volunteer tutors in Baltimore and across the United States, Reading Partners’ volunteers help thousands of students make the all-important shift from learning to read to reading to learn.

To become a tutor or to learn more, visit: ReadingPartners.org/locations/baltimore.

Reading Partners empowers students to succeed in reading and in life by engaging community volunteers to provide one-on-one tutoring. The national nonprofit organization will provide proven, individualized literacy tutoring to more than 11,000 elementary school students in under-resourced schools across ten states and the District of Columbia during the 2016-17 school year.

Morrell Park Students Welcome Operation Warm

By Deborah Bailey

Students at Morrell Park Elementary/Middle School won't mind the chill in the air this fall— thanks to the new coats they received from Baltimore City Fire Officers, IAFF Local 964, The Baltimore City Fraternal Order of Police Lodge 3 and Horizon Services, the region's largest privately-owned plumbing, heating and air conditioning company serving the mid-Atlantic.

More than 100 local volunteers descended on Morrell Park Elementary/Middle School on Monday, November 14, 2016 to give new coats to every student to ensure that they will be warm during the coming cold weather. The volunteer coat give-away was conducted in collaboration with Operation Warm, a national program that distributes winter coats to children nation-wide.

Principal Nichelle Johnson was kept busy throughout the afternoon ensuring that all 471 of her students filed into the gym to select a coat and bask in the attention and companionship of a firefighter, policeman or representative from Horizon Services personally assigned to help the children select a coat and oversee the all-important fitting.

Johnson says the coat drive is an important factor in stabilizing attendance during the upcoming winter months for any of her children who don't have adequate winter gear.

"We are continually increasing our attendance. Some of our children do not have winter coats. We have children who come to school in the winter with just a thin hoodie. We have parents here waiting to see if there are any coats left over," Johnson said.

"All of the children in this school are getting a new coat in conjunction with firefighters and local police. Horizon Services has a community program called Horizon Helps in all the communities we serve. This year, we decided to do a Holiday Giving program in collaboration with Operation Warm, said Dina Marie Vanover, a representative from Horizon Services. It's amazing—the kid's smiles are so exciting. They get to pick out the color coat they want [if] it's the size they need. It feels good to see children getting a coat to stay warm on the way to school each day."

Morrell Park students were elated at the sight of the coats that filled the school gymnasium and the fire and police professionals dressed in uniform. Each child chose a tailor fit coat in a variety of colors.

Chloe Harris Coles, age 9 had just one word to sum up the sensation of trying on her new winter coat—"Warm," she beamed. "It's fun being around here with all the people who came out to see us," Harris Coles said.

Several parents were also on hand to oversee the coat give-away. Cindy Canales, whose son Gabriel attends Morrell Park, thought that the coat give-away demonstrates important lessons to children about the role of police and firefighters in the community.

"It's a great way for children to see that the community comes together for them. It's a great way to show them that somebody does care about their safety and warmth," Caneles said.

Morrell Park veteran teacher Brianna Allison stood outside carefully watching her students as they explored one of the city's fire trucks under the supervision of Baltimore City firefighters. Amidst the laughter and commotion, Allison summarized the significance of the event.

"Something like this is really huge on a school wide level," Allison beamed. "This is a great day for our school to have the community support us and to know that our school matters. It is a great day for our kids to know that they matter and that Baltimore supports them."

Operation Warm has reached more than two million children through annual winter coat give-away events across the United States since 1998. In 2012, The International Association of Firefighters joined Operation Warm and formed Firefighters for Operation Warm. Through this partnership, The Baltimore City Firefighters and Fire Officers conduct an annual coat give-away.

East Coast Gospel Music Summit is ‘off the charts’

By Ursula V. Battle

Some of gospel music’s biggest recording artists including Vashawn Mitchell, Troy Sneed, Gary Hines of Sounds of Blackness, Joe Pace, and Ted Winn were in town for the East Coast Gospel Music & Arts Summit. This was the fourth year of the event, which took place October 28, 2016 through Sunday October 30, 2016.

Presented by WCAO Heaven 600 on-air radio personality Reverend Lee Michaels, the weekend-long event featured performances, artist showcases, workshops, breakout sessions and other activities.

Entertainment executives judged the artist showcases and offered advice on various panels. The event took place at the Sheraton BWI Airport in Linthicum, Md., and concluded with a concert at Johns Hopkins Hospital’s Turner Auditorium in Baltimore.

“This event gave aspiring recording artists, actors, musicians and visual artists an opportunity to learn various aspects of the business side of the entertainment world,” said Reverend Michaels.

“It was also a chance for them to showcase their talents and to network with people who may aid them in fulfilling their professional goals. We also had a panel of radio professionals and record label reps who evaluated them on the spot and gave them advice on perfecting their gifts.”

After serving in the United States Air Force and studying at the Broadcast Institute of Maryland, Rev. Michaels began his broadcasting career at various radio stations in the Maryland area in the early 1980s. He joined WCAO Heaven 600 AM in 1991 as an announcer and became program director in 1994, a position he still holds in addition to being the morning drive host from 6 a.m. – 10 a.m.

Pastor of the Manifest Wonders Christian Center in Baltimore, Micheals hosts the weekly television program “Grace & Glory” which airs on WMAR Channel 2. In 2005, the Stellar Award winner was inducted into the Radio Hall of Fame in Canton, Ohio.

“The main thing was to lay the seeds of a legacy of giving back,” said Rev. Michaels. “Career wise, I have been blessed with a 38-year career in the area of broadcasting. During that time, I have seen people with dreams and aspirations in area of music not see those desires fulfilled because they were ill-prepared for what they wanted to accomplish.

“I had to be the bearer of not-so-pleasant news by telling them their music was not radio worthy,” he added. “I decided that instead of being a stumbling block, I would become a stepping-stone by finding a way to help. This was also in-line with my desire to give back. Out of that was birthed the idea of doing the summit.”

According to Rev. Michaels, approximately 300 participated in the event at the Sheraton.

“We had several panel discussions which included the state of the industry,” he said. “We also had several musical guests who performed. We wanted folks to experience varying degree of success. Two things determine how far you will go in the entertainment industry— your ability and whom you know. If you have talent and make good connections, you will get there. The Bible says your gifts will make room for you.”

Renowned choirmaster J.J. Hairston of Youthful Praise hosted the concert at Turner Auditorium, which featured choirs from all over the country and drew a capacity crowd of nearly 800.

“This event has become a staple in the industry,” said Rev. Michaels. “It was off the charts. This was our biggest summit yet.”

Wilkinson's 'Birds of Opulence' wins 10th Annual Ernest Gaines Award

Prize honors rising authors, literary legend Ernest Gaines

Baton Rouge, La.— Kentucky writer, poet and educator Crystal Wilkinson's novel, "Birds of Opulence," has been named winner of the 2016 Ernest J. Gaines Award for Literary Excellence.

Now in its tenth year, the Gaines Award is a nationally acclaimed $10,000 prize handed out annually by Baton Rouge Area Foundation donors to recognize outstanding work from rising African-American fiction writers while honoring Louisiana native Ernest Gaines' extraordinary contribution to the literary world.

Previous winners of the Ernest J. Gaines award include T. Geronimo Johnson for "Welcome to Braggsville," Attica Locke for "The Cutting Season," Stephanie Powell Watts for "We Are Taking Only What We Need" and Dinaw Mengestu for "How to Read the Air."

Award ceremonies take place at 6:30 p.m. on January 19, 2016 at the Manship Theatre in downtown Baton Rouge. Wilkinson will read excerpts from her winning novel. The ceremony is free and open to the public, although reservations are requested at gainesaward@braf.org.

Wilkinson earned a journalism degree from Eastern Kentucky University in 1985 and a master's degree in fine arts for creative writing from Spalding University in Louisville. As an educator, she has taught creative writing at Eastern Kentucky, Indiana University-Bloomington and Morehead State University. Currently, she serves as writer in residence at Berea College in Kentucky.

"Birds of Opulence" is Wilkinson's first novel, though many of her works have garnered critical acclaim. "Blackberries, Blackberries," a collection of short stories, won the 2002 Chaffin

Award for Appalachian Literature. "Water Street," another short-story collection, was a finalist for the Hurston-Wright Legacy Award and the U.K.'s Orange Prize for Fiction.

"Birds of Opulence" follows several generations of women in the Goode-Brown family in the fictional Southern black township of Opulence. The family is plagued by mental illness and illegitimacy, as well as the accompanying embarrassment. As younger generations watch their mothers and grandmothers pass on, they also fear going mad and must fight to survive.

Due to the exceptional quality of entries, judges for the Gaines Award short-listed three books for commendation this year— "The Side of Providence," by Rachel M. Harper, "Triangle Ray" by John Holman and "We Love You, Charlie Freeman" by Kaitlyn Greenidge.

The national panel of judges for the 2016 Gaines Award are: Edward P. Jones, Pulitzer Prize winner for his 2003 novel, "The Known World"; Anthony Grooms, a critically acclaimed author and creative writing professor at Kenesaw State University; renowned author Elizabeth Nunez, professor of English at Hunter College-City University of New York; Francine Prose, author of more than 20 books, including "Blue Angel," a nominee for the 2000 National Book Award; and Patricia Towers, former features editor for O, The Oprah Magazine and a founding editor of Vanity Fair magazine.

Ernest Gaines, a native of Louisiana's Pointe Coupee Parish and a literary legend, is a 2013 recipient of the National Medal of Arts, a recipient of the MacArthur Foundation's Genius Grant, a recipient of the National Humanities Medal and a member of the French Ordre des Arts et des Lettres.

His critically acclaimed novel "The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman" was adapted into a made-for-TV movie that won nine Emmy awards. His 1993 novel "A Lesson Before Dying" won the National Book Critics Circle Award for fiction.

Phill Butts' Sunset Band Is Back At Blues Alley Supper Club

Happy Thanksgiving!

Hello my dear friends. I hope everything is good with you. We have a lot to talk about this week, so sit back, relax and enjoy the ride.

First, I want to talk to you about one of Baltimore's favorite bands, Dr. Phill Butts & The Sunset Band, lead by the one and only Phill Butts.

This local group is awesome! Baltimore loves them and Washington, D.C. loves them too. A few months ago they were booked at the world famous Blues Alley Supper Club in the District of Columbia. They packed the house, bringing a busload of fans with them. Their performance was crazy, out-of-sight entertaining. Well, they did such a dynamite job, they have been asked to return on Monday, Nov. 28 for two shows at 8 p.m. and 10 p.m. Butts has once again arranged a special bus to transport jazz lovers and fans to the event at 1073 Wisconsin Avenue, NW in Washington, D.C. The bus leaves Baltimore at 5:30 p.m. from 1926 N. Monroe Street. A second bus will leave from the Arch Social Club. For more information, call 443-859-0124 or 410-294-4821.

Sean E. Merryman Promotions and the Baltimore Homeless Union will host The Lou Rawls Experience Dinner & Concert featuring DC Lou Rawls paying tribute to the original with love and respect. Tickets include the concert, dinner and cash bar on Sunday, Nov. 20 from 4 to 8 p.m. at the Forest Park Senior Center located at 4801 Liberty Heights Avenue. Also as part of the show is Ms. Bee, who will pay tribute to Phyllis Hyman and Baltimore's own funny girl Ms. Maybelle will be hosting. For ticket information, call 410-215-8893.

For your shopping pleasure, the Baltimore Farmer's Market & Bazaar have extended operation hours to 1 p.m. for the holiday season starting Nov. 22. I love this place; it is the perfect place to shop for festive meals, unique gifts and holiday decorations, as well as fresh vegetables straight from the farmer's garden. Market-goers can find a variety for seasonal items for their Thanksgiving or holiday meals such as turkeys, brisket, hams, oysters, fresh and smoked fish, cheeses, pies, cider, apples, sweet potatoes, nuts. This is also a place where you can buy the perfect gift. You can browse the bazaar for unique crafts items such as: jewelry; soaps and lotions; holiday ornaments; vintage clothing; mugs and other dishes; original works of art; handcrafted baskets; leather goods and much more. Located on Saratoga Street between Holliday and Gay Streets, underneath the Jones Falls Expressway is a fun place to shop. Sundays only.

In closing, I want to announce that the Left Bank Jazz Society is back in action, thanks to the president, Millie Battle. The first concert will kick off on my birthday, Sunday, Nov. 27 from 5 to 9 p.m. at the Forest Park Senior Center, 4801 Liberty Heights Avenue. It is cabaret style as the old tradition used to be. It is and always will be B.Y.O.B & B.Y.O.F with free set-ups. You will be entertained by the saxophonist Eddie Baccus, Jr., formerly of Pieces of a Dream, and his quartet featuring Herm Hopkins on trombone. For ticket information, call Mildred at 410-448-0033.

Happy Thanksgiving, my dear friends, enjoy your turkey dinner. Remember, if you need me, call me at 410-833-9474 or email me at rosapryor@aol.com. UNTIL THE NEXT TIME, I'M MUSICALLY YOURS.

Quincy Phillips with his quintet featuring Freddie Hendrix on trumpet, Theljon Allen on trumpet, Antonio Parker on alto sax, Allyn Johnson on piano, Kris Funn on bass and Quincy on drums will perform at the Caton Castle on Saturday, November 19, 2016— Show time is 6 p.m. - 10 p.m.

Much loved, legendary Baltimore Avenue figure," John "Liddy" Jones, passed away on Thursday, November 10, 2016 at Northwest Hospital. The funeral was held on Thursday, Nov. 17, 2016.

Rodney Kelly and his band will perform at Lexington Market on Saturday, November 19, 2016 starting at 12 noon. Open to the public.

HealthCare Access Maryland Open Enrollment Event to Help People Enroll in Health Insurance

Baltimore— HealthCare Access Maryland (HCAM)— a Baltimore-based nonprofit working to expand healthcare access— will host an open enrollment event at the Highlandtown Library on November 19, 2016, to help Marylanders enroll in health insurance plans through the Affordable Care Act from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Enoch Pratt Free Library in Highlandtown is located at 3601 Eastern Avenue in Baltimore.

Certified navigators will be available to help attendees enroll for the first time, re-enroll in current coverage, change coverage or plans, or shop for new plans. Ten navigators will be available for free, one-on-one consultation, including three who are bilingual.

Over the past three years, HCAM has played a key role as the Connector Entity to help people in Baltimore City, Baltimore County and Anne Arundel County find affordable health insurance and lead healthier lives. This year, HCAM aims to enroll all eligible, uninsured individuals and small businesses in health insurance.

HealthCare Access Maryland was established in 1997 as Baltimore HealthCare Access to initially assist with the Medicaid transition to managed care. After growing steadily, the agency broadened its reach to provide services to people throughout the state and adopted its current name in 2011. BGE joins national effort to help protect customers from scammers

First-ever "Utilities United Against Scams Day" brings together utilities from across the United States and Canada

Baltimore— BGE has joined forces with electric and natural gas utility companies across the United States and Canada to help protect customers from the long-running scams targeting customers of utility service providers. BGE and the other Exelon utilities, Atlantic City Electric, ComEd, Delmarva Power, PECO and Pepco are committed to educating customers and putting a stop to scamming.

The collaborating energy companies designated November 16, 2016 as "Utilities United Against Scams Day." This day will be supported by a week long campaign with content focused on exposing the tricks scammers use to steal money from customers, and how customers can protect themselves. The joint effort, which includes utility member organizations such as Edison Electric Institute and American Gas Association, encourages utilities to share these messages to help guard against scam activity.

"BGE is proud to join utilities across the country to partner in this important effort against scamming," said Rob Biagiotti, vice president and chief customer officer for BGE. "We want to remind our customers that there may be occasions when BGE may need to call or visit homes or businesses for emergencies or to inspect or install equipment, but these situations can always be verified by calling BGE at 800-685-0123."

When being scammed, a customer typically receives an unsolicited phone call from an individual who falsely claims to be a utility representative. The scammer warns that the customer's service will be shut off if the customer fails to make a payment – usually within a short time-frame through a prepaid debit card.

Scammers have even duplicated the upfront Interactive Voice Response system of some utilities, so when customers call the number provided by the scammer, it sounds like a legitimate business. Some of these scammers also use caller ID spoofing to replicate a utility's phone number.

Red flags for scam activity:

·The scammer often becomes angry and tells a customer his or her account is past due and service will be shut off if a large payment isn't made— usually within less than an hour.

·The scammer instructs the customer to purchase a prepaid debit or credit card – widely available at most retail stores – then call him or her back to supposedly make a payment.

·The scammer asks the customer for the prepaid card's receipt number and PIN number, which grants instant access to the funds loaded to the card.

How to protect yourself:

·Utility representatives will never ask or require a customer with a past due balance to purchase a prepaid debit card to avoid disconnection.

·Customers can make payments online, by phone, automatic bank withdrawal, mail or in person.

·Customers with a past due balance will receive multiple shut off notifications – never a single notification one hour before disconnection.

Don't Get Scammed: Customers can avoid being scammed by taking a few precautions:

Never provide social security numbers or personal information to anyone initiating contact with you claiming to be a utility representative or requesting you to send money to another person or entity other than your local utility providers.

Always ask to see a company photo ID before allowing any utility worker into your home or business.

When in doubt, check it out. Be skeptical of individuals wearing clothing with old or defaced company logos. If you have any doubts, ask to see a company photo ID.

Never make payment for services to anyone coming to the door.

Any BGE customer who believes he or she has been a target of a scam is urged to contact their local police, and call BGE immediately at 800-685-0123 to report the situation.
