Women Thriving, Enjoying Experience In WSC Technical, Male-Dominated Fields

Maci Key wasn't sure of the career field she wanted to pursue until Wallace State's Jonathan Minyard visited Hayden High School to discuss the college's Machine Tool Technology program during her senior year.

Meanwhile, Melanie Patterson was ready for a new challenge after working nearly 20 years in the newspaper industry.

Key and Patterson both decided to pave a unique path as women enrolled in Wallace State's Technical Division programs and haven't regretted the choice one bit.

"I was fascinated by the things Mr. Minyard showed us when he visited my high school. He showed us the different items the program had made, and I was impressed with the attention to detail and how they could take a piece of metal and make something so defined and small," Key said. "I was still trying to figure out what I wanted to do and decided to take a stab at machining. I fell in love with it the first day I walked through the doors."

Key had no reservations joining a program and profession traditionally dominated by males. Since she began at Wallace State, a healthy rivalry has developed between Key and her male classmates.

"Of course I get picked on a lot, but it's all in good fun. If I do anything embarrassing, the guys are definitely going to point it out," Key joked. "They also don't like it when I do things better because it makes them look bad."

While Key is in the early stages of her collegiate career, Patterson is nearing completion of her second act at Wallace State.

Patterson, 42, gained nearly two decades worth of experience in the newspaper industry, fulfilling a variety of roles at stops in Cullman, Gardendale and in multiple cities in Colorado, before determining she needed a change in life. Patterson, who also served in the Army Reserve as a military journalist before beginning her newspaper career, chose to enroll in Wallace State's welding department in the fall of 2015.

The Fairview native wasn't initially sure which Wallace State program she wanted to enroll in until talking with welding instructor Jim Thompson. "I wanted to do something different for a long time. When I was a reporter, I loved human interest stories and I would go out and interview mechanics, welders, carpenters or people who worked with their hands and thought how it would be neat to do those things. I loved their environment," Patterson said. "I looked at the programs at Wallace State and welding did stand out the most, but I wasn't convinced until talking with Jim. I got into it not knowing if I would truly like it or not. I came in for one semester and told myself if I hated it, there wasn't too much lost. I absolutely loved it and have ever since."

Patterson is on track to graduate in May with her degree in welding, making a rare transition from a career in journalism to welding. She was one of three females in the welding department during the fall semester, and like Key, isn't uncomfortable pursuing a male-dominated profession.

"I haven't had a hard time at all. I sort of expected to, but it hasn't happened whatsoever. It may actually be easier being a female because I'm not expected to know as much as a male might know. I can get away with a dumb question here or there and not get ripped for it," Patterson said. "I've never felt like I'm judged in this program and don't feel like less or more is expected of me. I feel like I'm on equal footing. I'm a better welder than some people, and I'm a much worse welder than some people. I just try to do my personal best."

Patterson added that she pondered a welding career upon graduating high school in the 1990's, but decided to pursue a more conventional career for a female at the time.

"Things are different. There is probably more acceptance now of a female in welding than there might have been 20 years ago. It doesn't matter who you are. The best thing you can do is follow your dreams and heart and do more than what is expected of you," Patterson said.

Lloyd Junior Corbin

October 5, 1948 ~ December 25, 2016

We want to thank everyone who prayed for Jun and came to see him while he was so sick. It meant so much to him.

Thank you Bro. Charles Dixon for the memorial service. It was just what he always said he wanted it to be.

Junior and I married almost 49 years ago. My one and only love spent his whole life working to take care of our children and me. Sometimes he worked over 100 hours a week. We love and miss him so very much. He was a great husband, dad, grandad and friend.

He loved our Lord with all his being. He was so sick and tired that God let Jesus take him home to rest. I can't imagine the joy he felt seeing Jesus and his eternal home. The greatest Christmas he ever had, to be home with Jesus and seeing his mother again. Wait on us Jun, we'll be coming soon.

All Our Love, Vickie, Christy, Paige, Lane, Logan, David, Kelly, Kyle, Brandi and Annie

HANCEVILLE DRUG COMPANY

Customer Appreciation and Retirement Celebration

February 4, 2017

Hanceville Drug Company, the oldest drugstore in Cullman County was purchased by Carlie Burkart in 1926. After 50 years of service he sold out to his son Eddie Burkart in 1976. Eddie owned and operated the pharmacy for 41 years until January of this year when he retired and sold the business to his son, Benjamin Burkart, who operates it now. Ethelene Cone, who worked with all three generations of Burkarts during the past 65 years, retired with Eddie in January.

We will celebrate Eddie and Ethelene's retirement with a Customer Appreciation Day and a time for reminiscing on Saturday, the 4th of February. Three generations and 91 years brings with it much history and many memories. Our past and present patients, customers, employees, sales representatives, business and community friends are all a part of that history. We appreciate you like family and invite you to stop by the Soda Fountain at Hanceville Drug Company for a complimentary ice cream cone and cookies. Eddie and Ethelene will be there from 10 am until 2 pm to share memories and well wishes. If you have an interesting story or historical information about the drugstore write it down and bring it with you along with any pictures you might have. Come reminisce about the past, make new memories for the future, and enjoy an ice cream cone from the old-fashioned soda fountain.

HIGHWAY 157 Church of Christ

www.highway157church.com

"Abhor what is evil." Romans 12:9b

You can probably think of a dozen sins that you want no part of. What I mean is that they are wicked. But the problem we face today is limiting what is sin. Remember, you and I don't get to pick what is sin and what is not sin.

In our verse above, God is calling on us to loathe all that He has called sin. When we develop that attitude about sin, we will find ourselves far less tolerant of any sin. We will leave no room for excuses. What we will have is true disgust for everything that God opposes!

That is not an acceptable idea in today's America. Even here in Cullman county, there are things that the Bible calls sin that are socially accepted. In fact, to call them sins is considered hateful and intolerant.

Sins are part of the objective truths of God's will. Today, there may be no greater example of this than the sin of homosexuality. The godless, and even many who call themselves Christians, view this behavior as outside the definition of sin. The godless simply do not care what the Bible says. But those calling themselves Christians do so by making God's Word subject to what they want to define as sin. But that will not change the Biblical fact that practicing homosexuality is a sin! There are a number of passages in both the Old and New Testament that prove this point, but simply read Romans 1:26-27 and it will prove the point.

Man's acceptance of this sin under the banner of "love" does not change objective truth. God's love calls on sinners to repent, no matter the sin. God's love offers sinners forgiveness, not tolerant acceptance of continuing in sin.

So as you live life, see all sins for what they are. They are evils to be loathed. Be convicted and convinced that they are more than just simple little mistakes in judgment deserving just a mild rebuke. Sin is not justified because of love. Taking on an abhorrence of all sin will make it easier to overcome those things we think of as "lesser" sins that seemed to have gotten a grip on us.

The anti-vascular endothelial growth factor drugs ranibizumab and aflibercept, used to treat vision loss from diabetic macular edema (DME), and approximately 20 to 30 times more expensive than bevacizumab, are not cost-effective for treatment of DME compared to bevacizumab unless their prices decrease substantially, according to a study published online by JAMA Ophthalmology. Anti-vascular endothelial growth factor (VEGF) medicines have revolutionized DME treatment. A recent randomized clinical trial comparing anti-VEGF agents for patients with decreased vision from DME found that at 1 year aflibercept (2.0mg) achieved better visual outcomes than repackaged (compounded) bevacizumab (1.25mg) or ranibizumab (0.3mg); the worse the starting vision, the greater the treatment benefit with aflibercept. These agents also vary substantially in cost. On the basis of 2015 costs, aflibercept was $1,850, ranibizumab, $1,170, and repackaged (compounded) bevacizumab, approximately $60 per dose. Considering that these medicines may be given 9 to 11 times in the first year of treatment and, on average, 17 times during 5 years, total cost can be substantial. In 2010, when these intravitreal agents were being used predominantly for age-related macular degeneration, ophthalmologic use of VEGF therapy cost approximately $2 billion or one-sixth of the entire Medicare Part B drug budget. In 2013, Medicare Part B expenditures for aflibercept and ranibizumab alone totaled $2.5 billion.

Almost 2 million people are diagnosed with lung cancer every year worldwide and it is the top international cancer killer. The drug erlotinib is prescribed to between 10-30 percent of patients with non-small cell lung cancer, which accounts for 85 percent of all lung cancer cases. However, the cancer cells quickly develop resistance to the drug's deadly effects. A new study published in the journal Cell Discovery shows that this resistance could be reversed using a simple and cheap diuretic, or "water pill", called ethacrynic acid.

Blasphemous: disrespectful of sacred things; expressing or involving disrespect of Elohim or sacred things. The Holy Bible is the inspired Word of Elohim (2Tim 3:16), not to be altered (Rev 22: 18-19). According to William Tyndale's biography (a must read), he knew The Holy Bible was being betrayed, so he translated it into English (now in most languages) so many could read. For this, he was accused of heresy, publicly strangled and cremated (millions more). This Great Apostasy: the law was voided, the serpent's beguilement (Gen 3:1-24) was disguised and exploited, added the days pagans worshiped their gods, strengthened the wicked (Ezek 13:22), and made it appear as Christ's covenant for Christianity. So Be It!
