"Cemetery Memorial Day with Dinner on the Grounds! All families invited to attend!" How many of these quaint country gatherings have you attended over your lifetime? Maybe you were carried in your father's arms and made to sit quietly in the pew while the grown-ups sang the old hymns and whispered "amen" to notions far beyond your grasp. Or maybe, like me, you began to attend after you placed a loved one in a local cemetery. I'd like to share my impressions of a freshly-washed Sunday in May at Reilly Springs, Texas, USA.

The Reilly Springs Cemetery is central to the community, bordered on two sides by county roads and by private land on two sides. Much of the land is still held by descendants of founding families, and though no longer farmed on a large scale, you'll see well-tended yards and productive gardens everywhere as you locate a place to park your car.. Just a stone's throw from the cemetery's brick wall enclosure stand two white frame churches and a sturdy brick community center./schoolhouse... a little cluster of structures which is truly the heart of Reilly Springs! Even newcomers who come to the memorial services on the third-Sunday of May seem to sense the deep history that whispers through the shade trees and beckons along the winding lane. Next door to the south, the Reilly Springs Baptist Church congregation conducts a weekly schedule of meetings. The neighbor to the north side, the Reilly Springs Methodist Church is no longer an active church, but it's pine-paneled sanctuary is opened for the cemetery services each year. Directly across from the cemetery, the old schoolhouse, which housed a school system from 1942-1956, keeps it's doors open as the "home of the Jamboree", playing host to stew suppers and cake walks and a monthly country and gospel music show from the same historic stage that Cash, Carter and Jones once stood upon, Walking around inside this building, you almost expect to hear the strains of it's fiddlers or the laughter of it's students. It's wide hallway is where the "dinner on the grounds" was spread on tables for the long line of hungry folks, offering a hand of friendship and nurturing to it's visitors whether they are old or new acquaintances. Hospitality is like a brand in Reilly Springs, whose historic springs once served as a welcoming stop-over for thirsty travelers passing through the country.

Kerry Bailey succeeded Bobby McDonald in 2017 as President of the Cemetery board and served as emcee of the service. After Bill Owens got everyone singing, Kerry introduced the speaker for the Memorial service. Ted Boggs is the man who constructed the cemetery's brick wall and whose dear mother is resting just inside the front gate. Ted spoke about how he claims Reilly Springs citizenship due to his mother's historic train journey there in about 1918. Nine-year-old Helen Stoezel and her brother Walter were New York orphans who were adopted and raised by the Attlesee family of Reilly Springs, Texas. Their late parents, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Stoezel, had been Austrian immigrants and business owners who owned a brownstone home at 1526 Biaz Avenue in New York City. After their parents' untimely deaths due to illness, Helen and Walter found themselves placed in an orphanage run by the Children's Aid Society, and eventually placed on an Orphan Train heading to the Southern states. This placed them among the over 120,000 children who found permanent homes in this way in 45 states, Canada and Mexico. Ted is proud of his history and the family who made a quality life possible for his mother and uncle. He kept his audience transfixed as he related the heartbreaking yet heart-warming saga of their early lives. After the service was dismissed, some shook hands with Ted and others filed outside to talk and visit. Several wandered into the cemetery to pay respects and others were attracted by the aromas of lunch being spread. I'll bet every one of them took something of real value home with them, and that they will keep fond memories of Reilly Springs, Texas, USA.

Til next week, I'll watch for you at the corral gate!

Mike Norris Repairs Boots and Shoes

Tumbleweed Smith

When I visited Mike Norris at his boot and shoe repair business in Midland, he was putting a new sole on an old pair of boots. He was using a tool called a rougher to get tiny particles on the leather sole to stand up so the glue would give it a good seal.

"This is a Godsend," says Mike. "You've got to rough it up. You have to have the fibers in both the boot and the new sole roughed up to get ready for the glue so it'll hold them together."

Then he takes it over to a huge electric sander to shave off the edges. He says he's just giving it a good trim. Then he takes it over to an ancient machine called a stitcher. He can't say enough good words about it.

"This sews the sole onto the boot. You have the glue to hold it in place, but this finishes the job. Before this was developed, bootmakers had to do this by hand. If they were lucky they might get about two pairs of boots a day. The sole is about a quarter of an inch and you have to put a needle thru the sole and the welting. I love the sound this machine makes."

I recorded that sound. It reminds me of a steam engine starting up, then gets into the rhythm of a sewing machine. He says you have to be careful as you feed the boot through the fast moving needle. It could do some damage. Some of Mike's customers wear boots costing thousands of dollars.

"They wear them out there in the field and come in with oil stains and other stuff on them. We get them back looking good." He uses a 1918 treadle sewing machine every day. Mike admits there aren't many shops like his.

"Unfortunately, boot and shoe repair is kinda on a downturn. Some folks like the throwaway footwear. Most boots in stores are made in China and Warren Buffet owns the companies. But thank God for those who like quality. We put heels and soles on boots and if you want we'll even shine them for you. We used to do luggage and purses, but we don't do that any more."

Mike's father was a bootmaker who learned the trade in San Angelo. He moved to Midland after world war two. Mike grew up in the shop. "Many times I just got in the way. But my sister, brother and I all grew up working with my dad. Twenty years ago my sister and I bought this building here. Now we stay behind about two to three weeks." Mike's dad was his hero.

"I'd like to be just a quarter of what my dad was. He was old school and taught all of us. He was a good man. He quit school in the sixth grade and started making boots. All of a sudden he was the man of the house and he took on that responsibility."

Memorial Day

SALUTE

Let's take time to remember all of the soldiers who have valiantly defended our freedom in all wars and conflicts, suffered injuries and made the ultimate sacrifice for the cause of democracy. May we treasure the rich heritage of freedom they have fought so bravely for.

Memorial Day was originally known as Decoration Day because it was a time set aside to honor the nation's Civil War dead by decorating their graves. It was first widely observed on May 30, 1868, to commemorate the sacrifices of Civil War soldiers, by proclamation of General John A. Logan of the Grand Army of the Republic, an organization of former sailors and soldiers.

By the late 1800s, many communities across the country had begun to celebrate Memorial Day and, after World War 1, observances also began to honor those who had died in all of America's wars. In 1971, Congress declared Memorial Day a national holiday to be celebrated the last Monday in May.

Tom Landry

American Football Player & Coach

Thomas Wade "Tom" Landry (September 11, 1924 – February 12, 2000) was an American football player and coach. He is ranked as one of the greatest and most innovative coaches in National Football League (NFL) history, creating many new formations and methods. He invented the now popular 4-3 defense, and the "flex defense" system made famous by the "Doomsday Defense" squads he created during his 29-year tenure with the Dallas Cowboys. His 29 consecutive years as the coach of one team are an NFL record, along with his 20 consecutive winning seasons.

Landry won two Super Bowl titles (VI, XII), five NFC titles, 13 Divisional titles, and compiled a 270-178-6 record, the third-most wins all-time for an NFL coach. His 20 career playoff victories are the second most of any coach in NFL history. He was named the NFL Coach of the Year in 1966 and the NFC Coach of the Year in 1975. His most impressive professional accomplishment is his 20 consecutive winning seasons (1966-1985), an NFL record that remains unbroken and unchallenged. From 1966 to 1982 Dallas played in 12 NFL or NFC Championship games, a span of 17 years. More impressive is the Cowboys' appearance in 10 NFC Championship games in the 13-year span from 1970 to 1982. Leading the Cowboys to three Super Bowl appearances in four years between 1975 and 1978, and five in nine years between 1970 and 1978, and being on television more than any other NFL team is what spawned the title of "America's Team", a title Landry did not appreciate because he felt it would bring on extra motivation from the rest of the league to compete with the Cowboys.

EARLY YEARS

Born in Mission, Texas, to Ray (an auto mechanic and volunteer fireman) and Ruth Landry, Tom was the second of four children (Robert, Tommy, Ruthie, and Jack). Landry's father had suffered from rheumatism, and relocated to the warmer climate of Texas from Indiana or Illinois. Ray Landry was an athlete, making his mark locally as a pitcher and football player. Tom played quarterback (primary passer and runner, and also punter) for Mission High School, where he led his team to a 12-0 record in his senior season. The Mission High School football stadium is named Tom Landry Stadium and is home to the Mission Eagles and Mission Patriots which also bears the Pro Football Hall of Fame logo.

Landry attended the University of Texas at Austin as an industrial engineering major. Landry had given thought to enrolling at Mississippi State University, where his friend John Tripson was an All-American, but he knew that he would be away from his friends and family. The main driving force in keeping him from enrolling at Mississippi State University was the notion that it would be too long a travel for his parents to see him play college football.

He interrupted his education after a semester to serve in the United States Army Air Corps during World War II. Landry was inspired to join the armed forces in honor of his brother Robert. Robert Landry had enlisted in the Army Air Corps after the attack on Pearl Harbor. While ferrying a B-17 over to England, Robert Landry's plane had gone down over the North Atlantic, close to Iceland. Several weeks passed before the Army was able to officially declare Robert Landry dead. Tom Landry began his basic training at Sheppard Field near Wichita Falls, Texas (now Sheppard AFB), and his preflight training at Kelly Field (now Kelly Field Annex), located near San Antonio, Texas. Landry's first experience as a bomber was a tough one. A few minutes after takeoff, Landry realized that the pilot seemed to be working furiously, and Landry had realized the plane's engine had died. Despite this experience, Landry was committed to flying. At the age of 19, Landry was transferred to Sioux City, Iowa, where he trained as a copilot for flying a B-17. In 1944, Landry got his orders, and from Sioux City he went to Liverpool, England, where he was assigned to the Eighth Air Force, 493rd Squadron in Ipswich. Landry earned his wings and a commission as a Second Lieutenant at Lubbock Army Air Field, and was assigned to the 493d Bombardment Group at RAF Debach, England, as a B-17 Flying Fortress bomber copilot in the 860th Bombardment Squadron. From November 1944 to April 1945, he completed a combat tour of 30 missions, and survived a crash landing in Belgium after his bomber ran out of fuel.

He returned to his studies at the University of Texas in the fall of 1946. On the football team, he played fullback and defensive back on the Texas Longhorns' bowl game winners on New Year's Day of 1948 and 1949. At UT, he was a member of the Texas Cowboys and Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity (Omega Chi chapter). He received his bachelor's degree from UT in 1949. In 1952, he earned a master's degree in industrial engineering from the University of Houston.

PERSONAL LIFE

Landry married the former Alicia Wiggs on January 28, 1949. The Landrys were married for 51 years, until his death, and had three children: a son, Tom, Jr., and daughters Kitty and Lisa.

CAREER

Professional playing career

Landry played in the AAFC in 1949 for the New York Yankees, then moved in 1950 across town to the New York Giants. In 1946, the New York Giants had drafted Landry in the seventh round of the college draft. He was drafted as a "Futures" pick, which was a rule in place at the time that allowed NFL teams to draft underclassmen, and hold their rights until the player had completed his college requirement. In 1948, the New York Yankees of the AAFC also drafted Landry.

Landry had just finished his final college football game, when Jack White, who was an assistant coach for the Yankees, took Landry aside. He offered Landry a contract to play for New York in the AAFC. The contract was for $6,000, plus a $500 signing bonus. Landry used the bonus money to pay for a wedding with his college sweetheart, Alicia.

Landry's career got off to a start after the Yankees' starting punter was injured in the preseason, and Landry performed well in his place. The Yankees shared Yankee Stadium with Major League Baseball's Yankees, and Landry remembered in his autobiography how in awe he was seeing names like DiMaggio, Rizzuto, and Ruffing above the lockers. Landry's career began as a back-up to Yankees star running back Buddy Young. His first start would come against the AAFC's powerhouse, the Cleveland Browns, coached by Paul Brown, and a roster full of future hall of famers like Lou Groza, Bill Willis, and Otto Graham. Landry did not have a good debut as a starter; Mac Speedie, the receiver he was assigned to cover, set an AAFC record for receiving yards in the game. After the game, Landry learned his wife had given birth to their first child, a son.

After the 1949 season, the AAFC folded, and the Yankees were not among the teams absorbed by the NFL. The New York Giants exercised their territorial rights and selected Landry in a dispersal draft. Under the guidance of Giants head coach Steve Owen, Landry got his first taste of coaching. Instead of explaining the 6-1-4 defense to the players, Owen called Landry up to the front, and asked him to explain the defense to his teammates. Landry got up, and explained what the defense would do to counter the offense, and this became Landry's first coaching experience. The 1953 season would be a season to forget, with the lowest point coming in a 62-10 loss at the hands of the Cleveland Browns. This loss would ultimately cost Coach Steve Owen his job, and would again have Landry pondering his future. In 1954, he was selected as an all-pro. He played through the 1955 season, and acted as a player-assistant coach the last two years, 1954 through 1955, under the guidance of new Giants head coach Jim Lee Howell. Landry ended his playing career with 32 interceptions in only 80 games, which he returned for 404 yards and three touchdowns. He also recovered 10 fumbles (seven defensive), returning them for 67 yards and two touchdowns.

NFL COACH

For the 1954 football season, Landry became the defensive coordinator for the Giants, opposite Vince Lombardi, who was the offensive coordinator. Landry led one of the best defensive teams in the league from 1956 to 1959. The two coaches created a fanatical loyalty within the unit they coached that drove the Giants to three appearances in the NFL championship game in four years. The Giants beat the George Halas-led Chicago Bears 47-7 in 1956, but lost to the Baltimore Colts in 1958 and 1959.

In 1960, he became the first head coach of the Dallas Cowboys and stayed for 29 seasons (1960-88). The Cowboys started with difficulties, recording an 0-11-1 record during their first season, with five or fewer wins in each of their next four. Despite this early futility, in 1964, Landry was given a 10-year extension by owner Clint Murchison Jr. It would prove to be a wise move, as Landry's hard work and determination paid off, and the Cowboys improved to a 7-7 record in 1965. In 1966, they surprised the NFL by posting 10 wins, and making it all the way to the NFL championship game. Dallas lost the game to Lombardi's Green Bay Packers, but this season was but a modest display of what lay ahead.

Throughout his tenure, Landry worked closely with the Cowboys general manager, Tex Schramm. The two were together during Landry's entire tenure with the team. A third member of the Cowboys brain trust in this time was Gil Brandt.

In XIII rematch, Cowboys linebacker Thomas "Hollywood" Henderson famously stated, "Terry Bradshaw couldn't spell c-a-t if you spotted him the C and the T." Landry recalled in his autobiography how he cringed when he heard that, because he did not feel that Bradshaw needed additional motivation in a big game like the Super Bowl.

Jim Erkenbeck and special-teams coach Mike Solari. Some suggested that Schramm's moves divided the coaching staff, a plan to first undermine and then dismiss Landry.

Two weeks later on February 26, 1989, Landry was dismissed as head coach, shortly after Bright sold the team to Jerry Jones. Bright had suffered major losses in his banking, real estate, and oil businesses in the last three years; during the savings and loan crisis, Bright's Savings and Loan was taken over by the FSLIC, forcing Bright to sell the team. During a more solid economic climate, Bright possibly could have held on and Landry may have remained as coach. However, in 1990, Bright said he wanted to fire Landry himself as early as 1987, but Schramm told him that there was not a replacement ready to take over yet. Jones hired Jimmy Johnson, his former teammate at the University of Arkansas, who had been serving as coach of University of Miami football team. Schramm was in tears at the press conference which announced the coaching change, and he was forced out as general manager shortly afterwards; Schramm and Landry had been together for 29 years since the Cowboys' inception in 1960. When Landry met with his players two days later to tell them how much he would miss them, he began to cry, and the players responded with a standing ovation.

THE IDLE AMERICAN Countdown to Greatness...

Commentary by Dr. Don Newbury

Folks given to dreaming some 500 years ago could never have imagined the many dozens of major historical occurrences linked to Galveston Island from then until now. Keep in mind that many historians believe the island was discovered in 1519, so it's time to begin planning celebrations for the 500th anniversary at hand.

A major milestone in September, 2018, will be a welcome prelude to the celebration. That's when Carnival Cruise Lines assigns its newest and largest vessel, Carnival Vista, to Galveston.

This announcement underscores the corporation's ongoing confidence in the Port of Galveston, which in just 17 years has become Carnival's second-busiest cruise port, and now is number four for all lines in the USA....

In the fading years of the last century, only incurable optimists went public with positive thoughts about the viability of cruising from Galveston. In 2000, Carnival launched Galveston's first year-round cruise program with a smaller ship that served slightly more than 100,000 guests that year. Now, the island is home to three CCL vessels carrying guests annually.

We boarded the Vista recently in Miami, where it began US cruises several months ago. It was a spring break week, so bunks were used to accommodate the 1,700 children included among the some 4,700 guests. (Add the 1,450 staff, and the total count exceeded 6,200.) The cruise dazzled in every way. With expanded dining specialties, new activities and additional attractions, the Vista owns many "firsts." Its 187-seat IMAX Theatre is the only one afloat, and the new SkyRide is favored by guests of all ages. (SkyRide is something akin to bike-riding since pedaling is required.) It is atop the Vista, high above the top deck and even higher above the deep blue sea. With two go-mobiles on suspended tracks, riders may compete for racing victories, fastest laps or perhaps set "gazing records" of spectacular views....

Much about the Vista is subtle. The centerpiece is a colorful, pattern-changing pedestal extending skyward from the ship's center. Truly "gaze-worthy."

There's nothing new about deck numbers imprinted on carpet near elevators. A "first," though, is the "dot" placed at the end of deck numbers "6" and "9." (Who knows? Maybe this is helpful if, perchance, guests walk on their hands, or are otherwise contorted.) Captain Stefano Battinelli has more than 30 years with Carnival, and obviously is aware that many guests are first-time cruisers. Early on, he heard guests discussing unfamiliar nautical terms, like "forward and aft," etc. Captain Battinelli made a PA announcement: "Forward is the 'pointy' end of the ship." Such explanations should be helpful in Texas, where inordinate numbers are cruising for the first time. (I still have a hard time accepting a widely-held opinion that more than 75% of Americans have never cruised.)....

Miami remains the mecca for the industry. That's where Carnival began scheduled cruising 45 years ago.

Galveston, with its rich history, provides reasons for visitors to spend extra time there before ending cruise vacations.

Many attractions warrant repeat visits. Besides, there's much to be said about arrival at cruise ports a day or more prior to departure....

Each cruise provides accounts of new experiences. Jim and Trish Demers of Annapolis, MD, provided one of the best, or maybe credit should go to their son. The couple was scheduled to fly to Miami on Friday prior to Saturday cruise departure.

Weather in the northeast cancelled hundreds of flights, including theirs. They were forlorn until their son INSISTED on driving them to Miami. Making only gas, rest and food stops, they arrived 20 minutes before the ship left, covering 1,083 miles in about 15 hours. Let's applaud a remarkable son....

While in applause mode, let's hear it for Galveston leaders who held out for the city's becoming a cruise port.

They are true visionaries.

We cruise lovers are the beneficiaries of their dogged determination that made it happen....

Class of SULPHUR SPRINGS 2017 HIGH SCHOOL

Graduation is getting a diploma or academic degree or the ceremony that is sometimes associated with it, in which students become graduates. Before the graduation, candidates are referred to as graduands. The date of graduation is often called graduation day. The graduation ceremony itself is also called commencement, convocation or invocation. Normally, the ceremony and name apply to high school and above (the next ascending levels being Associate's, Bachelor's, Master's, and Doctorate). In the United States of America, graduations for elementary school or even kindergarten have been a fad of recent years. When ceremonies are associated, they usually include a procession of the academic staff and candidates and a valediction. At the college and university level the faculty will usually wear academic dress at the formal ceremonies, as will the trustees and degree candidates.
