Tracy still remembers when her dad sat her down in the third grade to talk about her weight. Since then, Tracy had tried everything from counting calories to fad diets; nothing worked. Then she met the team at The Center for Bariatrics at Bailey Medical Center. Since having her surgical weight loss procedure – or her "birthday" as she likes to call it – Tracy has lost more than half her body weight. More importantly, Tracy gets to spend quality time with her children. She's even run the bases at her daughter's softball games – something she was unable to do before. Because of Bailey Medical Center, Tracy says she's finally free to be the person she was always meant to be.

"I ran for mayor because I didn't feel like as a city we were challenging ourselves enough to progress, Bynum's priorities upon entering office include working to reestablish Tulsa as a nationally-competitive city and strengthening the relationship between the City of Tulsa and Tulsa Public Schools.

Bynum served on the Tulsa City Council for the eight years leading up to his run for mayor. During that time, he focused largely on fiscal restraint, public safety and infrastructure. Among his achievements are helping to enact the largest streets improvement package in Tulsa's history, serving as chairman of the Arkansas River Infrastructure Task Force from the time it was formed in 2013, and crafting budget amendments that put Tulsa Police Department helicopters back into service and doubled the number of police academies.

Kelly Dunkerley was elected Mayor of Jenks in April 2015.

With the opening of FlyingTee in June, local businesses have joined RiverWalk Crossing in the past months with more on their way, including Andolini's Pizzeria and Maryn's Taphouse and Raw Bar.

The city is also seeing new commercial projects, including Simon Premium Outlets, located south of the Creek Turnpike, to open in mid 2018; Thrive Apartments to open in January in downtown Jenks; the completed Gateway Mortgage headquarters, which sits at Main Street and Highway 75 and will include a commercial center with shopping and a hotel; and the recently announced Jenks Crossing, a commercial and residential development near 111th Street and Highway 75.

Ground was broken in September for the Downtown Commons park in downtown Jenks, located on A Street between Second and Third streets. The property will feature a stage, green space and public restrooms. Its expected completion is early

MAKING SENSE OF INVESTING

Local restaurateur and Glenpool Vice Mayor Momodou Ceesay celebrated 20 years of Mamadou's Restaurant in Glenpool in November.

In July, Ceesay opened Mamadou's Restaurant and Sports Bar at 200 Civic Center in downtown Tulsa. The restaurant sits below 5th Street between the Aloft Tulsa Downtown hotel and the newly renovated Central Library at 5th Street and Denver Avenue.

Mamadou's downtown is the host of the University of Tulsa's Philip Montgomery Radio Call-In Show, held Monday nights, and the location for TU football awaygame watch parties.

Ceesay has lived in Glenpool with his wife and four children since 2000. He came to Oklahoma from Gambia after being encouraged by his cousin who was efforts. recruited to play soccer at Rogers State College (now Rogers State University).

Ceesay served as Mayor of Glenpool from 2013-2015 and has served on the Glenpool City Council since 2012.

Jeffrey Dunn served as the 2016 chair of the Tulsa Regional Chamber. Dunn is a Jenks High School graduate and president of Mill Creek Lumber and Supply Company.

Dunn's areas of focus as chair in 2016 consisted of addressing the state's education crisis and the April Vision Tulsa vote.

The Vision Tulsa package, at a total of just under $885 million, was approved in April.

The package consisted of three propositions involving public safety, transportation and economic development. Dunn served on the Vision campaign's steering com-

Included in the economic development portion is $10 million allocated for Tulsa, Union and Jenks public schools to aid in teacher retention, recruitment and training

Dunn also played a significant role in maintaining Williams Companies headquartered in Tulsa, traveling with Governor Mary Fallin and Tulsa Mayor Dewey Bartlett to meet with Williams representatives.

Dr. Deborah Gist took the helm as superintendent of Tulsa Public Schools in July 2015.

In January 2016, the school district officially approved a five-year strategic plan called Destination Excellence. Some of the changes instituted with the strategic plan are the use of new English language arts resources and literacy supports, innovative models for math classes at Clinton Middle School and Hale and McLain junior high schools, and the adoption of personalized blended learning at Memorial Junior High School and Whitman and McClure elementary schools.

In November, Gist met with area school districts and city officials regarding how to best use the $10 million of education funding included in Vision Tulsa's Proposition 3. They proposed a new-teacher induction program and professional-development opportunities for all teachers.

Other district achievements in 2016 include implementing a new K-12 English language arts curriculum and launching two Tulsa Teacher Institutes in order to improve staff retention.

TEN PEOPLE WE WATCHED IN 2016:

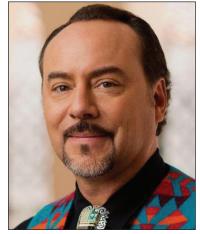

SHERRY GAMBLE-SMITH

MICHAEL PATTON

JAMES PEPPER HENRY

MICHAEL SPURGEON

Daniel Regan served as Tulsa's Young Professionals' 2016 board chair.

Regan is a fourth generation Tulsan with a passion for cities' urban cores. "I've always had a fascination with downtowns, so to be able to have some impact on downtown Tulsa is wonderful."

Regan is also active in politics and the community, and he holds the role of vice president of downtown Tulsa's largest commercial property management company, Kanbar Properties.

Regan's areas of focus for 2016 were largely based around encouraging greater engagement of young voters under age 40 and TYPros' 2016 Street Cred event. Street Cred is TYPros' annual community redevelopment initiative.

Street Cred: 66 was held in April along Route 66, with the goal of emphasizing the need for transit and multi-modal options in that area.

Street Cred highlighted two of Tulsa's transportation plans: the eastwest Bus Rapid Transit (BRT) line, which will be funded through Vision Tulsa, and the GO Plan, Tulsa's bicycle-pedestrian master plan.

Sherry Gamble-Smith joined the Greenwood Chamber of Commerce in 2014 and became its executive director in October 2015.

Gamble-Smith grew up in north Tulsa and graduated from Central High School. Her father had a church on Greenwood Avenue.

Over the past four years, the chamber has seen its membership grow from close to zero to over 100, with chamber leaders making an effort to reestablish its connection with city leaders, local foundations and the private sector, an effort that Gamble-Smith is continuing.

For example, the chamber hosted Juneteenth 2016, held June 16-19, which engaged a number of community groups and local businesses.

Beyond Juneteenth activities, the chamber has continued working to expand its offerings to its members and the public. Plans on the horizon include the revival of the chamber's business planning classes and its business incubator, the start of legislative luncheons and membership mixers, increased partnerships with city groups and organizations, and the formation of a young professional group.

Michael Patton, a born-and-raised Tulsan, became executive director of Legacy Land Trust in May 2015 after 26 years of working for the City of Tulsa and then the M.E.T., 21 of those years as the M.E.T.'s executive director.

Patton has spent his professional years focused on benefiting nature through his recycling endeavors with the City of Tulsa and the Metropolitan Environmental Trust. His current role with Legacy Land Trust involves focusing on land preservation. A portion of Legacy's efforts also revolve around the water treatment and maintenance of Tulsa's watershed.

Patton joined Legacy with his own personal mission to encourage developers of urban areas to create green buffer zones along with their developments, because "green space matters," Patton says.

Patton's passion for parks and the outdoors runs so deep that he named his first child, Braden, after his favorite park, located at 5th Street and Yale Avenue.

"For some people, nature is just background scenery, but for me, it's a conversation," he says. James Pepper Henry was named Gilcrease Museum's Executive Director in March 2015.

Henry's maternal grandmother is Muscogee (Creek) Indian, and his maternal grandfather is Kaw.

As soon as Henry entered his role, he began working towards the creation of a proposal to have Gilcrease Museum included in the Vision Tulsa package. The museum's $65 million expansion project was added to Vision Tulsa's Proposition 3, which passed in April.

The project will involve a general reconfiguration of the museum's floorplan to create an improved visitor experience, expanded and more convenient parking, and the creation of a Grand Entry atrium that will serve as both an entrance into the museum and an event area.

Other planned additions include a casual cafe on the museum's lower level, a 12,000-square-foot signature traveling space and an expanded children's area.

"Gilcrease is Tulsa's most valuable asset," Henry says. "I want to see Gilcrease reach its full potential; our facility needs to match the prestige of our collection."

In September 2015, Michael Spurgeon became Broken Arrow's fifth city manager in 11 years.

When he came to Broken Arrow, he took the reins of a growing city that had recently hit 100,000 citizens and was in the midst of its downtown resurgence.

Two areas where Spurgeon feels that he was able to leave his mark in downtown were the construction of the downtown fountain, which opened in September, and the removal of the vacant Assembly of God Church at 305 N. Main St. in order to make way for redevelopment.

The city is also working on a future partnership with its business and education communities to create an innovation district that would include high-tech businesses, start-up companies, business incubators, and educational partnerships.

Among Spurgeon's priorities after taking the helm was improving transparency. Some of the ways he has done that include providing online video recaps of city council meetings, publishing an annual financial report, and conducting phone and social media campaigns.

Bartlett Family Legacy Stands Tall in Tulsa

Oil Brought Bartletts To Tulsa in Early 1900s

Father and Son Became Prominent Civic Leaders

By Managing Editor EMILY RAMSEY and Publisher D. FORREST CAMERON

Tulsa Mayor Dewey F. Bartlett Jr. leaves the office in December 2016 after two successful terms serving the people of his city. He followed in the civics footsteps of his father, the late Dewey Follett Bartlett, who served Oklahoma as governor from 1966 – 1970 and U.S. Senator from 1973-

Oil brought the Bartlett family to Oklahoma at the turn of the last century. D.A. Bartlett, Mayor Dewey Bartlett Jr.'s grandfather, began coming to the Tulsa area in the early 1900s for his oil business, Keener Oil Company. He would commute for many years back to his hometown of Marietta, Ohio, where, in 1919, Dewey Bartlett Sr. was born.

Bartlett Sr. was only three when his father died. After D.A. died. Keener Oil was operated mainly by D.A.'s brother, David. D.A. Bartlett and his Keener Oil and Gas Company originally conducted oil and gas operations in Titusville, Pennsylvania, but, upon arriving in Oklahoma, the company immediately became involved in oil and gas operations in Creek, Tulsa, and Washington counties. After D.A. Bartlett's death in 1922, the company conwas owned and managed by D.A. Bartlett's two sons, David A. Bartlett and Dewey F. Bartlett.

Bartlett Sr. was educated in Marietta and Lawrenceville Preparatory School in New Jersey. Always an excellent student and leader, he attended Princeton University, receiving a degree in geological engineering and was the 1942 senior class president.

Though Bartlett Sr. spent his school years in Ohio and New Jersey, he was very familiar with Oklahoma, often spending the summer months working in the family business as a roughneck on oil rigs near Dewey and Bartlesville.

Shortly after college graduation and during World War II, Bartlett Sr. enlisted in the Navy and was trained at the Naval Air School in Norman. He served as a divebomber pilot for the U.S Marine Corp, winning the Air Medal for action against Japanese installations in the South Pacific.

While in the service, Bartlett Sr. met his bride-to-be, Ann Smith, at a USO dance in California. They were married in 1945 and moved to Tulsa in 1946, where they became active with the family oil business. They had three children: Dewey Jr., Michael and Senate from Tulsa County in 1962. He was re-elected in 1964.

A Catholic, he was the first of his faith to run for governor of Oklahoma in 1966, and he won. His credits included streamlining state government, overhauling the state judicial system, the advancement of minorities and support of common education. He served in the U.S. Senate from 1972 through 1978, when he died at the age of 59.

Dewey Bartlett Jr. says he was interested in business at an early age, spending many of his growing up years working in the oil fields and driving trucks. He attended Bishop Kelley High School and graduated from Regis College in Denver. He holds a ice to Tulsa. master's degree in finance from Southern Methodist University.

GOVERNOR & SENATOR DEWEY F. BARTLETT

Although, when it came to following in the political footsteps of his father, Bartlett Jr. says he had little interest. "Politics is hard on families. You're never home. I wanted to settle down was elected to the Oklahoma and have a family. I had no desire to be involved in politics."

Yet, as his children grew older, Bartlett Jr.'s feelings began to change. He credits that change to his participation in Leadership Oklahoma in 1988 and his discussions with Howard Barnett, current president of Oklahoma State University-Tulsa, who was also a part of the class.

Barnett was involved in the new city charter and asked if Bartlett Jr. would be interested in serving on the first Tulsa City Council. "He said that we could help set the tone for the whole city," Bartlett Jr. remembers.

He went on to run for city council in 1989 and win, thus setting the stage for many years of serv-

He also served on various boards including with the American Red Cross, Oklahoma Resources Oklahoma Turnpike Authority, and the Independent Petroleum Association of America.

During those years was when Bartlett Jr. began thinking about the benefits that he could bring to political office.

"I developed the idea that it would be good for people from the business community to be involved in political office; it brings a good perspective," he

However, Bartlett Jr. is the first one to pronounce himself "not a politician.'

'I don't refer to myself as a politician. Politics is a game, and I don't think it really fits in with the job of mayor."

When Bartlett Jr. turns over his office on Dec. 5, he will be heading back to his helm as president of Keener Oil Company.

In addition to that, though, as Bartlett Jr. announced at his final State of the City on Nov. 15, he is pursuing the position of secretary of transportation on Presidentelect Donald Trump's cabinet.

"Having served as mayor, transportation fits well into my areas of expertise.

"There is so much that the U.S. Department of Transportation does on a state level that directly affects cities, such as involving highway construction, airports, space travel, satellites.

Tulsa PAC Showcases Holiday Fun in December

From the PAC

By ADAM J. FOREMAN

Cue the bright lights, family gatherings and seasonal cheer as the holidays bring forth some of the best entertainment in the region at the Tulsa Performing Arts Center.

December shows kick off with Tulsa Symphony Pops' "Home For The Holidays" concert. Tulsa's newest holiday tradition unites Tulsa Symphony, Tulsa Oratorio Chorus and area high school choirs to bring families and the community together in a celebraextravaganza. musical Conducted by Ron Spigelman, this uplifting showcase of nostalgic holiday favorites and joyous singa-longs is a delightful kick-off to a memorable holiday season. Concerts are Dec. 2 at 7:30 p.m. and Dec. 4 at 2:30 p.m. in Chapman Music Hall.

American Theatre Company continues its 47th season with one of Tulsa's favorite holiday family musicals, "A Christmas Carol." Robert Odle and Richard Averill's musical adaptation of Charles Dickens' beloved novel celebrates its 40th anniversary! Watch miserly Ebenezer Scrooge's overnight journey to redemption an annual reminder of the basic message of the holiday season. Karl Krause returns as Scrooge, accompanied Gemeinhart as Bob Cratchit, Brittany Wright as the Ghost of Christmas Past, John Knippers as the Ghost of Christmas Present, Matt Lindsey as the Ghost of Christmas Yet to Come, Rick Reiman as Marley, and Gigi Jenkins as Tiny Tim. The show runs Dec. 8-9, 14-16, 19-23 at 7:30 p.m., and Dec. 10-11, 17-18 at 2 p.m. in the John H. Williams

Continuing another family holiday tradition, Tulsa Ballet presents "The Nutcracker." Local children join professional dancers in this holiday classic about a young girl whose dreams are filled with enchanting characters. The Sugar Plum Fairy, Mother Ginger, and dancers from faraway lands entertain Marie and her Nutcracker Prince after he and his toy soldier brigade defeat the Mouse King and his rowdy rodent army. Tulsa Symphony performs Tchaikovsky's beloved score in this annual production that mixes the visuals of a Broadway show with delightful dance and well-

Beautiful Day at the Mercantile in Historic Pawhuska

By CHUCK CISSEL Feature Writer

My favorite television shows are those on HGTV, Food Network, Create TV, PBS, ESPN and Tennis Channel. My most favorite, however, is Food Network with its galaxy of star chefs and cooking shows, including the extraordinary Ree Drummond, known by television viewers as the Pioneer Woman.

The program stars Ree and often features her four children (Paige, Alex, Bryce and Todd) and of course, her husband Cowboy Ladd Drummond. On occasion she extends her gracious spirit to the cowboys on the ranch, as well as her in-laws, other family members and friends.

I took a road trip to Pawhuska recently with my good buddy, Robert Bailey, to see the newly reconstructed icon, The Mercantile General Store, in Pawhuska. When I met Ree at the Mercantile, she glowed with her wonderful spirit and that enchanting dimpled smile. I was introduced to her by my friend Robert, and when he told her I was from Tulsa, lived in New York City and was in the original cast of Broadway's mega-hit, A Chorus Line, her eyes nearly popped out of her head. She said to me, "I love that show; I know the entire album; sing it all the time: she then proceeded to sing "I Can Do That" from the musical. We both sang a little of it and enjoyed a wonderful moment and had a great laugh.

several years now, I have watched her kids grow up right in front of my eyes. When I met Ladd recently at the Mercantile, I asked him, "How is Toddy? (That's what Ree and Ladd call their youngest son). His name is actually Todd. In any case, After viewing Pioneer Woman for after being a part of the Pioneer Woman viewing audience for so many years, one feels a sense of inclusion. You get to know the cast of friends, family members, cowboys and of course, appreciate their various personalities.

It has been so much fun watching Todd grow up from a little tot. With his personality bubbling over, you can count on him to say, "This is the best meal I have ever had Momma" for, literally, every meal Ree cooks. I did the exact same thing growing up. Besides the crazy good recipes and hospitable Ree Drummond, one of the key reasons I enjoy Pioneer Woman so much is the family connection. It takes me back to a simpler place and time. It's a wholesome family lifestyle program that is reminiscent of my childhood and one I relate to – my mom cooking food, delicious baking cakes/pies/bread and me coming home from school to see what Mom made each day as well as the com- early morning hours into early forting dinners on Sundays. The Pioneer Woman is an uplifting half-hour series, and Ree has an easy, breezy way about her, radiating warmth, sincerity and her special brand of joy wrapped in every episode. In addition to her cooking show and the Mercantile General Store, Ree has a successful Pioneer Woman blog, authors popular cookbooks, is a photographer, has a line of culinary merchandise selling in Walmart, and, from what I hear, has other new projects in the works.

Several years ago, the Vision 2025 Project provided opportunities for entrepreneurs to cultivate new ventures, renovate warehouses and create boutiques, eateries and other establishments to boost the economic development in downtown Tulsa, while giving the public fresh and exciting places to visit there. It looks like Ladd and Ree have taken a page from the Downtown Tulsa Renovation book and are on the fast track to building a sparkling new destination for all of us in Northeast Oklahoma and certainly for Osage County.

On my recent Saturday visit, the Mercantile was filled to the brim with people of all ages, from the evening. The deli was packed all day long, and the bakery upstairs the childhood magic back for me was teaming with wide-eyed visione of the wedding muffins – moist and delicious. The General Store on the first floor features all kinds of tchotchkes, cookbooks, her cookware line and other special kitchen essentials, plus plenty of fun gifts for the kids.

I think Ree and Ladd have outthemselves with the Mercantile. The renovation may have taken a few years, but the overall result is stunning. Beautifully appointed and designed, with a careful eye to detail from top to bottom, including the first-class kitchen areas, amazing floors, spotless bathrooms, cushy leather furniture. The rooms are spacious with floor to ceiling windows, and don't forget the scrumptious food.

It was a heartwarming road trip on a beautiful, sunny morning. If you get the chance, take the trip and enjoy a fun-filled, delicious day at the Mercantile. When you visit, leave early in the morning and stay the day in this inviting atmosphere. By the way, the bakery goods, breakfast and lunch are yummy. It is Pawhuska's new shining star attraction. Enjoy!

White is pleased with how the first year has gone.

"We've seen a lot of collaboration in this Brady Arts District as a whole," she says. "Although we don't put any requirement or pressure on their involvement in the community, it seems as if that's the natural habit of an artist. They want to be involved in their surroundings, so having the artists participate at some level has been a great success, and having art shown throughout the community has also proven to be a success this year.'

National Accolades

Here are a few highlights from national awards given on America Recycles Day that will have a positive impact for all of us:

• The New York City Sanitation Department set a plan in place for a zero waste city by 2030. Thanks to Homegrown Festival in Ozark, Arkansas, reported by Trash Talk in August, we've seen that zero waste for events is possible, so we're excited to learn more about doing this for day-to-day living.

• ByFusion invented RePlast Blocks, which turns plastic waste into cinder-type blocks. According to their awards accolades, this process "requires no adhesives, produces 95 percent less greenhouse gas emissions than concrete blocks, and provides high thermal insulation."

Elote Continues to Reflect Libby Billings' Ideals

Local Dining

By BLAKE AUSTYN Contributing Writer

When individuals witness the enthusiastic, seemingly endless energy that is Libby Billings, they usually aren't surprised to discover that in addition to running successful businesses, she continues to breed new Roppongi ramen bar, Billings' third restaurant, opened Nov. 21 in downtown Tulsa's Deco District at 601 S. Boston Ave., smack dab in between her two well-established restaurants Elote and The Vault.

Elote opened in 2008, with The Vault following in 2012.

Billings, a graduate of Booker T. Washington High School and Oklahoma State University Institute of Technology culinary school, has always only worked in restaurants.

Her first job was at Mexicali Border Cafe, where, allegedly, she said that one day she would open a Mexican restaurant in downtown Tulsa, according to a former fellow employee.

But I don't remember ever saying that," she laughs.

Nonetheless, that's what Billings

She opened Elote in downtown Tulsa at a time when restaurants, particularly along Boston Avenue, did not operate after the weekday workday ended.

So Billings needed to give people a reason to come downtown, particularly to the Deco District.

"When Elote opened, there was going to be some residential options coming soon to the area," she says.

When that didn't happen, Billings threw festivals: Luchador runs, salsa competitions, chalk fests. She partnered with Mod's Coffee and Crepes, located across from Elote, in offering puffy tacos and gelato specials.

Now, with residential offerings coming quickly to the area. "I'm proud to have been a part of the change that we've seen in the Deco," she says.

Bringing change to the Deco District, however, wasn't exactly Billings' initial aim when she opened Working in restaurants growing up, "I always saw waste," she says.

Quite the contrast to her home life. "I was raised by hippies, and I was raised vegetarian, so we did not have meat in our house, and I grew up composting. Having no waste in our house was normal.

'So, to go into restaurants and see them throwing away styrofoam and learning where the meat came from; for my personal sanity, I knew that I would need to do things differently."

Billings, therefore, endeavored to create a menu featuring fresh versions of Mexican dishes with a restaurant engaging in green practices, including recycling and com-

For our entrees, we ordered the Elote's Puffy Tacos, the most popular menu item, says Billings, and the Enchilada Tomatillos.

We chose to go with pork on the two puffy tacos. They were topped with carmelized onions, lettuce, tomato onion relish and a version of Mexican sour cream.

We sprang for three tomatillos, two with avocado and one with chicken. Each tortilla was also filled with poblano peppers, portobello mushrooms and cilantro tomatillo sauce.

The combination of the airiness and crunchiness of the puffy tacos makes me understand why the dish has remained so popular. Elote even offers a breakfast puffy taco option at the Cherry Street Farmers Market during the summer months.

The tomatillos tasted very fresh, particularly the ones with avocado. Although, while I don't eat a lot of meat, there was something about the added flavor of the chicken tomatillo that hooked me.

I've visited the Hillcrest South ER on three different occasions for three separate health issues. After my first visit in 2009, I knew I wanted to stay with Hillcrest South for all of my medical needs. The hospital's quality of care is second to none.

During each of my ER visits and subsequent appointments, the staff always took the time to explain things in a way I understood. They made sure I was comfortable and the hospital always felt warm and welcoming. Because of this, I was never afraid during my ER visits. A nurse was always right there.

I told my primary care physician, 'If it can't be done at Hillcrest South, I'm not getting it done.' I'm a strong believer in the services I've received. This is the hospital I've chosen.

FCC Launches New Concept for Holiday Giving

During the next few weeks, mailboxes will be stuffed with Christmas catalogs and shopping guides vying for attention this holiday season. They will shine and sparkle with pretty items that range from the useful to the useless. But what if, in the season of giving, individual's generosity is the gift of opportunity to learn or to explore?

The Tulsa Community College Foundation has created the ultimate gift catalog, featuring scholarships, learning opportunities and educational experiences for students. Launched in time for the holiday season, The Wish Book 2016, in print and online, details gift-giving opportunities for those looking for something a little dif-

"The Wish Book reimagines education giving opportunities and uses Neiman Marcus' The Christmas Book as inspiration," Lauren Brookey, president of the TCC Foundation says.

The 17 projects featured in The Wish Book range from helping students in the Honors program to providing students an opportunity to learn about their heritage in the African country of Ghana or study at NASA's Jet Propulsion Lab in California. Other projects include a new laboratory for biology students with naming rights, underwriting a student art competition or financing a mock courtroom renovation.

"The Wish Book is timed to capitalize on holiday giving as individuals look for that unique gift to give. Most of us will soon receive numerous retail catalogs with gifts that sparkle. The Wish Book is a catalog with opportunities - small educational dreams of students 2016 at tccwishbook.com.

City Leaders, BAPS Show Unity

Broken Arrow city, chamber of commerce and education leaders hosted a press conference on Nov. 21 to discuss the current crisis in teacher pay and the recent rejection of State Question 779. In a show of regional unity, many area school districts were represented, including Sand Springs, Bixby, Union and Owasso public schools.

"I was overwhelmed by being asked by the Broken Arrow city and chamber to speak at this event and by seeing them reach out to the school district," said Broken Arrow Superintendent Jarod Mendenhall.

'Teachers are entrusted with our most precious commodity, our children, but teachers' pay shows that we don't value them.

"I urge legislators in next session to pay them what they deserve."

He also urged parents to reach out to their legislators.

Broken Arrow City Manager Michael Spurgeon spoke about the of State Question 779, I had mixed rejection of State Question 779, a proposal that would have raised the sales and use tax by one percentage point. Of the total revenue generated by the new tax, 60 percent would go to providing a salary increase of at least $5,000 for every public school teacher. The remaining funds would be divided between public schools I think this state question pitted (9.5 percent), higher education cities against school districts.'

"When I heard about the rejection emotions: I was relieved that it failed because sales tax is the life blood of Oklahoma cities and this would have raised our sales tax, but I also felt sad because teachers need the pay raise.

"I don't think that this was s sign that citizens are against teachers, but

Broken Arrow Chamber of Commerce President and CEO Wes Smithwick then spoke about the necessity of education in bringing jobs. "I work daily to grow jobs but can't do that without an adequately funded public education system," he said.

Finally, State Representative Michael Rogers promised, "Our number one priority in the next legislative session will be to address teacher pay, and we will make a concerted effort to address early.

"We want to show that we value and respect teachers.'

Tiffany Jones Ready to Lead B.A. Lady Tigers After two seasons, Jones stepped "Those are the only two who have "Those are the only

Sports Writer

When Tiffany Jones was named the interim girls head basketball coach for Broken Arrow in September, she got lots of support from players and friends in the coaching profession.

Jones has been on board the Lady Tigers' coaching staff since 2011, when she joined as an assistant. She is taking over the reins from Michael Hughes, who stepped down during the offseason to spend more time with family.

Former standout players such as the recently graduated Alexis Gaulden, who is now a freshman at the University of Tulsa, have been among those showing sup-

"That group has been great," Jones says. "There was a tremendous amount of support from our kids when it was announced. Their response was incredibly positive. The girls have been great.'

Before coming to Broken Arrow five years ago, Jones had spent 18 years at Duncan, having coached under Phil Landrum, an Oklahoma Coaches Association Hall of Fame member, who coached the Lady Demons to frequent trips to the state tournament.

Jones took over the coaching duties at Duncan in 2002 when Landrum left for another coaching position. In 2004, Jones led the Lady Demons to the Class 5A state tournament. That accomplishment led her to being named as Lawton Constitution Large School Coach of the Year and the Region Coach for the 2016-17 campaign. of the Year from the Oklahoma Basketball Coaches Girls Association.

school's track and cross country coach.

Those who worked with Jones during her time in Duncan also acknowledged her for getting the Broken Arrow job.

"(Landrum) sent me a message pretty quick that day," she says.

With the job now in her direction, Jones, who played her college career at Oklahoma Baptist from 1989-1993, knows that there is work ahead. Broken Arrow will be a different team this season than those that have reached the state tournament in recent years, including back-to-back state championships in 2014 and 2015. Most of the players who impacted the Lady Tigers in their state title campaigns have graduated.

"Coach Hughes has done a great job and we've had great success. We wish him well, but now we're going to work," Jones says. "We're going to celebrate what we've had, but we can't rest on that. We have to get to the gym and get to work. Everybody knows we're young, but the fun thing about being young is you improve. Players improve all year long. I've had real good support from kids who have graduated in the past. They've been encouraging and that's been down from the hardwood to be the any varsity experience as far as playing a close game," Jones says. We are young.'

The Lady Tigers also lost Lauren Richter, a 6-2 center, who moved to Bartlesville.

However, Cherish Doku (5-8, senior, forward) and Danyell Moore (6-1, senior, forward) who transferred respectively from Booker T. Washington and East Central last year at mid-term, return. They didn't get much time in with the Lady Tigers, but their experience will be important, Jones says.

There will also be some juniors who got plenty of minutes in junior varsity games last year.

"I think teamwork and chemistry is going to be very important for us," Jones says. "We're really working on how we are sharing the ball with each other, know who we are passing to, what are our strengths and weaknesses, but being very intentional and very disciplined in what we do."

Although Broken Arrow will be different in terms of talent, it still hungers to return to the state tournament. The loss in the semifinals has spurred the team through the offseason.

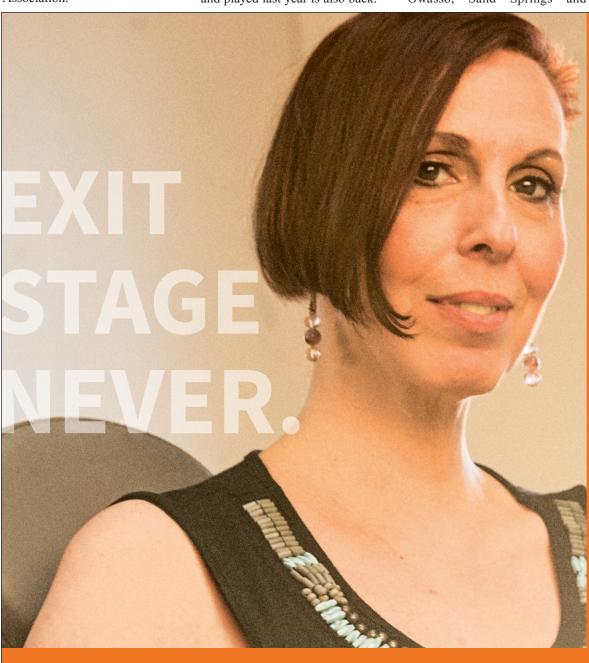

"Absolutely," Jones "Obviously, we had a disappointing end last year. But we talked about our work ethic in practice. There are going to be teams more talented than us, but we're going to play hard and smart. We're not going to be the biggest team or the fastest team, but we're going to do everything we can that we can control. We're going to have to play well together."

Owasso, Sand Springs and Broken Arrow opens its season on home opener on Dec. 6.

Lincoln Christian Cross County Takes State

By MIKE MOGUIN GTR Sports Writer

A first was made in Lincoln Christian school history when its cross-country teams captured the Class 4A state championships Oct. 22 in Shawnee.

The boys won the title for the third straight year while the girls got their first.

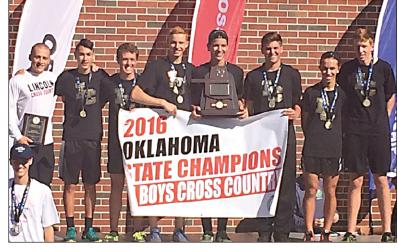

Each team also did it with new coaches at the helm, although both were familiar with the program. Martha O'Rourke had previously coached both the Eagles and Lady Eagles for seven years, before retiring and turning the reins over to Stephen Lewelling and Kailan Woods, respectively, who were assistants for each team.

"It was incredible," Lewelling says of his team winning. "We knew there was really good competition with Bethany and Metro. We knew we had to work real hard. The kids just sold out to the idea of leaving it all out there."

Each team also had a runner-up, with junior Luke Murphy taking those honors for the boys and senior Alyssa Solberg getting it for

"It's fun because you did it together," Woods says. "The boys have been winning and the girls just accomplished it. Our guys coach and I work side-by-side everyday like we both equally pour into both programs. It's like one big massive family, to be able to celebrate a state championship in the same year is a great feeling and an incredible accomplishment by

In the boys' competition, the Eagles won with 57 points, beating

Metro Christian, who finished with 80. Bethany was third with

"The guys are really focused and driven," Lewelling says. "They have a great ability to put distractions aside and focus on the task at Murphy finishing the boys' run a time of 16:02.88. Berryhill's Daniel Mazzei won the meet after completing the race at 15:33.18.

"I, honestly, was not focused on how I was going to do," Murphy says. "I was thinking about how my team was going to do. I really didn't care how I placed. I knew all the hard work I had done was going to show itself, but I was thinking about our team and hoping they could put all the pieces together and pull out a win.'

Other runners for the Eagles at state were Preston Turner (16:41.18), Brock Sherwin (17:00.18), Harison Michael (17:16.28) and Clay Levell (17:25.62).

The Eagles are in a good position to four-peat next season, because they have no seniors on their squad. Everyone will be back.

In the girls' race, the Lady Eagles finished with 66 points, also beating Metro Christian, who finished with 86. Plainview, a school based out of a community in Ardmore, was third with 97.

"It was definitely a team effort," Woods says. "We talked a lot about a vision. The Bible says where there is no vision, the people perish. So we talked a lot about that and the strength God will give you as you honor him."

The girls attributed winning state to having a vision of putting in more miles in practice than they ever have before, Woods says.

"There's really no explanation for it other than God's grace and favor and the work ethic of those kids," Woods said. "They perse-

"That was fantastic," Lewelling says in regards to the girls' winfavored to win at all. They really busted their tails in the season. Every practice, they gave it their all and it paid off in the end."

"It was probably one of the greatest joys of my life to see those kids come together and accomplish that," Woods says. "There is just something about being a coach and mentoring those kids and they work pay off in a state champi-onship, I don't think you could ask for anything more. And the way they ran was unbelievable."

The Lady Eagles had run 34 seconds faster than they ran all season long, Woods says.

Solberg, who won the individual title last year, achieved her secondplace finish with a time of 11:39.88.

'Getting an individual state title last year felt amazing, but doing it with a team by my side felt 10 times better," Solberg says. "I loved the fact that we talked about winning all season, put in work togethning state as well. "They were not er for months, and grinded it out until the very end. Finishing my senior year with a team state title is one of the best feelings and I am so proud of how hard my team and I worked for that accomplishment."

Winning the individual medal Maicie Brown from Weatherford, who ran a time of 11:35.62.

Other Lady Eagles who ran for Lincoln Christian were Isabella Murphy (12:23.84), Ariana Cruz (12:24.31),Jaylen Riley (12:28.28) and Asia Pybas (12:41.53).

Besides Solberg, Pybas, Emily Young and Emily Grace Long are the team's seniors.

"I really truly believe we will compete at a high-level," Woods says. "We won't have any seniors next year. I got a couple of juniors, sophomores and freshmen. We're really young, we have great talent coming, so our expectations is to continue to compete at our very best ability and be highly successful.

Oilers Goalie Helps Team to Great Start

Jamie Phillips Earns Accolades

By GLENN HIBDON

GTR Sports Writer

Jamie Phillips appears to be mild mannered, almost shy. He seems modest, intelligent and focused on his future. But more importantly to fans of the Tulsa Oilers, the young goalie wins hockey games.

Through the first dozen games of the ECHL season, the Oilers enjoyed success they hadn't experienced in years. With a 10-2 record, including an 8-0 mark at the BOK Center, Phillips was between the pipes for all of the victories. The 23-year-old rookie earned early praise from the league, winning Goalie of the Month for October, Goalie of the Week once and three times selected the No. 1 star for his performances.

In mid-November, the question for the franchise and its followers was, how long will it continue? Phillips is the property of the NHL Winnipeg Jets and was sent to Tulsa for playing time. Obviously, his success hasn't gone unnoticed, and a call up could come at any time.

"I'm sure he will get his chance, but the last thing we need to be doing is worrying about that," says Oilers coach Jason Christie. "When an opportunity comes, you wrap your arms around it. Right now he's working hard and pushing other goalies. It's day to day with him, but while he's here, he's with us."

At 6-foot-3 and 175 pounds, the native of Caledonia, Ontario, strikes an opposing image for enemy snipers. Through four seasons at Michigan Tech he compiled a 57-25-8 record with 10 career shutouts. The Jets were so impressed they took him in the 2012 NHL entry draft.

With the Oilers, Phillips has continued his winning ways, leading the ECHL in minutes played and saves with a 2.16 goals against average and a .931 save percentage through the team's first 12 games. The franchise hasn't seen such a performance since Rod Branch in the 2001-02 season. Some veteran observers say Phillips surpasses Branch in potential, making him perhaps the club's best goalie prospect since the Oilers' resurrection in 1992.

That's a lot of pressure to put on the shoulders of a rookie, but Phillips appears to bearing up quite well.

"They (the Jets) said I need to play a lot of games and that's why I was sent down here," says Phillips, who went to camp with the Jets and then their AHL affiliate the Manitoba Moose. "They said I really played well, but they wanted me to play as many games as I can so I can get better.

"I really wanted to make the Moose roster for opening day, but it is what it is, a numbers game. I do feel that I can get better, and Tulsa has a really good team. It's helped my confidence a lot and we're competitive every night. My team makes my life easier, blocking shots, and I'm getting some key saves to keep us in the games."

Indeed, Christie appreciates his diamond in the rough. The coach is known as a keen developer of talent for the Jets organization, and Phillips is one of his prize pupils.

"He's making key saves at the right time. He's dialed in and focused," says Christie. "He's prepared and works hard and that's what it boils down to. When you see how he competes in practice, he's going to make himself have success that way."

Christie says Phillips can see pucks and he makes himself big in the crease. His timing is an asset.

"He's a young kid who is learning every day and he keeps learning," adds Christie. "The biggest thing is for him to develop. If keeps doing those things he will make himself into a better goalie. As a team, I like the way the guys are playing for each other. We have a young team but good leadership. We won't lose games by not working hard."

Phillips says he didn't know what to expect when he came to the ECHL, but he's found the game to be faster than in college with players making smarter decisions with the puck. More goals are scored, and more scoring opportunities await.

JAMIE PHILLIPS

"College hockey is more of a defensive game," Phillips says. "And we play double the games here than we do in college. I've been able to adapt to the schedule and I would play every night if I could."

However, Phillips acknowledges that rest is important. He uses his days off to recover, to relax and stretch his muscles. In his spare time, the rangy keeper plays the guitar, watches television and reads. Trips to the bookstore are common

Phillips decided at age 12 he wanted to be a goalie. He "wasn't having fun" as a skater and after the switch, he found the position he loved.

"I loved it since the first day," says Phillips. "I've had a lot of ups and downs and things don't always go my way. It's a long grind, but I think my size helps in positioning. The bigger you are, the more net you take up. I try to look big in the net.

big in the net.
"I think I have good instincts and mental consistency. I try not to let in soft pucks and key on my game every single night. College helped a lot because playing one or two games a week, if you lose one game, it could ruin your season. I know I've got to be in the zone every single night."

Phillips says he is a butterfly style goalie who takes dives across the crease to stop pucks. He says his approach on certain shots can result in him getting hit more with the puck, but that's his job. As the last line of defense, he's a puck arrester putting the cuffs on enemy scoring aspirations.

"I think getting my first shutout was pretty cool and also my first pro win," Phillips says. "Every single game I always look back on it with the team and it's fun to win. We have a good team that can score a lot of goals and we're consistent on the back end with our defense and all-around game.

"The team has confidence in me and I have confidence in my own game. I expect the best out of myself. I have no idea when I will be (called up). I keep that out of my head and try to control what I can. I want to win as many games as I can and win the Kelly Cup."

Phillips is not bashful about stating his career goals. He said the next step may be the AHL and the Manitoba Moose. If and when that day comes, he'll probably greet it in his usual aw-shucks manner.

While his team was finishing in 11th place at the NCAA Cross Country Championships recently, Smith was in the midst of two days of interviews for the Rhodes Scholar award. Smith is a captain on the Tulsa cross-country team and in track and field runs the steeple-meter for the Golden Hurricane.

Rhodes finalists are selected for our track program.' outstanding their scholarly achievements, character, commitment to others and potential career leadership. Rhodes Scholars receive two years of full financial support to pursue a degree at the University of Oxford in the United Kingdom.

"This is an outstanding honor for Kirk, our university and the athletic program. Kirk has been able to successfully compete for our cross country and track and field teams, and still be in a position academically to win such an acclaimed award that only recognizes 31 other recipients nationally," said Vice President and Director of Athletics Derrick Gragg. "This recognition epitomizes the dedication and hard work of Kirk in the classroom that we want all of our student-athlete to strive to achieve."

A St. Louis, Missouri, native, Smith is a TU Presidential Scholar, an inaugural member of TU's Global Scholars program and a National Merit Scholar. At Oxford, he plans to pursue a doctorate in engineering science.

"This is a great honor not only for Kirk and the university, but for our track and field program as well. I think it shows the type of studentathlete we try to bring into our program," said Tulsa Cross Country and Track and Field Coach Steve Gulley. "Kirk is a great leader and leads by example. He has worked hard all four years, and I think his work ethic speaks the most about him.'

'You get everything Kirk has -110 percent – and I think it shows, not only academically, but athletically too. Through the recruiting process it was very obvious that Kirk was very organized academically and was really committed to pursuing engineering as his academic major," added Gulley. "The ing made it easier to get him to join

The University of Tulsa students and alumni have won more nationally competitive awards than all other Oklahoma colleges combined. Sixty-one percent of Tulsa's student-athletes last year maintained a cumulative GPA of 3.0 or above, while 14 of Tulsa's 17 intercollegiate sports teams had a cumulative 3.0 GPA or better.

Since May, Tulsa student-athletes have now won three prestigious national awards, including soccer student-athlete Katie Riojas receiving the 2016 NCAA Walter Byers Postgraduate Scholarship award, and women's rower Emalia Seto earning the NCAA's 2016 Jim McKay Scholarship.

COWBOY YARDAGE: OSU's Chris Carson gains yardage earlier this season at Boone Pickens Stadium in the controversial game Central Michigan. Despite that finish, the Cowboys have experienced a very fine season as a premier Big 12 team.

TALENT: HURRICANE Tulsa's DiAngelo Brewer rushes for 182 yards earlier this season in the overtime win against SMU. Brewer finished the regular season with 1,320 rushing yards to help TU finish 9-3.

Indexed universal life. Life insurance protection you may need. Competitive cash value accumulation you want.

Want permanent life insurance protection that may accumulate cash value, all while allowing you to access that cash value, while the insurance is in force? Well, now you can have it! Indexed universal life insurance (IUL) can help balance your needs for life insurance and competitive cash value accumulation. IUL's index-linked feature provides more potential for cash value growth than traditional universal life, and the guaranteed floor means less risk than variable universal life. Which means you can spend more time enjoying life's special moments, and less time worrying about how to pay for them.

Vintage-Inspired Toy Mall Opens in B.A.

Ezzat-Ahmadi began collecting action figures at a young age and has never stopped.

"As a kid, it was the appeal of the fantasy of the superhero world that attracted me," he says. "Now, as an adult, it's the nostalgia of that fantasy world."

Over the years, he has built up large collections of Batman, Super Powers, Star Wars and Ninja Turtles memorabilia, to name a few.

In October, Ezzat-Ahmadi, who also opens Computer Trendz computer repair service, opened Vintage Toy Mall, 530 S. Elm Pl. in Broken Arrow.

Over the years, as Ezzat-Ahmadi grew in his collections, he recognized a need in the market for durable plastic covers to best preserve action figures from age and possible hazards, such as damage by children and animals, he says.

In answer to that problem, just under two years ago, Ezzat-Ahmadi created Toy Shield. He began by offering two sizes, with plans to continue growing the size offerings. As Ezzat-Ahmadi continued to

Imerica First' Energy Plan Means More Jobs

During the presidential campaign, Donald Trump stated that he would "implement an 'America First' energy plan that enables the U.S. to become the world's dominant leader in energy production and gets the government out of the way of innovation within all forms of energy."

In 2012, my book "America Needs America's Energy: Creating Together the People's Energy Plan" was released. Since that time, The Energy Advocates and I have gone around the country making speeches before high school and college audiences, and rallying the energy industry at events, including the National Association of Royalty Owners Annual Convention, Shreveport Wildcatters San Association, Antonio Wildcatters Association, Desk and Derrick clubs, International Energy Policy Conferences and roundtables...; interviewed and aired on over 150 radio stations; written weekly and monthly newspaper columns; hosted weekly radio show; and interviewed on numerous media outlets. national awards, read by many outside the energy industry. Our message, America Needs an Energy Plan, a roadmap, has been clear, "future generations are depending on us to keep the American dream alive. We must drive the process, evaluating how we can best leverage our natural resources here at home to ensure long-term energy independence and security".

From President Nixon in the 1970s to President Obama, we have been told time and again that an energy policy is in the works, and a national energy plan is on the way. Will the U.S. adopt an energy plan, as we have been advocating, under a Trump Administration?

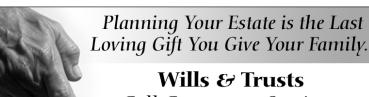

During the campaign, Trump stated that he "supports a major increase in U.S. energy production, including oil and gas in offshore areas and on federal lands. My administration will pursue an America First energy plan that unleashes the vast energy resources of this nation for the benefit of the American people, bringing jobs and a stronger economy. and states, we have too many costly, burdensome, and unwise regulations that are bad for Americans and do little or no good."

Pro-energy means pro-economic growth and pro-jobs! It is time to implement a national energy plan. It is time to tell our story.

EOPLE NOTES

T u l s a Community College has named Mark McMullen as chief financial officer. appointment was approved by the MCMULLEN TCC Board of Regents during the Oct. 20 board meeting

As CFO, McMullen will oversee Oklahoma's largest community college and an annual budget exceeding $140 million with more than 2,000 employees. He was named Interim CFO earlier this year and previously served as controller and director of finance.

Since joining TCC in 2010, he helped facilitate the further automation of the College's purchasing department; worked closely with both the facilities and IT departments to help fund and manage major capital projects; including the renovation of two main campus buildings and the refreshing of college-wide IT hardware and software; and implemented higher standards of financial reporting for both audited financial statements and state required reports.

McMullen has a Master's degree in accounting and financial analysis and a Bachelor's degree in accounting from Northeastern State University. McMullen is also a certified public accountant.

He serves on the Ronald McDonald House Charities board and is co-treasurer. He is also active in his church serving as section leader and a member of the hospitality team.

April Sailsbury, senior vice president of the Broken Arrow Chamber, has been named the Outstanding Chamber Leader of the Year by the Oklahoma Chamber of Commerce Executives (OCCE). Sailsbury has been with the Chamber for over five years and has held the SVP position for 3 years.

SALISBURY

The award recognizes a chamber staff member who has performed exceptional work for their local chamber and community. Sailsbury received the award Nov. 3 during the annual OCCE statewide conference. OCCE Chairman Suzanne Shirey said the award was a significant honor.

During her tenure, Sailsbury has increased member involvement, developed new and meaningful content for members and increased revenue streams for the chamber.

"Our entire Chamber organization salutes April on her selection for this award," SAYS B.A. Chamber President Wes Smithwick. "She is a valued member of this organization and we are proud to have her as a part of our team.'

Law firm Hall Estill has been named as "Highly a Recommended Law Firm" in 2017 by Benchmark Litigation, a leading national law publication. This is the highest category a law firm may achieve through this publication. Additionally, eight of the firm's attorneys have been recognized as "Local Litigation Stars" and one has been named a "Future Litigation Star."

Attorneys Mark K. Blongewicz, J. Patrick Cremin, Phillip L. Free, Jr., J. Kevin Hayes, Timothy S. Posey, Mike E. Smith, Steven W. Soulé and D. Kenyon Williams, Jr. were those selected as "Local Litigation Stars." Attorney John F. Heil III was also selected as a "Future Litigation Star."

Tulsa Performing Arts Center welcomes Adam Foreman as the new director of marketing.

FOREMAN

Broken Arrow Public Schools as the graphic artist and publications specialist. He was responsible for the launch and marketing of the Broken Arrow Performing Arts Center's season of events for the past eight years.

Foreman has served on many boards, including the Broken Arrow Arts & Humanities Council, Oklahoma Music Hall Of Fame, Northeastern State University Alumni Campaign, Friends of Broken Arrow, and the American Cancer Society. He currently serves on the ARTSOK Regional Arts Alliance board.

"I am thrilled to join the Tulsa PAC staff and look forward to enhancing the patron experience at the Tulsa Performing Arts Center, as well as assisting our longtime clients in accomplishing their marketing outreach," SAYS Foreman.

The marketing director position became available after the retirement of Nancy Hermann, who worked for the facility for 23 years.

Rupe Helmer Group announces hirings: recent Vice President of Construction Danny Kennedy, Director Acquisitions and Development Mike Cropper, and Construction Accountant Liz Tobey. Kennedy graduated with a Bachelor of Construction Science from the University of Oklahoma and a Master of Business Administration from Oklahoma City University. His 24 years of experience in the constructionindustry will prove invaluable in his new role at Rupe

Helmer Group.

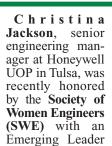

KENNEDY

TOBEY

Prior to his move, Kennedy held the position of vice president of preconstruction for another Tulsabased construction organization. His extensive background in the industry also includes roles such as project management, business development and estimating.

A 1996 graduate of the University of Tulsa, Cropper has 15 years of experience in real estate related fields. Prior to joining the company, Mike was a commercial investment real estate broker, working with real estate professionals across the United States. Before becoming a broker, he spent eight years in wholesale data networking where he led various sales and business development teams.

A 2001 graduate of The University of Central Florida, Tobey has a Bachelor of Science in Finance and over 12 years experience in the field of accounting with a strong emphasis on operations, finance and analysis. Prior to coming to the Rupe Helmer Group, she was working to become a licensed financial advisor. Her passion has always been in finance. Tobey has always enjoyed collaborating with her coworkers and feels Rupe is a great fit for her for that very reason.

Salvation Army Captain Ken Chapman Brings Enthusiasm

By K.J. WEBB Contributing Writer

Since relocating in June 2016 to Tulsa from his command in Jackson, Mississippi, Salvation Army Area Commander and Captain Ken Chapman has formed a strong opinion about the people in the community. He says, "People here are incredibly friendly with an incredible work ethic. It's very impressive and refreshing."

Chapman also points out the deep generosity of the metro Tulsa community. "The resources in Tulsa are tremendous, the community is very philanthropic, and the foundations and organizations are very wellrun. People are quite attuned to helping each other here in this community," he says. "We are dealing with human crises every day, and it's amazing to me how many people here are helping their fellow neighbors in need. It astounds me what people give to us and it speaks so highly of this community that people care so much to

When asked about the differences between the Tulsa Area Command and his previous command in Jackson, Chapman says, "It's a larger operation with a bigger staff and more responsibilities. I welcome it, and it is a blessing to serve here in Tulsa."

When asked if there are misconceptions about The Salvation Army, Chapman says, "We are a Christian faith-based organization and make no apologies about that. Over the years I have discovered that there are some that mistakenly think that we discriminate. We do not. We love inclusively, and we serve others without discrimination. We will tell you our message, but you are not required to accept it"

For 20 years, prior to his full-time work in The Salvation Army, Chapman was president and creative director for Creative Events International and won 22 industry awards as a producer. He was the music producer for the 1996 Atlanta Olympics and executive producer for the Atlanta and Barcelona Paralympics Ceremonies. Chapman also produced the Easter Egg Roll for the Bush Administration at the White House in 2006 and produced Santa's Traveling Workshop, a touring show that brought toys and hope to over 300,000 people affected by hurricane Katrina.

Chapman's knowledge and experience of event planning and production serves him well in his role as Area Commander. For The Chapman begins his 66-mile journey on Dec. 6, sleeping in a cardboard box by the side of the road and completing the walk on Dec. 9 with a ceremony outside the BOK Center at 6 p.m. in 1910," Chapman says. "It was Christmastime and The Salvation Army was operating in 80 countries. Booth wanted to send a message by telegraph to all the officers but it was very expensive, so he sent one word,

The Christmas stunts are exciting (and challenging), but Chapman emphasizes the focus is always on serving others. "We are dedicated to meeting human needs in Jesus' name without discrimination, not only during Christmas but throughout the year," he says.

Chapman offers the "Power of Twelve" program as an example. 'Starting in January, we will start the 'Power of Twelve.' If an individual will commit to giving $12 a month it would feed a hungry person at our Center of Hope Homeless Shelter three nutritious meals every day for a month. When you multiply that by tens of thousands of individuals giving $12 a month, it makes a tremendously powerful and significant impact on those in our community who need food, shelter and help." (Many people do not realize that The Salvation Army operates The Center of Hope, the largest homeless shelter in eastern Oklahoma. Last year the Center of Hope served over 330,000 warm nutritious meals to the hungry and homeless.)

Chapman says, "Not only does it take commitment to giving and serving, it takes all of us working hand-in-hand to give a voice to voiceless and direction to those who have lost their way; to give safe haven to the homeless and helpless."

"My whole life is about what our founder William Booth said Army was operating in 80 countries. Booth wanted to send a sive, so he sent one word, 'Others'. This is how I want to of my life for myself. I was a good Salvationist but I was not living for others. But when the Lord anointed me for preaching I knew what I was created to do what I am doing now. I am working harder than I have ever worked for less money that I have ever made or imagined, but I have found the sweet spot by knowing and doing what God wants from my life. I trust God and know He has my back."

A fourth generation Salvationist, Chapman was born and raised in Savannah, Georgia. He received a Bachelor of Music Education at Armstrong/Atlantic University and taught high school band for 10 years where he won over 300 competition awards and was named Teacher of the Year twice during his tenure. He received his Master's of Music Education and a Master's in Conducting from Georgia State University.

Paula Wood a Nationally-Known Designer

Tulsan is this Year's Philbrook Festival of Trees Collectible Artist

By MELISSA CLARK Contributing Writer

For Tulsan Paula Wood, getting back to work means ditching her alarm clock and high heels.

After retiring from Tulsa Public Schools as the director of School and Community Relations last spring, it was hardly the time to slow down. In fact, it was actually her cue to focus once again on her design business, which she's maintained all along, but now, she can devote more time to it. And today, it shows no signs of slowing down.

shows no signs of slowing down.

For more than 30 years, Wood has been creating jewelry and clothing that has dazzled customers across the country. In addition, Wood works as an interior designer, a personal wardrobe consultant and room designer. She's also a portrait artist specializing in pets, inspired by her own Boston Terriers and French bulldog.

Wood was recently selected as the Philbrook Museum 2016 Festival of Trees collectable pin artist, marking the second time she has received this honor. Philbrook selected Wood in 2012 for this same juried honor. Wood will also participate as a designer in the Foundation for Tulsa Schools' 2017 Designer Showcase home.

"The business all began as a natural transition from my intrinsic love of jewelry and design," says Wood. In the early years, Wood did what many would have thought to be many would have thought to be impossible. She developed and maintained her design business while raising two children as a single mom. She sold her designs to major markets around the country as well as to locally owned businesses. She created more than just designs. She created a business that supported her and her children.

"My original customers included wholesalers throughout the country and local customers including Miss Jackson's, which was probably the last of Tulsa's high-end retailers," she says. "I had trunk shows of my creations in their window displays. It was a great honor. But many of my local customers kept my business on a successful trajectory."

Today, she has the street cred to underscore her demonstrated success. For more than 10 years, Wood hosted a live segment on the News at Noon on KOTV as the shopping expert with then-anchor Glenda Silvey. Her focus was to showcase small and unique shops around Tulsa and to inspire viewers.

Her own creations have garnered the greatest attention for Wood. She has designed clothing and fabric for a manufacturing company, Traditional Trading. In addition, Claudia Imel, a prestigious handbag manufacturer, also chose Wood to create and paint designs as part of its national collection.

"You must listen to trends to if you want to succeed," she says. "I have always had a radar for trends and was determined to maximize this. I think less is more, but I never move past my own passion, which is glam and robust."

She adds that when she's designing jewelry, she uses materials that are unique and out of the box.

"My inspiration comes from some kind of internal and natural tendency. Plus, the world around me has an influence. I have more time now to explore with this relatively new freedom from scheduling and alarm clocks, if you don't count my Boston Terriers and their time clocks," she jokes. "I create best in isolation with doggies underfoot!"

Wood says that when she's creating in "the zone," all forms of designs can occur. The best part about her jewelry designs is that every piece has a name and is oneof-a-kind, never to be duplicated.

"It's all about feeling amazing about yourself and your environment," Wood says. "I want every client to feel empowered by a new design concept or confident about a new jewelry purchase."

If you're not sure what type of jewelry looks right on you, Wood can help with that, too. She offers fashion consulting and can also assist clients with selecting jewelry pieces that are right for them.

"Women who are skeptical of my designs are often persuaded after a personal consultation," she says. "Fear keeps us from exploring new things. I try to dispel this. Jewelry is essential, I believe."

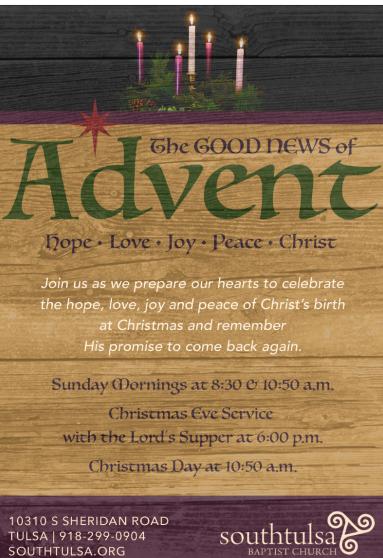

Wood said that if you have a short neck, long earrings can make you look thinner. Your dress or shirt neckline will determine what length of necklace works best. Not sure whether to go with big, bulky jewelry or something simple? Wood says both can work on all body types - depending on the jewelry. Finding the right piece is a matter of trial and error - with assistance.

"If you wear a signature piece of jewelry every day, that's really great, but I think you should explore possibilities."

And for this designing woman, exploring possibilities is what Wood does every day as part of her creative process.

Built in 1922 for the Atlas Life Insurance Company on land leased from the Tulsa School Board for 99 years, it was designed by one of Tulsa's leadarchitectural Rush, Endicott and Rush. With the multi-Continent Building built on the north in 1918 and an anticipated but not yet dows and intaglio signage identifybuilt high rise on the south the (Philtower), architects employed the device of an inverted T shape for the building providing natural light and ventilation (before air conditioning) for the 10 floors on the north and south above the second floor. Not coincidently, one of the main investors in the Atlas Life Insurance Company was Waite Phillips who would build the Philtower in 1928.

The exterior is a combination of stone and red brick. The first and second floors are faced with limestone, the full lot width. The second floor is capped by a metope frieze parapet, which includes

The main lobby of the building is a mall concept. Tall and wide, it runs the entire length of the building with rows of shops on both sides. At its east end is a large clock dominated by a brass kneeling Atlas holding up the world (which is the clock). The mythological Atlas theme is repeated in the typical room door hardware where a tiny brass Atlas holds up the key hole escutcheon or, in some cases, the door knob itself. Midway through the lobby is a monumental stair on the north and three elevators on the south.

The lobby floor is gray marble curved limestone brackets at the with a black marble border. The

Downtown Tulsa Grows Retail RABBIT RUN OPENS

By EMILY RAMSEY Managing Editor

The flurry of development projects in downtown Tulsa is obvious to anyone passing through. Besides the many residential and hotel construction projects currently underway, perhaps the two most anticipated upcoming commercial projects are taking place in the East Village and the Brady Arts District.

Officially opening Dec. 10 is The Boxyard with 39 shipping containers to house 20 businesses, including local retail shop Dwelling Spaces and JoeBots Coffee, which got an early start in the center, opening Nov. 25.

The retail center is a development project by Elliot Nelson and Stowe, partners in Nelson+Stowe Development. The Boxyard is located at the corner of Third Street and Frankfort Avenue.

The main aim of the project is to bring more retail options to the area, says Stowe, but there will be a mix of other businesses as well. Confirmed tenants include Abelina's Boutique; Blue Sky Bank; a barber shop; Boxyard Comics; Downtown Dry Cleaners; Landella jewelry; women's clothing store Modern Mess; Rose Rock Microcreamery; a bar named Open Container; Sole Massage; STEMcell, a science retail store; Sweet Boutique, a candy shop; The Water Co.; and Wirwar, a Belgian Honky Tonk featuring street food, beer and music.

As for The Boxyard's location on the western end of the growing East Village, "we are right in the middle of so much," says Stowe.

Besides the recent addition of various residential options, including Urban 8, The Edge and the East End Village, further commercial projects are coming to the area, including right next door where work is underway to renovate the former KOTV building into suitable commercial space.

"This area has exceeded all of our expectations," Stowe says.

In a few months, the Brady Arts District will welcome its latest completed project, a mixed-use building on Archer Street, spanning the block between Martin Luther King Jr. Blvd and Detroit Avenue.

Work began in 2014 by the George Kaiser Family Foundation housing and studio work space.

to renovate the 75,000-square-foot building that formerly served as a Bank of Oklahoma warehouse.

When the building is fully completed by spring 2017, it will feature 35 Tulsa Artist Fellowship (TAF) work studios, 14 TAF apartments and 10 ground-floor retail spaces.

With nine of the 10 retail tenants confirmed, the building will include Strange Donuts, Goods Bodega, Lone Wolf restaurant and bar, Glacier Confection, Holy Mountain Records, Magic City Books, and Made.

The TAF is a Tulsa-based artist recruitment and retention program that provides artists with a $20,000 stipend and, in most cases, free

NEW RESIDENTIAL: In November, city officials and representatives from Spectacular Homes gathered to celebrate the grand opening of residential development Rabbit Run, located just west of 101st Street and 129th East Avenue.

LUXURIOUS DOWNSIZING: The 27-acre gated development offers homes starting at $275,000 that targets individuals looking to down size their homes while maintaining the quality, luxury, and security of a larger home.
