Use of Metformin - commonly used as the front-line treatment for type 2 diabetes - improves survival for some breast cancer patients, and shows promise as a treatment for patients diagnosed with endometrial hyperplasia, according to the results of two new studies presented by researchers from the Perelman School of Medicine at the University of Pennsylvania at the American society of Clinical Oncology (ASCO) Annual Meeting.

In one study researchers examined clinical outcomes for 1,215 patients who were diagnosed and underwent surgical treatment for breast cancer between 1997 and 2013. Patients who began using metformin after their cancer diagnosis were almost 50 percent more likely to survive than non-users.

Use of atypical antipsychotics, though effective for treating disorders like schizophrenia, bipolar disorder, and depression, gives patients a heightened risk of developing new-onset diabetes. A new data-mining study, however, has found a way to relieve this side effect. The study, published in Scientific Reports, shows that taking vitamin D ameliorates the risk of developing new-onset diabetes from atypical antipsychotics like quetiapine.

Youth who take Ritalin, Adderall or other stimulant medications for ADHD over an extended period of time early in life are no more at risk for substance abuse in later adolescence than teens without ADHD, according to a new study in the Journal of American Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry. The findings also show that teens who start using stimulant medications for attention deficit hyperactivity disorder for a short time later in adolescence-during middle or high school-are at high risk of substance use.

 New Location: 401 Main Ave NW, Cullman

Many deny the law, claim to keep The Living Word of Elohim, call Christ Lord and themselves Christians yet build their houses on sand (Mt 7:21-27). A wide gulf is between the disciples who follow most church theologies, for their ways are not Biblical yet they call themselves Christians. Christ's disciples (Mt 28:19-20), the first called Christians (Acts 11:26), were given power (Mt 10:1, Lk 9:1-2). Where are the church disciples' proven powers? Many churches claim to teach The Gospel of Christ but cannot agree as one, other than they are not under law and should collect tithing. Most church disciples are taught they're going to heaven by grace, not law. Yet Christ (Heb 13:8) told His Christian disciples that He did not change the law (Mt 5:17-19). He also told His disciples to sin no more (Jn 5:14, 8:11), for he that committeth sin is of the devil. Yet many church Christian disciples are told Christ knows they cannot go without sin (1Jn 3:4-9). Should it be called believing in Christ (Jn 3:16) when He is not obeyed? Christ shall judge all (Mt 12:36-37, Rom 2:6-16, 2Cor 5:10)! So Be It! Ron & Jeri
