For a limited time -- get 3 bonuses with each map

BONUS #1 GUIDEBOOK: Pinpoint the best fishing in New York with this valuable guide. Easily locate over 3,000 streams and 1,200 lakes shown on the "Stream & Lake Map." Your map guide will take you to the top 1,123 select water for 19 species of gamefish.

Armed with the information in this new and exclusive 24-page report--you could be in for the fight of your life.

RAVE REVIEWS

"It is in showing where to find out-of-the-way trout streams that makes the map such a treasure to the fisherman."

—Joe Gordon, TRIBUNE-DEMOCRAT, Johnstown, PA

"I have one of the original Higbee's Stream Map of Pennsylvania on my wall behind my desk. It's the best thing available as far as streams are concerned. I use it all the time for reference. I don't know of anything more extensive and it is the most accurate map out there as far as streams are concerned."

—Dave Wolf, PA Fish and Boat Commission

A huge heartfelt thanks from the bottom of our hearts to our families, friends, fire companies, churches, organizations, clubs, businesses, Albion and Medina Schools, Yvonne Feller Freeman for starting up the GoFundMe, and everyone who donated. Also, to our families for the shower they gave us to help replace the items we lost.

To Nick Salvatore who started the benefit and basket raffle with Eagle Creek Band. Also many thanks to the Who Dats, Chris Moore and Distant View Band, and Newbies Chicken BBQ. To everyone who donated gift certificates, baskets or gave items to the raffle. Also, everyone who went around picking up items and baskets.

Many thanks to everyone who helped before, during and after the benefit. To the Elks Club for the use of their facilities for the benefit. What a wonderful night it turned out to be. We are so grateful to all of you!

We have also been blessed by the cards we received from family, friends and friends we haven't met yet. What a wonderful community we live in. To people who donated clothes, shoes, and essential items, some of which was on Christmas Day taking time away from their own families. We thank each and every one of you. Please forgive me if I left anyone out.

Again, many, many thanks to all of you. May God bless you all as he has truly blessed us.

Very sincerely,
Don & Fonda Carr

Elda (Barnum) Loomis, 93, of Clymer, Pa., and formerly of Groton, N.Y., and Albion, N.Y., died Sat., Jan. 14, 2017, at the Indiana Regional Medical Center (IRMC) in Indiana, Pa. The daughter of Eugene "Everett" and Florence Clara (Bates) Barnum, she was born on June 23, 1923, in Albion, N.Y. Elda was a graduate of the Albion High School and then matriculated at Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y., where she earned a B.S. in Home Economics. After graduating from Cornell, Elda was employed as a home economics teacher at the Ludlowville, N.Y., School District. On June 29, 1946, Elda wed Howard Beach Loomis and they shared 67 years of marriage until Howard's death on Nov. 20, 2013. She was of the Protestant faith. While residing in New York State, Elda was a member of the Home Bureau and served as a 4-H Club Leader. An outstanding seamstress, Elda sewed her family outfits, running the spectrum of clothing for special occasions, as well as everyday attire. In addition to sewing, some of her favorite pursuits were crocheting and knitting. Beginning in 1945, one of the most unique activities Elda was engaged in over a period of 60-plus years involved her membership in the Round Robin. Elda, along with 11 of her friends who met as classmates at Cornell University, created as Round Robin letter correspondence circle. On an annual basis over the course of a year, an envelope containing letters from each of the twelve classmates would be continually mailed between the homes of each of these friends. When the envelope containing the letters arrived at each participant's home, each woman would read all the letters, take out her last letter and then write a new letter chronicling the events in her life and family to insert in the envelope and mail on the parcel of letters to the next classmate on the Round Robin circle. A special link of friendship was nurtured and sustained through this extraordinary connection. Elda possessed an innate gift for letter writing and would regularly write to her children; extended family members and friends, some of whom received letters on a weekly schedule. Elda is survived by her four children: Kathleen Snyder of Clymer, Pa., Deanna Loomis Houck of Candor, N.Y., Audrey Black and husband Brian of Slippery Rock, Pa., and Jay Loomis and wife Connie of Collegeville, Pa; nine grandchildren; nine great-grandchildren; two sisters-in-law: Eleanor Loomis of Manlius, N.Y., and Gertrude Lindsley of Fulton, N.Y.; and her numerous nieces and nephews. She was preceded in death by her parents; her husband, Howard Loomis; her daughter, Judy Loomis; her son-in-law, Clair Snyder; her three brothers: Bill, Gene and Harvey Barnum and her two sisters: Janet Barnum and Janice Thaine. In keeping with Elda's wishes, there was not a public visitation or funeral service. A private family graveside service will take place at Mount Albion Cemetery in Albion, N.Y., at a future date. Arrangements are with the assistance of the Rairigh Funeral Home, Ltd. in Hillsdale, Pa.

WHERE HAVE THESE OTTERS COME FROM?

By Douglas H. Domedion

An otter “slide” along one of the dikes on one of the State’s Wildlife Management Areas.

River otters were once found all across New York State many years ago, but uncontrolled trapping during the 18th and 19th centuries reduced them down to remote parts in the Adirondacks and Catskills. From 1936 to 1945 otter trapping was closed. When the season was reopened stricter regulations were enforced and no trapping was allowed in many areas. Their recovery has been slow because they have a low reproduction rate, and only about half of the young make it to adulthood. Loss of good otter habitat and fish being contaminated with chemicals were also big factors. The good news is that if conditions are right they live up to 12 to 15 years.

In recent years, much has been done to clean up our waterways and improve the environment, but a big boost to the otter’s recovery has been the New York River Otter Project that has assisted the expansion of this beautiful animal. Between 1995 and 2000, 279 otters were released in the central and western regions of the state where otter trapping is not allowed.

In the fall of 1994, meetings were held at Rochester between the DEC, trappers and private individuals interested in developing an otter restoration project in these regions of the state.

To finance the project, $300,000 was needed and was donated by many corporations and individuals along with money coming in from merchandise sales, grants and the Pittman-Robertson Fund (an 11 percent tax collected from the sale of hunting and fishing gear).

The NYS Trappers Association was responsible for a $40,000 donation to the project and they also played an important part by providing otters from the Adirondacks and Catskills.

There was tremendous support for the N.Y. River Otter Project and things moved so fast that on Oct. 5, 1995, two otters were released in the Northern Montezuma Wetland complex. During the next five years, otters were released at different areas in the Finger Lakes region such as Honeoye, Hemlock and Canadaigua lakes; Allegheny Reservoir, Letchworth State Park, several areas along the Genesee River and the Jamestown region.

About 60 of these released otters had transmitters placed on them so they could be monitored to learn more about them and see how well the project was working. The results have been very positive.

So where did these 279 otters come from? The otter is relatively uncommon even in the best habitat and are extremely hard to capture. This is where the trappers that were committed to this project really shined. They had to use specially designed foothold traps and learn new techniques for safely holding and transporting the animal.

Captured otters were taken to veterinarian center at Cornell University where they were check for health conditions and on an average increased their weight by 15 percent while staying at the “otter hotel.” The zoo in Rochester and Watertown helped with the “overflow” when Cornell was over loaded.

As mentioned in last week’s column, we are now seeing a few otters in this area, probably the offspring of the animals released from that N.Y. River Otter Project.

If you spot an otter or see their “slides” give me a call or contact the DEC. I assure you if you ever get to see one in action in the wild you will never forget. I once seen an otter come up from under the ice in a small river in the Adirondacks with a trout in its mouth and that image is still printed in my mind as if it were yesterday!

This project shows how many people, from different backgrounds, can come together for the improvement of conservation and the environment. Hopefully in the near future you will catch a glimpse of this “clown” of the great outdoors!

Acclimating to a New Neighborhood

A new year means plenty of exciting opportunities on the horizon. For a number of people, this may be the year they relocate to a new home or apartment. The moving rate in the United States has remained steady since 2008, with roughly 12 percent of the population relocating each year according to reports from the U.S. Census Bureau.

Movement to the suburbs continues to be high, and renters tend to move more frequently than others. People who move cite a new job or a job transfer as one of the primary motivators to relocate.

Acclimating to a new home and neighborhood after a move can be challenging. Even after boxes have been unpacked and items put away, some people still feel unsettled. It could be because one of the most important parts of being in a new house is feeling at home. That involves meeting neighbors, having friends over for dinner and knowing all of the local haunts that help solidify a homeowner as a true member of his or her new neighborhood. It can take time to establish feelings of belonging, but here's a way to speed up settling in.

REAL ESTATE GUIDE

Host your own welcome party

Rather than waiting around for others to welcome you to the neighborhood, take the bull by the horns and introduce yourself to your neighbors in a fun way. Host an open house party and invite your new neighbors. What better way to converse with others than with food, beverages and a festive atmosphere? Plus, your party may lead to reciprocation from others.

Scout out the neighborhood

Use mobile phone apps to see where the locals tend to congregate and plan trips to these restaurants and other shops. Over time, you probably will start to see some familiar faces. Drive around town and get a feel for side streets instead of the main thoroughfares. It's often off the beaten path where you happen upon the greatest finds.

Get involved

If you have children, you may have the advantage of meeting people at school functions or at the bus stop. Volunteer with the PTA/PTO or sign up to coach youth sports or serve as a scout leader. These opportunities will help expand the number of people you meet in your new community.

Find people with similar interests

Let your hobbies and other interests open up connections. Explore the opportunities in the area that cater to your interests. Find a local gaming shop and discuss the latest video game offerings, or check out a local band if indie music is your thing. Converse with others who are participating in the event or are in groups meeting in your area.

After moving, getting acclimated to a new neighborhood and making new friends is one way to feel at home. ■

REAL ESTATE GUIDE

How to Create Extra Storage Space

Apartment dwellers commonly lament the lack of storage space in their homes. But unless such men and women are willing to pack up and move to a larger apartment or private home, storage will continue to pose a problem. Fortunately, there are many ways to create storage space without knocking down walls.

- Buy furniture that includes storage space. Perhaps the simplest way to create extra storage space is to purchase furniture that doubles as storage. Storage beds make great places to store bulky bedding, including extra bedsheets, blankets and pillows. Living room furniture can also serve dual roles. Dress up a storage chest and use it as your coffee table, and replace old footrests with storage ottomans.

- Hang pots and pans. Kitchen cabinet space can be especially scarce in apartments, but that does not mean apartment dwellers must cook with a single pot and pan. Suspend pots and pans from the ceiling, using the cabinet space you have to store food and other items that might look out of place if left sitting out.

- Buy a corner coat rack. Coats take up ample closet space, which apartment dwellers know can be a precious commodity. Rather than reserving half of your closet space for coats, purchase a corner coat rack with multiple hooks at varying heights. This means that all those bulky coats will be stored in one small, vertical space, leaving more room in the closets for the rest of your wardrobe.

- Purchase removable shelving units for closets. Closets may have plenty of shelf space up top, but what about all that floor space that's not being put to use? Small, removable shelving units can be placed inside closets so you can make use of the space beneath all those shirts, dresses and sweaters hanging on hangers.

- Purchase an e-reader. Avid readers living in storage-starved apartments can create more space simply by going digital with regard to their favorite hobby. Purchase an e-reader and store all of your books digitally on your new device and its accompanying cloud storage. This saves you from having to find space to store new books, and you can donate all or some of your existing collection to create more space. ■

Do's and Don'ts of Donating Items to Charity

Donating gently used household items, toys, furniture, and clothing to charity has many benefits. Such donations can help the less fortunate, while donors can take advantage of tax benefits while decluttering their homes.

There is also an environmental advantage to donating items rather than putting them in the trash. Goodwill Industries International, Inc. says that, over the last few years, generous people have helped to keep billions of pounds of clothing and household items out of landfills.

Organizations that collect donations put them to use in many different ways. A portion of donated items may be sold in charity shops and other retail centers. This provides an avenue for less fortunate individuals to purchase items that are steeply discounted from regular retail prices. Some clothing donations are sold to recycling manufacturers who turn them into rags or industrial cleaning materials. Donated clothing and other items may even end up in the hands of private enterprises, who then sell it in developing nations at costs lower than regularly imported clothing, providing an affordable way for people living in poverty overseas to purchase items for themselves and their families. The organizations then put the money made from such sales toward their operational expenses and to develop programs to continue to help the less fortunate. Charities like Goodwill and The Salvation Army indicate on their websites that proceeds from charity and thrift shops go directly to support education, work and drug rehab programs.

Individuals who choose to donate goods to charity can follow a few tips to ensure their donations go as smoothly as possible.

DO walk around the house and gather items that are no longer being used. Look in basements, closets, garages, sheds, attics, and anywhere you are inclined to stash items to get them out of the way. Pay special attention to materials that you haven't used in months or years.

DON'T donate just anything. Ensure that items are in working condition and are in good repair. Don't give away things with rips or stains. Make sure electronics you plan to donate are operational.

DO call first to find out any rules or restrictions regarding donations. Some groups won't accept items that have been recalled or do not meet current safety standards (think some baby gear). Specialty items like computers, vehicles or mattresses may have specific requirements for donations.

DON'T overlook the idea of selling items privately at a garage or yard sale and then donating the funds to the charity. This way the organizations save time sorting and refurbishing donations, and they still benefit from the financial donations.

DO see if the charity will pick up large items. Many organizations have their own fleet of vans and trucks and will have specific pickup windows during certain months. This helps make the donation process more efficient, and can reduce the hassle on donors.

DON'T forget to receive a market value of the used items donated to the charity and a receipt. This will help you when it comes time to claim charitable donations during tax season. ■

THE LAW AND YOU

BY NATHAN D. PACE
ATTORNEY AT LAW

LAST WISHES

While physicians are generally charged with preserving the patient's life by using whatever means necessary, this medical strategy may not be in accordance with a dying patient's wishes. If so, healthcare directives provide patients with the opportunity to write out their wishes in advance and ensure some legal respect for themselves in the event they are ever unable to speak for themselves. A healthcare directive is a straightforward legal document that creates a contract with the attending doctor. It sets forth the patient's wishes about what medical treatment should be withheld, or provided, when the patient is unable to communicate those wishes him- or herself. This document should be prepared in tandem with a will.

Planning ahead isn't a pleasant task, but it's a vital one that every responsible adult needs to do. Let the compassionate lawyers at the Law Office of MACK & PACE help. We've spent years dealing with all aspects of estate planning and can help craft a thoughtful set of documents that will make sure your wishes are carried out, no matter what. In addition, we can help with cases pertaining to criminal law, contract law, and business law. Call right away to make an appointment.

Winter Grilling Tips

Barbecuing isn't just for the lazy days of summer. Delicious grilled meals are easy to prepare year-round. Here are a few tips for winter barbecuing:

- Always pre-heat your barbecue. Pre-heat to 400° F - 450° F at minimum, and adjust the temperature from there. Remember, if food doesn't sizzle when you put it on the grill, your barbecue is not hot enough.
- If you are grilling with charcoal, include more charcoal for increased pre-heating time and extra heat while grilling.
- Cooking times may change with extreme cold. Always use an instant read thermometer to ensure that foods are cooked thoroughly.
- Grill with the lid down. Heat loss on a cold day is significantly greater than a warm summer day, and keeping your barbecue at a consistent temperature will be very difficult with the lid open.

• When grilling on a windy day, try to reduce your exposure to the wind. If grilling at lower temperatures, keep an eye on your barbecue to ensure that it does not blow out. If you do need to move your barbecue out of the wind, keep minimum clearances in mind to avoid damaging your deck or home.

• Clear a work area around your barbecue. This won't impact cooking time, but having enough room to work without filling your boots with snow makes for a much more enjoyable barbecue experience and avoids any untimely slips or falls.

• Several lighting options are available. Some barbecues have built in lighting, and add-on handle lights are available so you're not grilling in the dark.

• Never use your barbecue indoors, in your garage or in an enclosed area. Carbon monoxide accumulation, accidental fire damage, and smoke damage are all possible -- it's not worth the risk.

Clear off that barbecue and get grilling!
