5 ESSENTIAL CAR-CARE TIPS

Delaying -- or skipping altogether -- recommended service for your car is a bad idea. Whether drivers simply forget to perform maintenance on their cars, or they ignore manufacturers' recommendations, the bottom line is that they will ultimately pay higher repair costs. Follow these five tips to help ensure your car stays in tip-top shape

Consult your owner's manual

The maintenance recommendations for cars vary from one automaker to another. There is no longer a single standard for any maintenance, including brake fluid. Your best bet for determining necessary maintenance is to consult your owner's manual.

Check your tires regularly

Many Americans don't check their tire pressure regularly, even though it is one of the most important components of car safety. Both tire pressure and tread depth be checked monthly. Once the tread depth is at 4/32" tires should be replaced.

Test your battery

The typical life expectancy of an auto battery is three to five years, with the shorter battery life being for cars that are driven in hot climates. Car owners should have their auto battery tested at the three-year mark and then annually afterward.

Check fluids monthly

All of your car's fluids -- oil, brake fluid, engine coolant, and power steering and washer fluids -- should be checked monthly.

Make sure wiper blades work

For the best visibility in inclement weather, make sure windshield wiper blades are in top condition. Replace blades that streak the windshield or that miss spots. Drivers in snowy areas should consider winter wiper blades, which are wrapped in rubber to reduce ice and snow buildup.
