At The Corral Gate

By Enola Gay

"How high's the water, Momma?" Thank the Lord, the rising water stopped just in time and we didn't have to evacuate the homeplace! I was afraid we were going to have to float out! News reports show that it's been six years since Cooper Lake has been 100% full capacity, but 2015 is the jackpot year. Over the past three months, Cooper Lake has gone from 1/3 full to 3/3 full. Boaters are finding no problem getting their boats launched, and hopefully finding hungry fish. If you think you know portions of the lazy old river or friendly lake where you like to swim, please be aware that unexpectedly deep or even slightly moving water can create dangers for swimmers, even strong swimmers. Please wait a few more days or weeks to swim! Lake Fork is well up too, and will host (at least) two large fishing tournaments during May. There's good prize money for big bass and big catfish. Snakes and other creatures may be out there on snags, stumps and brushy banks. Look closely where you walk and before you reach! What about the hay crop? As wind and sun dry up the standing water, pastures and hay meadows will return to a more friendly and productive place for farmers and gardeners. Luckily, many have a surplus of hay from last year. What about the fruit crop? On behalf of the old saying, "year of snow, fruit will grow", remember we had at least 2 snows right after the New Year. Blackberry vines are already blooming and wild plums are setting fruit.

Speaking of fishing tournaments, here's Yantis Mayor Jerry E. Miller and Yantis Fire Chief Wesley Crist inviting you all to the Yantis Catfish Tournament. And the Yantis Catfish Parade, BBQ Supper and Street Dance on Saturday May 2.

I'm a Jack Phillips fan! That's why I'm bragging about his First Place Championship win at Bob Wills Day in Turkey, Texas last weekend. Nine-year-old Jack now owns a commemorative silver belt buckle embossed with "44th Annual Bob Wills Day Youth Fiddlers Championship". He was top fiddler among 15 contestants in the age 12-and-under division. Go see him closer to home this Saturday night at the Oaklawn Opry in Texarkana. Jack's parents Mark and Allison Phillips of Sulphur Bluff, TX head up a healthy-size family fan club.

Like the refrain in a Beatle's song, "Here Comes the Sun", I expect the dawning of a bright new vista for Hannah Kirby. As a Season 8 Finalist on "The Voice", she demonstrated her rapid growth as a performer and became our very own "Hero". Keep your ears open as Hannah explores new opportunities in the music industry. She was made for the stage! Let's see where she takes us next!

It's good to hear from and talk to old friends, and get their story from the "40 days and 40 nights" of Spring 2015. I've heard some people say they've had ground flooding where they never had before. Others have said their roof let in some water when it had always been tight and dry. I hope you did not experience actual damage to property. If you have, I hope you have kept the old homeowner's policy paid up!

With all this rain, I've been reading. Having recently discovered mystery-drama writer Ellis Peters, I am deep into "A Fall Into The Pit", her first book which developed into a successful series. As Inspector George Felse deals with a murder in the gentle Welsh countryside, I can't put the book down. You'll have to tune in next week for the book report! So til next week, I'll keep an eye out for you at the corral gate!

Our Precious Missy JJ 2002-2015

Rainbow Bridge

Just this side of heaven is a place called Rainbow Bridge.

When an animal dies that has been especially close to someone here, that pet goes to the bridge. There are meadows and hills for all our special friends so they can run and play together. There is plenty of food, water and sunshine and our friends are warm and comfortable.

All the animals who had been ill and old are restored to health and vigor; those who were hurt or maimed are made whole and strong again. Just as we remember them in our dreams of days and times gone by. The animals are happy and content, except for one small thing: they miss someone very special to them who had to be left behind.

They all run and play together, but the day comes when some suddenly stop and look into the distance. Suddenly they begin to run from the group, flying over the green grass, their legs carrying them faster and faster.

You have been spotted and when you and your special friends finally meet, you cling together in joyous reunion, never to be parted again. The happy kisses rain upon your face; your hands again caress the beloved heads and you look once more into the trusted eyes of your pets, so long gone from your life but never absent from your heart.

Then you'll cross the Rainbow Bridge together.

Anna Nicole Smith

Anna Nicole Smith (born Vickie Lynn Hogan; November 28, 1967 – February 8, 2007) was an American model, actress, and television personality. Smith first gained popularity in Playboy, winning the 1993 Playmate of the Year. She modeled for fashion companies and also hair campaigns, including Guess, H&M, Heatherette, Lane Bryant & Conair.

Smith dropped out of high school at age 15 and was married three years later, in 1985. Her highly publicized second marriage to J. Howard Marshall resulted in speculation that she married the octogenarian mainly for his money, which she denied. Following Marshall's death, Smith began a lengthy legal battle over a share of his estate. Her case, Marshall v. Marshall, reached the U.S. Supreme Court on a question of federal jurisdiction, and again on a question of bankruptcy court authority (now called Stern v. Marshall). Smith died on February 8, 2007 in a Hollywood, Florida hotel room as a result of an overdose of prescription drugs. During the final six months of her life, Smith was the focus of renewed press coverage surrounding the death of her son, Daniel, and the paternity and custody battle over her newborn daughter, Dannielynn

In 1992, she went to a photo session, hoping to model for Playboy magazine. Magazine creator Hugh Hefner was very fond of Smith and insisted that she be on the cover of the March 1992 issue. She was pictured in a low-cut black evening gown and listed as Vickie Smith. The centerfold was photographed by Stephen Wayda. The magazine made her an overnight modeling sensation, and she became known for wanting to be "the next Marilyn Monroe".

By the time the photos for the magazine were shot, she had settled on the name Anna Nicole Smith, although she originally showed interest in having a name in memory of Monroe. Smith next secured a contract to replace supermodel Claudia Schiffer in a Guess jeans ad campaign featuring a series of sultry black-and-white photographs. Guess photographers noticed Smith bore a striking resemblance to bombshell Jayne Mansfield and showcased her in several Mansfield-inspired photo sessions. In 1993 before Christmas, she modeled for the Swedish clothing company H&M. This led to her being pictured on large billboards in Sweden and Norway.

In addition to Playboy, Smith has appeared on the cover of German Marie Claire magazine, New York, and in editorials for Vanity Fair, Harper's Bazaar, W, Photo and The Face. A photograph of Smith was used by New York magazine on the cover of its August 22, 1994, issue titled White Trash Nation. In the photo she appears squatting in a short skirt with cowboy boots as she eats chips. In October 1994, her lawyer initiated a $5 million lawsuit against the magazine claiming unauthorized use of her photo, and that the article damaged her reputation. Her lawyer stated Smith was under the impression that she was being photographed to embody the "all-American girl look", but they instead wanted more sexy photos. He further stated the photo the magazine used was taken during a break just for fun. The lawsuit was reported to be settled.

While performing at Gigi's, a Houston strip club (later renamed as "Pleasures") in October 1991, Smith met elderly oil tycoon J. Howard Marshall, and they began a relationship. During their two-year affair, he reportedly lavished gifts on her and asked her to marry him several times. She divorced her husband Billy on February 3, 1993, in Houston. On June 27, 1994, twenty-six-year-old Smith and eighty-nine-year-old Marshall were married in Houston. This resulted in a great deal of gossip about her marrying him for his money. She reportedly never lived with him, never made love with him, or kissed him on the mouth more than ten times. Smith, however, maintained that she loved her husband, and age did not matter to her. Thirteen months after his marriage to Smith, Marshall died in Houston at age 90, on August 4, 1995.

Within weeks of J. Howard Marshall's death, one of his sons, E. Pierce Marshall, disputed her claim for half of her late husband's US$1.6 billion estate. She temporarily joined forces with J. Howard's other son, James Howard Marshall III, whom the elder Howard had disowned. Howard III claimed that J. Howard Marshall had verbally promised him a portion of the estate; like Smith, Howard III was also left out of J. Howard's will. The case had gone on for more than a decade, producing a highly publicized court battle in Texas and several judicial decisions that have gone both for and against Smith in that time.

Smith claimed that J. Howard had orally promised her half of his estate if she married him. In September 2000, a Los Angeles bankruptcy judge awarded her $449,754,134. In July 2001, Houston judge Mike Wood affirmed the jury findings in the probate case by ruling that Smith was entitled to nothing. The judge ordered Smith to pay over $1 million in fees and expenses to Pierce's legal team. The conflict between the Texas probate court and California bankruptcy court judgments forced the matter into federal court.

In March 2002, a federal judge vacated the California bankruptcy court's ruling and issued a new ruling but reduced the award to $88 million. In December 2004, a three-judge panel of the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the March 2002 decision, on the reasoning that the federal courts lacked jurisdiction to overrule this probate court decision

Smith was addicted to prescription medications. Psychiatrist Dr. Natalie Maullin said she met Smith in April 2006 in Cedars-Sinai Medical Center. Maullin said Smith had borderline personality disorder.

Smith announced on June 1, 2006, in a video clip posted on her official website that she was pregnant. "Let me stop all the rumors," she said, while floating on an inflatable raft in a swimming pool. "Yes, I am pregnant. I'm happy, I'm very, very happy about it.

Though her announcement did not provide any details, in an interview with Larry King on CNN's Larry King Live after her daughter's birth and her son's death, Smith's longtime personal attorney Howard K. Stern said that he and Smith had been in a secret relationship for "a very long time" and that, due to the timing of the pregnancy, he was confident that he was the father of the baby. Entertainment photographer Larry Birkhead, steadfastly maintained that he was the baby's father and filed a lawsuit to establish paternity. Smith's daughter, Dannielynn Hope Marshall Stern, was born September 7, 2006, at Doctors Hospital in Nassau, Bahamas. The Bahamian birth certificate recorded the father as Howard K. Stern.

A judge in the United States ordered that DNA tests be performed to determine the biological father of Dannielynn. Following Smith's death, Debra Opri, the lawyer for Larry Birkhead, asked for an emergency DNA sample to be taken from her body. Smith's lawyer, Ron Rale objected strongly to this request. The request was denied by a judge.

According to a story published in the New York Daily News, Donna Hogan, Smith's younger half-sister, has said that the model froze the sperm of her second husband, Marshall, prior to his death. The newspaper said that Hogan wrote in her unpublished manuscript about her sister, entitled Train Wreck, that "To her family, she hinted that she had used the old man's frozen sperm, and would be giving birth to Howard Marshall's child". However, the publisher of Hogan's book described the newspaper's claims as a hoax. On February 9, 2007, Zsa Zsa Gabor's husband Frédéric Prinz von Anhalt said that he had had a decade-long affair with Smith and could potentially be the father of her infant girl, Dannielynn. Alexander Denk, a former bodyguard for Anna Nicole Smith, reportedly told the tabloid television program Extra that he had had an affair with his former employer, and that it was possible he could be Dannielynn's father.

After Smith's death, TMZ.com reported that Smith had been given a prescription for methadone under a false name while she was in her eighth month of pregnancy. The Medical Board of California launched a review into the matter; the prescribing doctor, Sandeep Kapoor, said his treatment was "sound and appropriate."

On April 10, 2007, a Bahamian judge ruled Larry Birkhead, photographer, as the father of Dannielynn. DNA tests had established Birkhead as the father, with 99.99% certainty. Commenting on the revelation, Birkhead stated, "I hate to be the one to tell you this but, I told you so. I'm the father...My baby's going to be coming home pretty soon."

Smith's 20-year-old son Daniel Smith, died on September 10, 2006, in his mother's hospital room while visiting her and his half sister. After the coroner labeled the death "reserved", Smith hired forensic pathologist Cyril Wecht to perform a second autopsy.

His death certificate was issued on September 21, 2006, so that he could be buried While Smith remained in the Bahamas with Dannielynn and Stern, Daniel's family in the United States, including his father, Billy Smith, gathered with friends on October 7, 2006, in Mexia, Texas, for a memorial service.

Dr. Wecht announced on Larry King Live that the autopsy he performed showed that Daniel died from a lethal combination of Zoloft, Lexapro and methadone. Although he explained that methadone is used in the treatment of heroin and morphine addiction, Wecht said he had no information to make any conclusion why Daniel was using the drug. On February 8, 2007, Wecht said on Fox News that he still had no information about how Daniel obtained methadone.

On September 28, 2006, Smith and Howard K. Stern exchanged their vows and rings in an informal commitment ceremony aboard the 41-foot catamaran Margaritaville off the coast of the Bahamas. She wore a white dress and carried a bouquet of red roses, while he wore a black suit with white shirt. Although they pledged their love and made a commitment to be there for one another before a Baptist minister, no marriage certificate was issued and the ceremony was not legally binding.

The basis of Smith's permanent residency status was the claim that she owned a $900,000 mansion, which she said was given to her by a former boyfriend, real estate developer Gaither Ben Thompson of South Carolina. Thompson asserted that he loaned Smith the finances to purchase the property, but that she failed to repay the loan, and was attempting to regain control of the property.

On February 8, 2007, Smith was found dead in room 607 at the Seminole Hard Rock Hotel and Casino in Hollywood, Florida. Tasma Brighthaupt, a friend of Smith who was a trained emergency nurse, performed CPR for 15 minutes until her husband, Maurice "Big Moe" Brighthaupt, Smith's friend and bodyguard, took over CPR. He had driven back to the hotel after being notified by his wife of Smith's condition.

Ultimately her death was ruled a drug overdose of the sedative chloral hydrate that became increasingly lethal when combined with other prescription drugs in her system, Smith's funeral took place March 2, 2007. Before Smith's body was buried, it began decomposing at a faster-than-normal pace. Possible factors in her more rapid decomposition were the drugs found in her body in the autopsy, the fact that the legal battles delayed her embalming until a week after her death, and the nearly month-long wait for her burial in the warm Bahama weather. This resulted in the family having a closed-casket funeral.

PORTRAITS OF WARRIORS

Tumbleweed Smith

I first heard of Ken Pridgeon while visiting in Liberty, Texas. The owner of radio station KSHN, Bill Buchanan told me that Ken was doing some fantastic things for families who had sons or daughters killed in military action. I made contact with Ken, who lives in Baytown, but he couldn't do the interview that day because he was going to Galveston to address thousands of Navy veterans. That night he was going to be recognized during halftime at a football game. He later told me he was driven to the stadium in a limousine and a big jumbotron showed a report on him that had recently been on TV.

When Ken was in the military, he came home on leave and went duck hunting. "I shot a wood duck and the thing fell at my feet. There's nothing prettier than a wood duck. God was having a good day when he put that thing together. I looked down and saw how pretty it was and tried to give him artificial respiration. I wanted to bring him back to life, but the poor little guy died. That was the end of my duck hunting and I started finding ways to paint them and I've painted thousands of them, working to get the right way the feathers belong and the color just right."

Ken developed into a fine artist. Four years ago a woman asked him to paint a portrait of a Texas marine killed in Iraq. Then another person asked him to paint a soldier killed in Afghanistan. Ken was moved by the requests and set out on the biggest job of his life. He found out how many Texas military personnel had lost their lives in Iraq and Afghanistan and he is trying to do portraits of all of them. It's hard to keep up. "When I started here were 525. Now there are 739 and the number keeps growing."

He has a gallery in Baytown that contains nearly 200 portraits he has painted. Ken gets no money for his work. He lives mostly on his social security income. The gallery and his painting supplies are donated. Many people donate money. "There's a donate button on the website portraitofawarrior.org. There's a picture of the gallery there and you can see over a hundred paintings."

He paints six days a week. The gallery gets busloads of visitors. Ken started doing the paintings when he was 75 years old. "I didn't have anybody to tell me I couldn't do it. This gives me the greatest pleasure of my life."

Ken is 79 now. When someone contacts him to do a portrait of a fallen warrior, he gets details about the individual and puts some of those details in the painting. "After the family gets in touch with me, they tell me a little bit about their son or daughter's history. I'm a poor man's Norman Rockwell and like to put a little bit of the story in the background about his or her life. I give a print of the portrait to the family."

Many people see the quality of his work and want to commission him to do a portrait of someone not connected with the military. "But I don't accept any of those. I don't have time."

When Tumbleweed Smith is not out chasing Texas stories he's at home in Big Spring with his wife Susan. Contact him at ts@tumbleweedsmith.com
