WILL IS LUCKY TO BE ALIVE

Tumbleweed Smith

Tumbleweed Smith

Travis Will Inman grew up in Colorado City. He worked for a while as a missionary in the Amazon jungles of South America. One night some natives prepared a meal for him.

"Some of it was roasted monkey and fried piranha," says Will. "There was some kind of fermented drink that had the texture of runny oatmeal. It was flavored with ants."

He survived dengue fever. When he was in the Army he broke both hips when he stepped into a hole during a march.

Before he enlisted he was doing missionary work in Mexico when a car broad-sided him when he was riding his bicycle.

"I remember just enough to know that I went over the hood of the car, bounced over the top, then off the trunk and into the street. The people in the car were terrified, thinking if the police came they were going to jail. They scooped me up, put me in their car and drove me to their home. When I woke up I was in their bedroom and there was a bunch of people staring at me. I didn't know where I was or who these people were and racked my brain to find out just what had happened to me."

After some time he was able to remember the address of where he was living. "Once I got it out they were glad to get rid of me. They took me to the house where I was staying and I have never seen them again."

His missionary friend took him to a medical clinic and Will was put on a table. "Suddenly my friend busted into the room, and grabbed me up and we got out of there. The nurse had been ready to inject me with something that looked like honey. My friend told me they were going to cut my head open. Eventually I recovered."

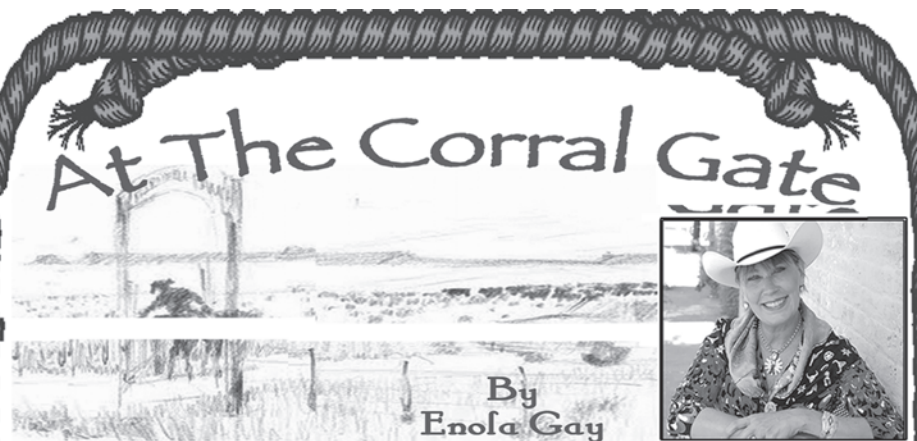

Travis is now with the U. S. Border Patrol stationed in Idaho. He writes in his spare time. Most of his writing is based on his experiences, which he says adds a lot of authenticity to it. He is quite prolific.

"My mind runs constantly. There are about seven televisions in my mind and each one is changing channels constantly. Once in a while one of those channels hangs on something and I'll write down an idea that will eventually become a book."

He wrote a series of four books and self-published the first one, WHEN LOVE CALLED, about a freak phone call that put two people together. He later found a publisher that would do the entire series of books if he would re-write the first one.

"After I put my ego back in place I added new characters, took some out, modified it and re-wrote it. The changes made a slightly different story. It's kinda like when you remodel a house, some of the walls are the same but some are moved and that's the way this story is. It's a different story with a familiar air to it."

Tumbleweed Smith is a historian, folklorist, and humorist who loves Texas and Texans. Contact him at ts@tumbleweedsmith.com

REILLY SPRINGS, A SLICE OF AMERICANA

Hopkins County boasts a place that reflects American life as well as anyplace where the flag flies and families gather. In Reilly Springs, common people enjoy uncommon love and friendliness, and share it with everyone. That's why I call it Reilly Springs, Texas, USA.

Josh Davis
Tribute Artist

A talent Jamboree is a monthly feature at the Reilly Springs Community Center. People come from all over to enjoy whatever is on that month's musical line-up. Showcasing youthful talent such as Josh Davis and other stars-on-the-rise is a hallmark of the Jamboree. And audiences love the famous homemade meals and desserts from the kitchen!

Josh Davis with young Elvis fan, Dakx Garst.

New Stained Glass Window

Meet the new pastor of Reilly Springs Baptist Church. The family arrived this month from West Virginia, and boosted the local population by seven! The quaint church has a bell that was once in an upstairs belfry. The church building combines an old, original section with a newer section attached. Beautiful stained glass windows were created and donated by a church member.

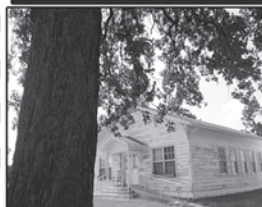

Larry Baxley & Wife Betty

Former preacher Larry Baxley

Former pastor Larry Baxley was a "bi-vocational" preacher...he had a 27 year career with local Coca-Cola Bottling Company while caring for his flock. In 2015, Larry retired from preaching too, after 43 years in the pulpit at this church. His wife Betty told me that Larry received his early education next to the church at the Reilly Springs schoolhouse, and the couple raised their own children at Reilly Springs, too. They shared their wonderful memories with plenty of smiles!

Within walking distance are two more interesting destinations. Flanked by huge, tall cedars, the Reilly Springs cemetery's oldest section contains gravestones of persons born in the early 1800's. An attractive brick wall surrounding the entire grounds was dedicated in 1994 by benefactor Finis Att lease, and built by Ted Boggs. A new cemetery section was opened in recent years with spaces available. Outside the cemetery gates is the former Methodist Church, which is now a privately-owned art studio. With a nod to tradition, the owners preserved the original sanctuary for cemetery-related needs.

REILLY SPRINGS, TEXAS, USA

Consider this Chinese proverb:
"The best time to plant a tree is 20 years ago. The second best time is now."
I hope you have a shady place! Until next week,
I'll watch for you at the corral gate.

Brody Blackmon Leads Texas-Oklahoma Jr. Golf Tournament

Brody Blackmon of Sulphur Springs is leading the Texas-Oklahoma Junior Golf Tournament by 2 strokes after Tuesday's round in Wichita Falls, Texas. He shot a 72 on Monday and a 71 on Tuesday for a total of 143 and leads Zachery Cole of Fort Worth and Mason Overstreet of Kingfisher, Oklahoma, who are at 145. Brody teed off on Wednesday at 1:50. The tournament is being played at Wichita Falls Country Club and Weeks Park Golf Course.

The Texas-Oklahoma Junior Golf Tournament is a family oriented four day event that pulls in players from the far reaches of America and even crosses international borders bringing players from Mexico, Canada, South America and more. Each year approximately 350 players converge on Wichita Falls. There are 147 competing in the boys open championship.

Brody is the son of Randy and Michelle Blackmon of Sulphur Springs and his mother is his caddy this week and probably offering a lot of helpful advice.

The tournament concludes on Thursday.

FAMOUS TEXANS

Dana Andrews

Dana Andrews (January 1, 1909 – December 17, 1992) was an American film actor. He was one of Hollywood's major stars of the 1940s, and continued acting, though generally in less prestigious roles, into the 1980s. One of his best-known roles, and the one for which he received the most praise, was as war veteran Fred Derry in The Best Years of Our Lives (1946).

He was born Carver Dana Andrews on a farmstead outside Collins, Covington County, Mississippi, one of thirteen children of Charles Forrest Andrews, a Baptist minister, and his wife Annis (née Speed). The family subsequently moved to Huntsville, Texas, where his younger siblings (including the late actor Steve Forrest) were born.

He attended college at Sam Houston State University and also studied business administration in Houston, Texas. In 1931, he traveled to Los Angeles, California, seeking opportunities as a singer. He worked at various jobs, including pumping gas in Van Nuys. To help Andrews study music at night, "The station owners stepped in ... with a deal: $50 a week for full-time study, in exchange for a five-year share of possible later earnings."

Andrews signed a contract with Samuel Goldwyn and nine years after arriving in Los Angeles was offered his first movie role in William Wyler's The Westerner (1940), starring Gary Cooper. He was also memorable as the gangster in the 1941 comedy Ball of Fire, again teaming with Gary Cooper. In the 1943 movie adaptation of The Ox-Bow Incident with Henry Fonda, often cited as one of his best films, he played a lynching victim. His signature roles came as an obsessed detective in Laura (1944) opposite Gene Tierney, and as a U.S. Army Air Force officer returning home from the war in the Oscar-winning 1946 film The Best Years of Our Lives. Both films became classics. In 1945 he co-starred with Jeanne Crain in the musical State Fair. In 1947 he was voted the 23rd most popular star in the U.S.

He played a brutal cop in Where the Sidewalk Ends (1950), also with Gene Tierney. Around this time, alcoholism began to derail Andrews' career, and on a couple of occasions it nearly cost him his life on the highway. By the middle 1950s, Andrews was acting almost exclusively in B-movies. A handful of films he started in during the late 1950s, however, contain memorable work. Two movies for Fritz Lang in 1956, While the City Sleeps and Beyond a Reasonable Doubt, and two for Jacques Tourneur, Night of the Demon (1957) and The Fearmakers (1958), are well regarded.

From 1952 to 1954, Andrews starred in the radio series I Was a Communist for the FBI about the experiences of Matt Cvetic, an FBI informer who infiltrated the Communist Party. In 1963, he was elected president of the Screen Actors Guild. Andrews later appeared in a leading role as college president Tom Boswell on the NBC daytime soap opera Bright Promise from its premiere on September 29, 1969 until March 1971. In 1960 he and Efrem Zimbalist, Jr. starred in The Crowded Sky. Fifteen years later, Andrews and Zimbalist appeared in Airport 1975, Andrews playing a businessman pilot who has a heart attack and crashes his plane into a 747 that Zimbalist is flying.

In the 1970s, Andrews was active in real estate, telling a newspaper reporter, "I have one hotel that brings me in $200,000 a year."

Andrews married Janet Murray on New Year's Eve, 1932. Their son David (1933–1964) was a musician and composer who died from a cerebral hemorrhage. Janet Andrews died in 1935 of pneumonia. On November 17, 1939, he married actress Mary Todd, by whom he had three children, Katharine, Stephen and Susan. For two decades the family lived in Toluca Lake. He spent his final years living at the John Douglas French Center for Alzheimer's Disease in Los Alamitos, California.

In the last years of his life, Andrews suffered from Alzheimer's disease. In 1992, at the age of 83, he died of congestive heart failure and pneumonia.

THE IDLE AMERICAN

When Shoe Laces Come Untied

Commentary by Don Newbury

We are broken--or at least badly bent--by breaking news. It raises our blood pressure, confounds our minds and reduces us to hand-wringing, often at the beginning of TV newscasts. Brows furrow, even though we know that much news content is a true reflection of the people we've become--and what we condone.

Confidence is shaken in governments and institutions, as well as in ourselves. We don't feel equal to whatever comes next--and "next" shows up fast. We are rightfully afraid--quivering, quaking and hunkering down. Eye-closing doesn't help; rage abounds--on the road and otherwise. The crowd maddens; life is cheapened.

So, when unscripted scenes suggest some good remains in the world, we want it shared--through broadcast and social media, newspapers and over back fences. Wake the town and tell the people. Sometimes the simplest and kindest gestures make us smile, make us pause and make us grateful....

They occur at unexpected times, often in unlikely places. A friend in San Angelo beheld one recently. She brought her car to a complete stop--as instructed. So did drivers from all four directions--when the crossing guard held up his stop sign near Fannin Elementary School.

Before escorting a kindergarten across the street, he lowered himself to one knee, and helped the lad re-tie his shoe. Here's what makes the vignette even more special. Not one driver honked, there were no threatening gestures, and no peeling of rubber occurred when traffic resumed. For that brief moment, motorists were transfixed by the loving act of an elderly crossing guard, one long since retired from fulltime employment.

Raul Morales, who has hovered over youngsters at "his" intersection for a total of two hours and 45 minutes twice daily for 14 years, is proud of his safety record. No one--not even one--has been injured during his watch. He loves children, understands his role and is doggedly determined to arrive early and stay late, always looking out for the children--and to his 15th year of crossing duty come August....
