LIGHT A CANDLE OF LOVE.
Since Christmas is a time for remembering, we are lighting a candle in our funeral home for all the families we have served this past year.
As you enjoy this Christmas season, we hope this gesture will serve to remind you of Holidays past and the importance of family.
May the quiet peace of Christmas fill your heart and home.

On Dec. 17, the Albion High School FFA delivered 33,000 pounds of food to Community Action. The produce, ham, eggs and bread was generously donated by the local farming community and distributed to local food pantries and families. This is the eighth year the group has collected food from local farmers.

Thank you to the following local businesses and farms that made this annual event possible: Orleans County Farm Bureau-$1,500 donation for purchase of hams; Triple G Farms- potatoes; Root Brothers- cabbage; Nesbitt Farms- apples; Kreher's- 900 dozen eggs; Kludt Brothers- squash; Martin Farms-squash; Calls Farms- potatoes; Jeff Partyka-squash; Yunkers- onions and cabbage; Starowitz Farms- cabbage; Torrey Farms-potatoes, cabbage and onions; Costanza Bakery- bread; Orchard Dale Fruit- apples; Navarra's- bean crates; Save-A-Lot and Tops-banana boxes; Paneks- canned beans and corn and use of their truck to transport the food; Town of Oakfield- use of a wagon.

Emilie Barleben, Kendall Derisley and Clara Stilwell load potatoes on the truck.

FFA students took a moment before they delivered to Community Action to say thank you to all who contributed.

The Mayor and The Board of Trustees of the Village of Albion would like to extend best wishes for a joyous holiday season and a happy, healthy, and prosperous New Year to the entire community.

A NON-NATIVE SPECIES

By Douglas H. Domedion

Indoor cats make great pets!

I let Kay, our little Jack Russell, out on a her rope on the back porch the other morning to do her business. Next thing I know she is trying to get under the wheelchair ramp to the back porch and then suddenly a cat, that some irresponsible person must have dropped off, came charging out from under the ramp spitting and slashing at Kay. Fortunately Kay didn't receive any damage before the cat took off or I would have had to take her to the vet and then ended up with good bill to have her checked out as I have no idea if this cat had any shots or any diseases.

Cats make nice house pets and they are relatively easy to take care of. However when left to roam freely outside they become a problem to wildlife, are susceptible to diseases and even a threat to our health. It is estimated that cats kill over 2 million birds in the U.S. every year plus an even higher total of small mammals. Yes, they kill a lot of mice, rats, voles and shrews, but they also kill mammals as large as rabbits and squirrels. I know you're thinking "Well, killing mice and rats is a good thing," but not always. When they get to roam free out in the fields and woods they are taking food away from native species like hawks, owls, foxes and etc. Some species like the endangered Short-eared Owl and Northern Harrier depend on those small mammals so free roaming cats are taking away food from native species that are already having problems surviving.

By nature a cat is a instinct predator, triggered by movement such as a mouse feeding in the grass or a bird hoping around on the ground. This is why cat owners have "movement" toys for their cats. My son has a cat that just loves to chase a feather Jeff has on a string and stick that is swung around for the cat to chase. This same instinct is what triggers a cat to attack and kill when he sees a bird outdoors even though he maybe fat and well fed. He may even catch a bird or small mammal and bring it home but not eat it.

Killing birds and small mammals is not the only problem a free ranging or feral cat can cause. They are great disease carriers with several that can effect humans. Rabies is of course a real concern as it is fatal and with cats that are free ranging we have no way of knowing if that animal has had a recent rabies shot. A bite can transfer that virus to humans without them ever knowing until it is to late.

Another disease of concerned is toxoplasmosis, which can cause infections to humans. It is a parasite that is found in cat feces and can cause headaches, fever, sore throats and muscle pain to healthy folks but is of particular concern to pregnant women and those with compromised immune systems.

Still another is bartonellosis, also known as "cat scratch fever." Infection can be given by a cat licking, sneezing, spitting or biting or scratching another cat or human. In humans it can cause fatigue and fever, headaches and pimple-like bumps on the scratch site.

Ringworm is a fungal infection cats can transferred to humans or other animals by spores that are left on dishes and bedding. These spores can remain active for up to a year which makes it a difficult disease to eradicate.

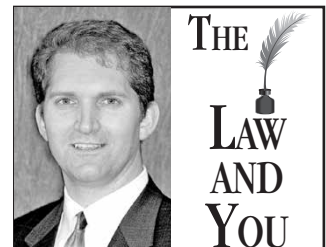

Feral cats and free-roaming cats are a problem today for the above reasons and because their populations are growing especially in the bigger cities. A program of "Trap, Neuter and Return" is being tried in some cities but doesn't seem like a good control. I mean having the type of management for dogs instead of licensing, required shots and owner responsibilities wouldn't be very effective so why should it work for cats.

Come to think of it, why don't we have the same deal for cats? How come cat owners are not held responsible for their pets or required to license them and have updated shots? Maybe if that was the case we wouldn't be seeing so many feral cats. As it is now many folks get a cute kitten, have them for awhile and then decide they don't want them any more and dump them off somewhere to be a problem for someone else.

Cats make nice pets but they need to be taken care of properly just like any other pet. Cats either need to be kept indoors and controlled when left outdoors. I have friends who let their cats outdoors but they either use a leash or cage type pen to control them. Oh wait a minute, that takes a little effort.

Folks who really like their cats are just asking for trouble if they let them run loose where foxes, coyotes and diseases can get them. The folks that "dump" them off when they are tired of them should have never got them or any other pet in the first place as they are just not mature enough to accept responsibility.

ATTORNEY AT LAW

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

If you are thinking of going into business for yourself, bear in mind that incorporation provides liability protection and tax advantages. In fact, protection of personal assets is the primary reason for incorporating. If an incorporated business fails, an owner's personal assets may be protected from creditors. The owner of an incorporated business would have to apply all of the corporation's assets toward satisfying its debts, but no one could come after the owner's house, car, or personal bank accounts to pay outstanding claims. Without this protection, the owner's assets and the company's assets would be one and the same. Incorporation does not cover personal negligence, however. If a patient dies, the physicians may be sued whether or not they are incorporated.

If you have any questions about today's column, or about any aspect of the legal system, then please call the Law Office of MACK & PACE, our lawyers have spent years dealing with a wide variety of issues, including those that deal with divorce, separation decrees, adoption, wills, estates, trusts, and all business issues. Remember, it is important to get your attorney involved ASAP on all legal matters. Call right away to make an appointment.

HOLLEY HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS INTERACT WITH THEIR COMMUNITY THIS HOLIDAY SEASON

In late November, Holley High School students volunteered to set up the elementary primary gym for the Holley Days of Shopping event on Dec. 1-2. The students worked with social worker Samantha Zelent to bring donated gift items to the elementary school, sort them into categories and arrange them on tables, floors, shelves and the stage so that district families could shop for holiday presents. The shopping event helped 53 families, including 141 children, receive gifts this year. Any remaining items went to the Community Center. "A big thank you to those who donated their time, money and/or gifts to make this event so wonderful," said Erica Bailey, elementary school social worker and coordinator of Holley Days of Shopping. "All who attended were very appreciative of the opportunity. Several stated that without this support, their children would not be receiving gifts this year. I am proud to be part of a wonderful district that truly cares for its community."

Many of the students who volunteered their time at the shopping event are part of the new Interact Club at Holley Middle School/High School (MS/HS). This group is sponsored by the Holley Rotary Club. About 30 students in grades 7-12 have joined in its first year. Their focus is on volunteer work at both local and global levels. They have already volunteered at the Rotary Beefeater dinner, and shopped and wrapped presents for seven Holley children, using money provided by the Rotary Club. They are assisting teachers at the elementary school, and they will help with a spaghetti dinner in January to benefit a Holley family. They plan to volunteer at a soup kitchen soon and conduct a prom dress drive in the winter for the MS formal dance. They're also planning a book drive in the spring, where books will be shipped to children in another country. Rotary member John Heise is the Rotary Club liaison and Holley MS/HS Social Worker Samantha Zelent and art teacher Evinn Neadow are the staff advisors. "Whatever volunteer work the students want to do or ideas they have to help, we make it happen," said Zelent, who is Heise's daughter and very familiar with Rotary Club efforts over the years. "This is a great opportunity for students to interact with the community, and it empowers them to help meet some of the needs they've identified in their environment that need support."

Zelent has been excited to see so many students who want to participate in the Interact Club. She has also been happy to see the support from Holley alumni to provide donations for the Holley Days of Shopping and to sponsor about 30 students this holiday season. "Former students who have graduated in the last five years have been contacting me asking how they can help," said Zelent. "Many of them are still going to school or just getting started in their careers, but they still want to give back. Isn't that fantastic? We live in such a caring community."

Successfully Fend Off Workplace Fatigue

Fatigue can prove a formidable foe to anyone. Exercise enthusiasts and couch potatoes alike periodically can suffer from fatigue, which can affect performance at work and one's relationships with friends and family. Fatigue can be temporary or chronic, and while quick fixes like an energy drink might work for a little while, such solutions may only mask fatigue for a brief period before it returns once the stimulant wears off. Many times fending off fatigue involves making some lifestyle changes that can boost your energy over the long haul and make fatigue a distant memory.

- Eat breakfast no matter what. According to a study published in the International Journal of Food Sciences and Nutrition, a high-fiber, high-carbohydrate breakfast can increase alertness between breakfast and lunch, a period of time during which many professionals begin to feel fatigue settling in. Whole-wheat toast or a bowl of high-fiber cereal can pack an energetic punch that lasts all the way to lunchtime.

- Choose high-energy snacks. One of the problems many people have when dealing with fatigue is how they choose to combat their feelings of sluggishness. Eating a candy bar from the office snack machine might seem like the ideal energy booster, but a sugar boost does not last very long. Chances are your feelings of fatigue will return sooner rather than later.

- Give yourself a break. Burning the midnight oil might be necessary, but failing to take breaks throughout the day will likely exasperate any feelings of fatigue. That's because taking periodic breaks throughout the workday has been proven to be very effective at combating fatigue. A study conducted at Louisiana State University compared a trio of different work schedules for workers who used a computer. Those who took brief, frequent breaks were better at fighting fatigue and more productive at work than those who did not. A short break of 5 to 10 minutes can be enough to provide an immediate energy boost and fend off feelings of fatigue.

- Hit the road, Jack. Another way to effectively fight fatigue is to get walking. A decades-old study conducted by a researcher at California State University, Long Beach, found that walking briskly for 10 minutes provides people with more energy than eating a candy bar. Though the candy bar led to an initial energy boost, that boost died down within an hour, whereas the boost provided by a brisk walk increased energy levels for roughly two hours. Get up and walk around the office or take a brisk walk around the block or the parking lot of your office complex. You'll come back to your desk refreshed and ready to resume your workday.

Fatigue is no laughing matter for many men and women. But a few tried and tested fatigue-fighting methods can increase your energy and productivity.

Do you have HEEL pain or ARCH pain?

HEEL SPUR SYNDROME/PLANTAR FASCITIS is a common problem among people who are active. It starts as a dull intermittent pain in the heel which may progress to a sharp persistent pain. Classically, it is worse in the morning with the first few steps, after sitting, after standing, or after walking.

- Plantar fasciitis often begins with irritation and tearing of the fibrous band of tissue on the bottom of the foot, which may eventually result in the formation of a heel spur.
- Contributing factors: flat pronated feet, high arched feet, poor shoe support, increased age, sudden weight increase, increased activity level, family tendency.
- Approximately 2-3 times your body weight of force is exerted on each foot with walking. Flexible, non-custom molded arch support found at those advertised shoe stores cannot support these forces and usually do not provide long-lasting relief, do not come with a lifetime warranty, and are typically more expensive than custom-molded ones made by our office.
- 95 percent of our patients symptoms are resolved with conservative treatment, avoiding surgical intervention.
- We also offer surgical procedures with the best post-op success rates using Endoscopic Plantar Fasciotomy techniques and EPF resulting in minimal incisions and scarring, immediate ambulation and often back in a shoe in one week.

If you can't remember when your feet didn't hurt, now is the time to give us a call!

Preowned Items Can Be Good for the Environment

Embracing preowned items can save shoppers money and benefit the environment.

Purchasing used items may be good for the wallet, but such purchases also can benefit the environment. Used items go on sale every day, whether they're preowned cars or used clothing. Saving items from landfills prematurely reduces the number of new things that need to be manufactured, saving energy as well as money.

There are so many ways to make the most of used merchandise and find the things you need. Here are some ways men and women concerned about the environment can look to preowned items to benefit the planet and their pocketbooks.

Organize a tag sale

Garage sales, tag sales, yard sales, and flea markets are great places to find preowned items. Men and women who are both bargain- and eco-conscious can organize their own neighborhood sales where several houses around the neighborhood pool their items for one large sale. Bargain hunters can then peruse the collected merchandise and feel good knowing their purchases are benefitting the environment.

Scout local garage sales

Garage sales are another way to bargain hunt and benefit the environment at the same time. Who knows what treasures you may be able to find at nearby garage sales? When shopping, set a spending limit and look for certain items you need, such as a bicycle or furniture. You may be surprised to find a quality item that costs much less than a brand new store-bought product.

Scan local advertisements

Church bulletins, newspaper classified ads and online bullet boards typically boast a number of items for sale, many of which are being sold at a fraction of the cost of new items. Before embarking on shopping trips, check these advertisements to see if there are any preowned items that meet your needs.

In addition, there are a number of social media groups that enable members to advertise their items for sale. Others are encouraged to inquire about the sales and make their own offers. Though it might take some effort, it is possible to get brand-name used merchandise for less.

Visit consignment stores

Consignment shops are popular places to buy preowned items. These stores take donations or offer items for sale on consignment, which means once sold the person who provided the item gets a portion of the sale.

When browsing the racks of these stores, it's possible to discover high-end items mixed in with less expensive items. Shoppers may find designer handbags and clothing for much less than they would sell at retail, especially if the pieces are one or two seasons old. Relying on these stores to supplement classic wardrobe pieces is cost-effective and beneficial to the environment. If you regularly shop consignment stores, you can develop a rapport with the shopkeeper, who may alert you when new items are available.

Arrange private swaps

Many people find it advantageous to host their own swaps of clothing and other items among friends or neighbors. Parents of school-aged children find that sharing clothing helps them to save a good deal of money. Sporting equipment or bicycles the kids may have outgrown can be shared with parents of younger children.

When proposing a swap with fellow parents, inquire as to whether anyone has items that they no longer need or could be seeking things that you have. Parents may be anxious to rid themselves of items or take items off your hands.

Garage sales, private sales, consignment stores, and private swaps are great ways to find preowned items, which is not only economical but good for the environment as well. ■

Starting Your Second Act: How to Choose Your Next Career

The days when professionals would spend their entire professional lives with a single firm are largely a thing of the past. In fact, many people not only switch companies multiple times before retirement, but some even switch professions before retiring.

As exciting as it can be to pursue a new career, men and women over 50 know that such a decision is not without risk. While younger professionals with few obligations can often handle bumps in the road on their way to a second career, older professionals making a similar move often must consider the potential effects such a pursuit might have on their families, finances and futures, including their retirements. But as difficult as it may seem to pursue a second career after your fiftieth birthday, there are steps men and women over 50 can take when pursuing a new career to ensure their second act is as successful as the first.

- Decide what you want, and not just what you want to do. The desire to pursue a second career no doubt stems from more than just dissatisfaction with a current profession. Many people switch jobs or even careers because they find their current careers too demanding, leaving little time for family or hobbies that have nothing to do with work. If what you really want is more time at home or more time to pursue a particular hobby, then keep this in mind when looking for a second career, and make sure that career won't demand too much of your time. For example, if your goal in finding a new career is to get more work-life balance, then starting your own business, which can require long hours at the outset and even after the business has established itself, might not be for you. But if what you want is a more challenging career and to be your own boss, then you will likely find the cost of achieving that goal, even if that cost is more demands on your time, is worth it.

- Assess your skillset. Professionals over 50 have lots to offer, but it's still important for such men and women to make an honest assessment of their skillset and find a career in which those skills are transferable. Some men and women might want to pursue a second career that will make little to no use of their skillset, and that's perfectly alright. But extra schooling might be necessary in such situations, and going back to school oftentimes requires a considerable commitment of both time and money. For those who simply want to put their existing skills to use in a different field or environment, assess those skills and look for lines of work in which they figure to be especially valuable. If there are any particular aspects of your current job that you want to avoid in the future, consider that when assessing your skills and choosing a second career. Even if they don't know it, established professionals over 50 have many transferable skills, and such skills can be a considerable asset when pursuing a second career, especially when those skills have been assessed and can be applied to a new profession.

- Make a trial run. Nowhere does it say that professionals can't take a trial run at a second career while still fully engaged in their first career. In fact, testing the waters before you jump in is a good way to gauge your interest in a potential second career and how well your skillset applies to that field. A trial run, which can be conducted by volunteering with a nonprofit organization or through a part-time job or simply offering your services to a company free of charge in exchange for a chance to learn how the business operates, can shed light on the inner workings of a particular industry, showing you how things work behind the curtain. Testing the waters may reaffirm your belief that a certain line of work is for you, or it might send you back to the drawing board. Either way, it's valuable experience that may reassure you that whatever decision you ultimately make is the right one.

- Don't go it alone. Switching careers after 50 carries some risk, but it's certainly a risk that many before you have been willing to take. If you know any people, be it a friend, family member or former or even current colleague, who has reinvented themselves professionally, then speak with these people and ask for any advice they might have. If you know you want out of your current career but aren't quite sure of what you want to do next, those who have faced a similar fork in the road may be able to help you narrow down your options. The notion of changing careers is exciting, and you can expect your personal and professional confidantes to share your excitement and be willing to help you in any way they can.

Making a career change after 50 can be a risky yet ultimately rewarding move, especially for those men and women who take a thoughtful approach to finding their second careers. ■

Explaining 401(k) Fees

Many men and women are aware of the importance of retirement planning, and that awareness leads many to enroll in employer-sponsored 401(k) programs. When perusing their quarterly statements, men and women may notice they're being charged certain fees, which can add up over time, prompting some investors to wonder just what they are paying for.

- Individual fees: Individual fees may or may not be charged each quarter, as these fees are typically only instituted when the account holder initiates certain processes, such as taking out a loan on his or her 401(k). Such actions incur fees, and it's important that investors know just how much those fees are before taking any actions with regard to their accounts.
- Investment fees: Investment fees, sometimes referred to as investment management fees, tend to be the most expensive fees. These are the fees you are paying the company who handles your 401(k) to manage your funds, and they typically are assessed as a percentage of assets invested, meaning the more your 401(k) grows, the more you will pay in investment fees. These fees are automatically deducted from your investment returns.
- Administration fees: Typically noted as plan administration fees on your quarterly statements, administration fees are the costs associated with the day-to-day operation of your plan. Record keeping, accounting, legal and trustee services are all paid for under the umbrella of administration fees. Account holders now get more bang for their bucks with regard to administration fees, which typically cover electronic access to plan information, daily valuation and on-line transactions in addition to the services that have been provided for years.

When considering fees associated with their 401(k) retirement plans, it's important that investors recognize these fees will escalate as their investment returns increase. Recognizing that and budgeting for such fees is an important part of retirement planning. ■

Chanukah

Chanukah is a Jewish celebration that lasts for eight days and nights and commemorates the victory of the Maccabees over the Greek-Syrian ruler Antiochus IV Epiphanes roughly 2,200 years ago. Chanukah is called the "Festival of Lights" in recognition of the day's supply of oil that somehow burned in the temple for eight days. Chanukah celebrations are rife with tradition. Families eat latkes and sufganiyot, which are fried in oil to commemorate the miracle of the oil. Children are rewarded for their Torah studies by receiving Chanukah money and presents during the eight-day celebration, which also includes a recitation of the entire Hallel. Individuals light a special nine-branched candelabrum called a menorah. In ancient times, oil was used to light the menorah, but nowadays many Chanukah celebrants use candles to light their menorahs, which are typically placed in prominent spots in their homes.

Grape Tomato and Blue Cheese Tart
 Serves 6

Crust:
 1 cup all-purpose flour
 4 ounces cream cheese, chilled and cut into 1/2-inch pieces
 8 tablespoons unsalted butter, chilled and cut into 1/2-inch pieces
 1/4 teaspoon salt
 1/8 teaspoon cayenne pepper

Topping:
 4 ounces creamy blue cheese, finely crumbled
 2 cups grape tomatoes, halved length-wise (see note)
 2 teaspoons olive oil
 1 teaspoon balsamic vinegar
 Kosher salt
 1 1/2 tablespoons chopped flat-leaf parsley
 2 green onions, chopped to include 2 inches of the green parts

1. Arrange a rack at a center position and preheat the oven to 375 F. Have ready a 9-inch tart pan with a removable bottom.
2. For the crust: Place the flour, cream cheese, butter, salt, and cayenne in a food processor; pulse until the mixture resembles coarse meal. Remove and knead the mixture into a smooth mass and then press it with your fingers in an even layer into the bottom (not up the sides) of the tart pan. Smooth the dough with the back of a spoon. Freeze the tart shell for 15 minutes to firm, and then bake the crust until golden brown, 30 minutes. Remove the tart shell from the oven and cool for about 5 minutes but retain oven temperature.
3. For the topping: Sprinkle the cheese evenly over the crust. Arrange the tomatoes in a circular pattern and in a single layer over the cheese, cut-sides up. You may not need to use all of the tomatoes. Whisk together the olive oil and vinegar and drizzle over the tomatoes, and then sprinkle with salt. Place the tart on a baking sheet to catch any drippings and return to the oven and bake until the cheese has melted and the tomatoes are hot, 10 to 12 minutes.
4. Cool the tart for 5 to 10 minutes and then remove the sides of the tart pan. (The tart can be made 3 hours ahead. Leave the tart cool at room temperature and reheat in a preheated 350 F oven until warmed through, 8 to 10 minutes.)
5. Mix together the parsley and green onions, and sprinkle over the tart. Cut the tart into 6 wedges and serve. ■
