Auburn hosts meeting on neighborhood plans

The City of Auburn is developing an updated downtown and neighborhood revitalization strategy for the areas that include the Downtown, New Auburn and the Union Street/PAL Center areas. Much of the strategy will be drawn from work that has already been completed and adopted by the City Council, but resident feedback on priorities, areas of interest and even new ideas are being sought. To do this, the City will host a community meeting, facilitated by a consultant from Planning Decisions, on Wednesday, August 5 at 6 p.m. at Auburn Hall. This strategy document will summarize policies and plans to provide guidance on investment decisions and redevelopment in the City, including the pursuit of state and federal resources to leverage private investments in these neighborhoods. Plans adopted and being compiled for this document include the City's 2011 Comprehensive Plan, the Auburn Downtown Action Plan for Tomorrow (ADAPT), the New Auburn Master Plan, the 2015 CDBG Consolidated Plan, the Five Year Capital Improvement Plan and other related documents.

The series will start on Friday, July 31 with the children's movie "Ratatouille" (rated G), to be shown on a cinema-style screen at Festival Plaza. Seating will be on a first-come, first-served basis and those attending are encouraged to bring blankets, pillows and/or low chairs and snacks. Several non-profit organizations are also expected to be onsite to accept donations for snacks and non-alcoholic beverages. In the event of rain, the movie will be screened indoors at the Hasty Gymnasium at Pettengill Park.

The other movies in the series are "The Jungle Book" (rated G), to be screened on Friday, August 28 at a New Auburn location to be announced, and "Gone with the Wind" (rated G), to be screened on Sunday, September 6 at Lake Grove Park.

provement Plan and other related documents.

"The City has adopted a number of different plans to support bringing new life back to these historic neighborhoods," said City Manager Howard Kroll. "To help us maintain focus on our efforts, we are now seeking to pull these plans into one document, and this presents a great opportunity to hear from the community and those living in and investing in these neighborhoods about how we should prioritize, or even if they have new suggestions for us to consider."

Lewiston plans National Night Out event

The City of Lewiston's annual "National Night Out," supported and funded by the Lewiston Police Athletic League, will take place on Tuesday, August 4, from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. at Marcotte Park. The purpose of this free "meet your neighbor" event is to heighten crime and drug prevention awareness, generate support for local anti-crime programs, strengthen neighborhood spirit and police-community partnerships, and send the message that neighborhoods are united.

The event will feature numerous activities and entertainment, including music, Mr. Drew & His Animals Too, an obstacle course, a bounce house, food provided and grilled by Walmart employees and municipal vehicles, including the Lewiston Police Department's rolling tank and robot, for children to enjoy.

Sponsored by the National Association of Town

Watch, this 32nd annual National Night Out will be celebrated across the country on August 4. NATW is a nonprofit crime prevention organization that works in cooperation with thousands of crime watch groups and law enforcement agencies throughout the country. Since 1981, NATW has been dedicated to developing, growing and maintaining organized crime and drug prevention programs nationwide.

First Universalist names Rose Window recipients

Bob and Mary Wolf

The First Universalist Church of Auburn has awarded its 2015 Rose Window honors to three members whose efforts have made a significant impact on the health and vibrancy of the church. The recipients are Bob and Mary Wolf of Winthrop and Peggy Cox of Auburn. This annual award recognizes members who have been outstanding models of Unitarian Universalist principles through their exceptional contributions to their faith community.

Bob and Mary Wolf have enriched the Auburn UU congregation over their 13 years as members with their generosity of heart, mind and spirit. After Bob's retirement from four decades in UU ministry in Massachusetts, their participation here has ranged from small group ministry to fundraising and running the book sale at the church fair for many years. They also nurtured the music ministry in quiet but significant ways.

Bob frequently graced the congregation's pulpit as an eloquent worship leader and provided pastoral care in Rev. Jodi's absence. He supported Rev. Jodi with the wisdom of his 60 years as a Unitarian-Universalist. Mary's open-hearted, forthright and loyal nature has left its own deep imprint on the congregation as she modeled generosity by her reliable volunteerism. Though Bob and Mary recently moved to Massachusetts to be closer to family, they will always be part of the Auburn UU congregation.

Peggy Cox has been a strong yet gentle presence in the life of the congregation. Her care for others is part of her ongoing spirituality. As chair of the Membership Committee, she is welcoming to newcomers and supports those in need with phone calls or visits. She has served on the congregation's Board of Directors, the Caring Network, chairs the Baked Goods Table at the annual Gingerbread Fair and shares her photographic skills for the congregation's newsletter. Hers is a quiet voice of compassion and reassurance as she consistently lives out UU principles.

Governor's Address: Maine is under attack from drug dealers

Maine is under attack from out-of-state drug dealers who are peddling poison to our kids, and it's time we get serious about it.

Dear Maine Taxpayer,

I read a story in The Washington Post about Maine's heroin crisis and the young man from Falmouth who died last year from heroin overdose. As a parent, the story of a good family destroyed by heroin addiction struck close to home. Ann and I worry about young Mainers, and how heroin addiction can tear a family apart, regardless of social status or parenting efforts.

Folks, we have to get tough on this problem. Deaths from heroin overdose are four times more frequent than they were just 10 years ago. Gangs are trafficking this deadly poison in our state, using other New England states as their operating base. We need to go after the dealers—not the addicts—but it's not an easy job.

The Maine Drug Enforcement Agency is working around the clock to lock up these dealers of death, and we often see their results in the news with drug bust after drug bust. However, they need more help. That's why I repeatedly ask the legislature to pay for 14 new agents to crack down on drug dealers, to no avail. They denied my request. Then we asked for seven agents, but they only gave us half. These Democrat legislators are not serious about stopping the drug epidemic that is killing our young people.

Please call your state representative and state senator and tell them to hire more MDEA agents. They won't do it on their own. I need the help of the Maine people to get this done. We can't just arrest our way out of this problem. For those who addicted to deadly opiates like heroin, there is help—even if you don't have insurance. The liberal media claims that reductions in welfare eligibility for able-bodied young adults have reduced drug treatment options for addicts. This is false.

DHHS has money available for drug treatment, even for those who don't have Medicaid or private insurance. In fact, we have hundreds of thousands of dollars left over every year in this program. We have the resources to help those who need it. The State has increased funding for addiction treatment from $7 million to $17 million since I've been Governor.

Unfortunately, Maine's welfare system has fueled the drug trade for too long. We've all seen the photos of drug busts with EBT cards that were used to pay for drugs. One welfare recipient whose EBT card showed up in possession of a drug dealer had gotten 47 replacement cards in just a couple of years—47 EBT cards for one person! The old rule allowed people to get unlimited replacement EBT cards for free; cards they often traded for heroin and other narcotics. Our new rules would cap EBT users at four replacement cards.

We're also putting photos on EBT cards, so drug dealers are less likely to take them as payment for heroin.

The Washington Post article noted the dealer who sold the lethal dose of heroin to the young man from Falmouth was living in subsidized housing in Portland. We have to be more careful about who our taxpayer-funded programs are supporting.

We simply cannot allow welfare benefits to enable drug abuse and drug trafficking.

Dial 2-1-1 if you or a loved one is addicted to heroin and needs help paying for treatment. Please, get help before it's too late.

Thank You,
Paul R. LePage
Governor

Partnership brings UMaine hockey to Auburn arena

By Jonathan P. LaBonté
MAYOR OF AUBURN

It's a constant struggle in operating a city and growing a community. How do you grow without investment; how do you provide services with men and women on the ground with the necessary equipment and tools?

Investment and services cost money, and most of the money is provided through local property taxes.

One of the cornerstones of my approach working with staff and city councilors has been to seek and develop relationships and partnerships that allow us to stretch existing dollars and resources to the fullest extent before returning to taxpayers to ask for more.

Given some recent conversations and tours in the community, it is a good time to provide an update and paint a picture through examples.

Mayor Jonathan P. LaBonté

With Marc Gosselin, a former executive with the Maine Red Claws, now serving as the general manager of the Norway Savings Bank Arena, we've quickly moved to ink partnerships with two high-profile hockey programs: the men's and women's Division I hockey programs from the University of Maine. The men's coaching team, led by Red Gendron, is hosting a late-August hockey clinic, and the women's program will host a late-October "home" game against Brown University at our arena.

Our community is fortunate to have many folks who are graduates of UMaine serving in the private and public sector in leadership positions. Many businesses in Auburn have contracted for research and development around new and improved products through the university, as well. Through my invite to the university alumni leaders up in Orono, we are now talking about how we can take advantage of these local athletic events to draw together alumni and university partners in Auburn, as well as the surrounding area.

Just as the Bangor region is uniquely positioned to leverage UMaine's sporting events to draw spectators and create networking opportunities, Norway Savings Bank Arena is emerging as a venue to accomplish similar outcomes, albeit on a smaller scale.

This networking will spill over to further opportunities than just networking at the arena. While some companies in Auburn do have existing relationships with Maine's flagship university and research hub, there are many more opportunities to ensure local manufacturers and others know of the tools available to them to continuously improve their products and compete and thrive in our city.

I've connected the economic development and research liaisons at UMaine with city staff and partners at LAEGC to ensure that local businesses that may benefit from connections to the university are engaged and invited to events.

Those business relationships dial further down into needs for workforce development. Can we start to connect our local businesses with internship opportunities, say in engineering, to recruit young people to work in Lewiston-Auburn for a

Enough is Enough

Legislators thumb their noses at the wishes of Mainers

By Robert E. Macdonald
MAYOR OF LEWISTON

How many readers can identify Darla Neugebauer? If the name looks familiar, but you still can't identify her, let me give you a clue: Marcy's Restaurant in Portland.

For the past week, the restaurant and owner have dominated the news. Neugebauer has also caused a firestorm on social media. Why? Because she slammed her hands on a counter and told an out-of-control two-year-old who was disrupting the restaurant to "shut up."

With the media frenzy this has created, do you think there is a correlation between meaningless stories such as this, which dominates the news cycles, and low-functioning voters?

In an effort to incorporate their strictly altruistic views and policies, a group of progressive Republican and Democratic legislators have banned together and thumbed their noses at the Maine voters' wish for comprehensive welfare reform. In their minds, these arrogant elitists feel they understand the problem by listening to the daily banter inside the confines of the State House as opposed to the average person who is exposed daily to welfare abuse.

In order to carry out these policies, they need a distraction—a distraction that will focus voters' attention away from the real issue. An untruth repeatedly fed to the public is their attempt to create a politically and social-morality charged atmosphere. They demonize and marginalize anyone opposed to their "We're educated, we know what's right for you" policies. They have focused on Governor Paul LePage, Senator Eric Brakey and myself for our opposition in using local and state money to support non-citizens, known as asylum seekers—a group whom our federal government neither recognizes nor will help.

Those who revel in making Maine an intake center for asylum seekers argue that Maine is aging and needs younger blood. They point out that many of these non-citizens hold degrees and are well educated. They are horrified over the small percentage of college degrees held by native Mainers. They lament as to how the state will move forward.

Easy! Maine in its heyday was built by many people with little or no education. Today, those with high school degrees are the builders, painters, electricians, plumbers and landscapers who build and maintain the houses, businesses and properties of those holding a college degree. Their earnings as non-degree professionals stay in their pocket, not used to pay off school loans.

Another thing that perplexes me is the fact that these "highly educated, professional non-citizens" have to depend on the support of local people to survive. They come to the United States on visitor or educational visas. It is my understanding that to obtain this type of visa, the issuing embassy must satisfy itself that those being issued the visa will return home when the time on their visa expires.

One of the things checked by each embassy is the financial health of those being issued a visa to ensure they are solvent. When a person arrives in the United States and asks for asylum, their finances are known by the federal government and should be shared with the local general assistance office in order to determine if, in fact, they need assistance.

Lastly, let me leave you with something to ponder. If it takes several weeks to obtain a visa, how much danger could one be in? Then, prior to leaving their native country on a commercial airliner, those coming on visas must run a gauntlet of government officials who rubberstamp their exit. How does this equate with their life being in imminent danger?

local company and see that result in full-time employment upon graduation? Going further, can we help young people growing up in Auburn realize that local companies need highly skilled workers, and teach them that studying at our state university system can open doors to great careers in their hometown?

Fortunately, educators at Edward Little High School have already engaged UMaine through a STEM program (science, technology, engineering and math), and we have students today taking part in research, guided by local teachers and UMaine researchers, as part of a federally funded initiative.

The process of engaging with public sector partners with assets commitment to a statewide mission, such as UMaine, is continuous and can cover several aspects of growing our community. Many of those groups need to be more deeply connected to how we grow Auburn, and the UMaine example is one.

Sports tourism turns into business leader engagement. Business leader engagement turns into research and development to help them grow and employ more people in Auburn. Growing businesses need to recruit talent our community to fill those jobs. And young people growing up can aspire to a more diverse list of professions with a choice to call Auburn home in the future.

It's an exciting time as these pieces start coming together. Again, if you have questions or ideas, please don't hesitate to reach out. My number is 782-1174, or email me at jlabonte@auburnmaine.gov.

St. Louis bells now on display

Thanks to a cooperative effort between the City of Auburn and the Pilotage Group, owners of the former church building, two of the bells from the former St. Louis Church of New Auburn went on public display on the building's front grounds on Friday, July 24. According to city officials, they will remain there for approximately two weeks.

"Just as many small contributions went into building the beautiful St. Louis Church 100 years ago, we are fortunate that many in New Auburn and our community stepped forward with small donations to save the bells from being sent out of state and melted down," said Mayor Jonathan LaBonté. "It's exciting to have the bells on public display as we prepare to launch an effort to build them a new, permanent home."

The ornate bells were cast in 1915 at the world renowned Paccard Bell Foundry of Annecy France.

APL presents retired Army captain and service dog

Auburn Public Library will welcome Ret. Army Capt. Luis Carlos Montalvan, author of “Until Tuesday: A Wounded Warrior and the Golden Retriever Who Saved Him,” along with Tuesday, the dog for whom the book is named, on Monday, August 3, from 4 to 7 p.m. The program is part of the library’s 2015 Teen Summer Reading Program, “Unmask!”, whose theme focuses upon all types of heroes. When Capt. Montalvan, a 17-year veteran of the U.S. Army, returned from his multiple combat tours in Iraq, the stress of daily life due to his wounds – both physical and emotional – began to take their toll and he started to doubt whether he would ever be able to lead a normal life. Then he met Tuesday, a smart but sensitive golden retriever who had been trained to assist the disabled. While Tuesday had been trained to open doors, turn on lights and sense anxiety in humans, because of his sensitive nature, he hadn’t found a human he trusted and connected to – until Luis. “Until Tuesday” is the story of how these two found one another and healed each other’s souls. The program will include a discussion of their story, a demonstration of how Tuesday assists Capt. Montalvan in his daily life and a question and answer session. Copies of Montalvan’s two books will be

YWCA offers karate for kids and toddlers

The YWCA of Central Maine will offer six-week karate classes for toddlers and kids starting August 1.

Little Sparks Toddler Karate was created exclusively for children ages two to four. This class helps develop skills in listening, following directions and taking turns. Students work on balance, tumbling, basic karate blocks and stranger danger self-defense. The class teaches important life skills through fun activities.

There are two sessions to choose from: Session

One from 8:30 to 9 a.m. and Session Two from 10 to 10:30 a.m. The cost of the six-week Little Sparks program is $50 for YWCA members and $60 for non-members, plus an addition uniform fee.

The Children's Karate program is for kids ages five to 12. The class is taught by black belt instructor Sosai Donna Harris of Phoenix Karate Academy, the founders of Pinan-Do or "Peaceful Way" Karate. Students are taught that karate starts and ends in self-defense; it should never be used to harm others, but rather, as a way to unlock one's hidden strengths and weaknesses and to use these lessons to discover one's individual purpose. The class will meet every Saturday morning from 9 to 10 a.m. at the Y and for an additional session each week at the Phoenix Karate Dojo in Auburn.

The cost of the six-week Children's Karate program is $90 for YWCA members and $100 for non-members, plus an additional uniform fee. Space is limited. The YWCA of Central Maine is located at 130 East Avenue in Lewiston. For more information about either class or to register, call 795-4050.

St. Dom's Graduate Generously Offers to Match Scholarship Funds

Donald Dion, a 1972 graduate of Saint Dominic Academy (previously Saint Dominic Regional High School), is challenging the community to help raise $150,000 in scholarships to assist local families in overcoming financial hardship to provide their children with opportunities to attend the school that launched his successful career in finance.

Donald Dion

From July 5 to August 4, Dion will match every dollar donated to the scholarship fund up to a maximum of $75,000.

"Our success as an institution is measured by the lives we impact. Many alumni, including Mr. Dion, attribute their success in life in part due to the education they received here," said Donald Fournier, President of Saint Dominic Academy. "Each time a student is unable to attend or leaves us early due to financial considerations, an opportunity is lost. I am calling on every member of the St. Dom's family to step up and help us make the most of this incredible opportunity. I have already made my gift, please make your gift today!"

After graduating from Saint Dominic, Dion earned a bachelor's degree in economics and business administration from Saint Michael's College in Vermont before receiving a Juris Doctor degree from the University of Maine Law School and a master's of law degree from Boston University Law School. He founded Dion Money Management, an investment advisory firm in 1996; served as the publisher of the Fidelity Independent Advisor; and is the trustee of the Dion Family Foundation which focuses on helping individuals by offering tuition assistance at Catholic institutions.

Don Dion said- "I'm very proud being an alumni of Saint Dominic Academy" "The school has a long history of having dedicated teachers, a couple of which straightened me out a few times!" "The Academy also has a long history of seeing it's senior move on to the top colleges such as Saint Michaels, Rivier University, Boston College and Notre Dame"
