Welcome to the Main Line

What will the workforce look like in 10 years? Many Main Line companies have asked this question only to realize they may not be as prepared as once thought.

Will your most productive employees still be in the positions they are in today? Does the current workforce have the skills to put the company in a position to lead the competition of tomorrow?

In the 2017 Guide to the Main Line, we take a look at the intersection of education and business, and how Main Line companies like Vanguard, United States Liability Insurance and Main Line Health have recalibrated their internship programs so that the students they hire today are trained to be employees of the future.

Beyond business, this year's Guide dives into our top local private schools to find out what's new for the 2017-18 school year along with a look at Lower Merion High School's "Trekkiies," who have traveled to developing countries like Haiti, Nepal, Nicaragua and Malawi to leave behind newly built schools.

Building the Future

Main Line companies build workforce of the future through intern development

Christo Rey Philadelphia High School students with their Main Line Health advisors and internship managers.

By Linda Stein

Lindsey Press, Villanova student and two-year intern at Vanguard Group.

For a college or high school student, an internship can be a gateway to a future career. And for a company those interns can mean vitally important new employees-- especially as more and more members of the Baby Boom generation retire.

But internship programs can be much more than that.

For example, the programs in place at Main Line Health are close to the heart of Jack Lynch, president and CEO, who views them as a way of giving back to the community.

While growing up in Washington, D.C., the son of a doctor, Lynch benefited from several internships. He'd also see other youngsters without his advantages as he drove through the city.

Lynch said that he had "a desire to give kids that don't have as much opportunity to get the same experiences that I had. The difference between those kids and me is opportunity. How can I give them an opportunity?"

One way is the Summer Enrichment Program through the Institute of Diversity brings about five summer interns, graduate students, who are focusing on a career in healthcare administration to Main Line Health hospitals each year. The interns are paid a stipend during the 10-week program and 55 grad students have participated over the last 10 years.

Jameyshia Franklin, 31, was one of those SEP interns in 2011 when she was a graduate student at West Chester University. Franklin extended her internship with MLH for a year to work on a project and she was subsequently hired as a hospital administrator at Bryn Mawr Hospital.

"There was a lot of project management," said Franklin, a Norristown resident who hails from Chicago. "That's probably where I first developed my project management skills. It was the first time I led a project without someone coaching and I got to run with my own ideas. It was a great experience for me."

Interns at United States Liability Insurance.

Franklin needed to do a capstone project for her master's degree program in public health so the internship was a perfect fit, she said.

"For me, it was the first time I had done a formal internship with an organization," said Franklin. Before starting the master's degree program she was a unit secretary at a hospital in Chicago.

At MLH, her supervisors were "very receptive to me learning" and "letting me run with my ideas," Franklin said. That was different than a traditional academic medical center, she said. "It was a really good experience," she added.

During her internship, Franklin worked in infection prevention control and also helped with quality management and regulation.

Her capstone project was a "severe sepsis protocol." Sepsis is a blood infection that can kill quickly if patients are not treated within two hours. Her program required calling all needed personnel with an "automatic page" into the emergency room quickly for sepsis patients is now in use in MLH hospital ERs, she said.

Unexpectedly, that experience hit home when she became ill with sepsis herself and was treated at a different hospital. She nearly died while six months pregnant and lost the baby, she said. Happily, Franklin is now the mother of a 2-year-old boy.

During her internship, she also helped The Barbara Brodsky Comprehensive Breast Center gear up for its accreditation review.

"I worked with the oncology team in the Breast Center to make sure we had all the data," Franklin said.

Main Line Health also runs an internship program for students from the Christo Rey Philadelphia High School in North Philadelphia, who come for a work study program one day a week, said Lynch. Those students do "meaningful work," Lynch said. Main Line Health pays Christo Rey toward their tuition, he said. Some 44 Christo Rey student interns have performed various jobs at MLH in the last five years.

"It's an amazing experience," Lynch said. "These young folks grow immensely." As freshmen just starting many cannot shake hands or look you in the eye, he said.

By the time they are seniors they have many skills and college aspirations. They also gain references from their supervisors. At the end of the year, the Christo Rey interns give presentations about what they've learned.

"I meet with the managers that supervise these high school students," said Lynch. "They really love helping this young talent."

"Many of us had opportunities depending on where we were born, what ZIP code," said Lynch. "If you give these kids an opportunity, they're going to do every bit as well."

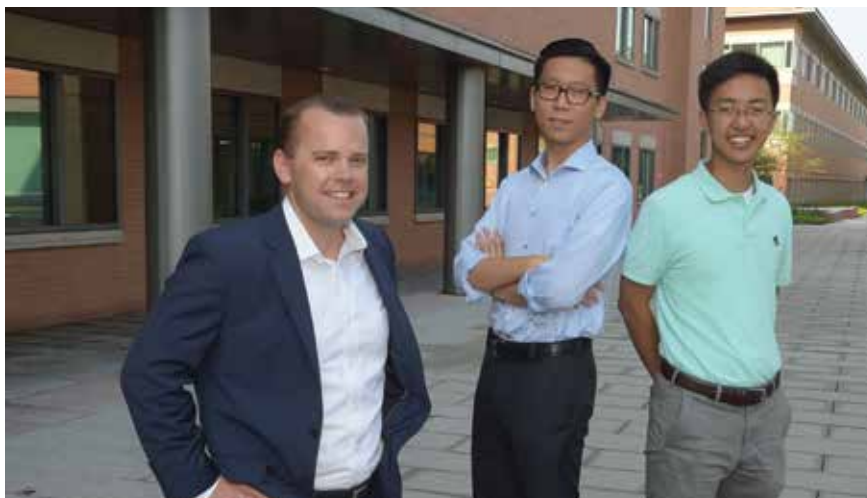

A different sort of internship program is Project SEARCH through Bryn Mawr Rehab Hospital that helps disabled young adults and adults learn job skills. They are then placed in three-month internships for on-the-job training. These can then lead to jobs, he said. Some 134 individuals have taken part in that program since 2010.

And MLH gains from having interns on board just as the interns gain from being there, Lynch said. One example was when he spoke to five women in the Summer Enrichment Program about their internship experience.

"I made the assumption they were all African American," he said. "Two were not." He realized that admissions clerks would make similar conclusions and fill in blanks and those conclusions could be wrong. So now MLH admissions clerks must ask patients for their race and ethnicity, rather than making assumptions. A new software program rolling out next spring will also ask for patients' gender preference, as well, he said.

Local high school students trek to countries in need

Lower Merion students help build a school in Haiti with the BuildOn organization.

By Betty Ben Dor

Each year, a select group of Lower Merion High School (LMHS) students travels abroad, spending the week before spring break in a developing nation. These students are “Trekkiies” and they are dedicated to service. At the end of their trip, they leave behind a newly constructed school, granting access to education for kids in impoverished communities.

Organized through an international organization called buildOn, the “Trek” program sends high schoolers to developing nations to build schools in poor communities. For the past six years, LMHS students have built schools in villages in Haiti, Nepal, Nicaragua and Malawi.

“One of the big things that we see is a change in the (students) from the time they leave to the time they come back,” said Dan Capkin, Communications Specialist for Lower Merion School District and a trip chaperone. Building these schools “really helps our students appreciate what they have and be ambassadors of change.”

Early each school year, 18 students from grades nine to 12 are selected for the school's Trek team. The students are chosen through an application process consisting of essays, letters of recommendation and interviews. Members of the buildOn club who are not selected to go on the Trek engage in other community service throughout the year. In the 2016-2017 school year, 308 LMHS students recorded over 12,000 hours of service across 111 service projects.

This year's LMHS Trek team consisted of Kathryn Lockwood, Sophie Kamplain, Kelsey Stanton, Mollie Katzen, Gabby Van Hollander, Sean O'Kelley, Luke Howey, Samantha Gaier, Anna Goodman, Samantha Anderer, Josie Blumencweij, Leah Owen-Oliner, Lily McClendon, Catherine Reed, Maddie Canter, Jenna Mancuso, Sara Chiappardi, Tom Reed, Leslie Bullitt and Dan Capkin.

With each school costing roughly $30,000 to build, the team is responsible for fundraising throughout the year. This year, Capkin said that they raised roughly $65,000 to $75,000. The funds cover everything from travel expenses for the students and teacher chaperones to construction costs. The money they raised also went toward funding Adult Literacy programs.

LMHS Trek sponsor Tom Reed said that he is most proud of “how dedicated the students are to the overall mission they have.”

Harriton High School, the other high school in the Lower Merion school district, has been sending students on similar Treks for the past two years.

This year's Harriton Trek team was made up of Homa Mirzai, Rachel Brown, Graham Branscom, Hannah Austwick, Grace Weaver, Jasmine McGranaghan, Madeline Taylor, Sam Eaddy, Yasmeen Majid, Barbara Peck, Aidan Fleming, Sophie Brown, Duncan Miller, Angela Sjoblom, Alexandra Branscom, Gina Golden, Todd Curyto, Jamie Nemece and Dan Imaizumi.

Capkin said that the two schools work together occasionally during the fundraising process. This year, both groups flew out to Haiti together, but separated upon arrival to work in two different villages. The LMHS students built a school in La Civette while the Harriton students worked in Platon Robert. Across the two schools' projects, over $150,000 was raised and went toward enriching the lives of the community members in the Haitian villages.

During their time in Haiti, the students stayed with host families and worked side-by-side with villagers to construct the schools. In a district-issued press release, LMHS junior Kelsey Stanton said that the time spent with the village kids was one of her most memorable experiences.

The kids were “all so outgoing and loving,” Stanton said. “I am so grateful to have lived with them and I am glad that they are a part of my life.”

Looking forward, Reed said that LMHS will travel to Nepal in March 2018 for its seventh ever Trek. In order to do so, he said they will have to fundraise roughly $92,000.

CHADWICK & MCKINNEY
FUNERAL HOME

“From the moment we walked into your funeral home, to the day of burial, your comforting presence and reassuring support meant so much. You listened to our thoughts, and truly made the entire process much easier on us.” — Susan

We are so fortunate to receive many notes of thanks that echo Susan’s. Having lost my own father when I was 8, I feel that I bring heartfelt care and concern to every family who calls upon us in their time of need.

My family and I live at the funeral home, so your loved one is always under our care. I personally answer your calls at any time of the day or night, and I am here to help in any way I can.

When we sit down to discuss funeral, cremation or arrangements in advance, I can meet with you in the comfort of your own home. I will listen, care well, and handle all the details, as if you were a member of my own family.

— Rodger McKinney

Rodger McKinney’s family has strong roots in the community. His daughter Courtney is an Episcopal Academy and University of Delaware graduate, working in physical therapy; his son Andrew is a Lower Merion High School graduate, attending Penn State University; his wife Lauren Hurtubise is an Agnes Irwin and Mt. Holyoke graduate, teaching at Ithan Elementary School.

Note: The following information was submitted by school staff.

EPISCOPAL ACADEMY

Arabic, Medical Problem Solving, and Neuropsychology are not your typical offerings in a high school curriculum. At The Episcopal Academy, high school juniors and seniors can choose from nearly 60 courses offered through Global Online Academy. GOA is a consortium of independent schools from around the world that work together to offer a wide range of online courses to high school students.

"I decided to take Arabic because I have always been interested in the political situation in the Middle East, as well as the language," Abby Baggini said. "Arabic was a good fusion of the two. It also struck me as such a unique opportunity, so I decided I should try it out."

Each semester, more than 20 EA students enroll in a GOA elective.

"These courses add flexibility to our students' schedules and add to the breadth of electives offered," EA's GOA site director Adam Lavallee said.

Students complete their course work during free periods, at night, and on weekends.

"I wanted to experience a class where I was mostly self-dependent to challenge my organizational abilities," Jessica Brady said. "Medical Problem Solving interested me because I have always been interested in the medical field, and I wanted to test out if I liked it."

Brady worked on assignments and projects "virtually" with students from China and Japan.

EA has been a participating GOA member school since 2014.

"GOA has been and will continue to be a unique and valuable opportunity for our students," Lavallee said. "The feedback has been tremendous."

THE HAVERFORD SCHOOL

The Haverford School has installed a state-of-the-art indoor climbing wall. The physical education, health and wellness and leadership program faculty and staff completed a seven-hour certification before unveiling the climbing wall to students in all divisions – Lower, Middle and Upper School. The wall will host physical education classes, clubs, sports teams and others.

“Climbing is an experience like none other,” said Jeff Potter, head of the physical education department. “It requires physical strength, endurance, problem solving, trust, teamwork, and responsibility.”

Bill Brady, the School’s Director of Leadership, believes that the climbing wall offers the boys and staff a tremendous opportunity to step outside their comfort zone and explore new challenges.

“Through the training exercises, I experienced firsthand the benefits of taking risks, failing, and developing new strategies to overcome obstacles. Further, I developed a great trust in my teammates when they guided me to success on the wall,” Brady said. “The ability to use the wall to help develop Haverford boys into men of character is a natural fit into the mission of our school.”

The Haverford School is a nonsectarian college preparatory day school for boys, pre-k through grade 12.

BALA CYNWYD

Bala Cynwyd was originally two distinct towns: Bala and Cynwyd. Due to the US Post Office serving both communities under a single ZIP code, the town was grouped into a single community. Bala Cynwyd's original center was settled in 1682, following William Penn's landing in Pennsylvania, and has long been featured on the National Register of Historic Places. Some of the commercial buildings in this area date to the earliest years of the 19th century.

Modern day Bala Avenue is an extension of the original town center and holds a commercial district which is more than a century old. Bala Avenue is home to a number of shops as well as the Bala Theater, which is currently closed.

Bala Cynwyd also hosts several broadcasting outlets in the Philadelphia region. The CBS television station WCAU-TV built its headquarters on the corner of City Avenue and Monument Road in 1952 and remains there to this day. And ABC partner owned by The Walt Disney Company sits directly across the street on the Philadelphia side, and many radio stations sprinkle Presidential Boulevard. Entercom Communications Corporation, now the second largest owner of radio stations in the US due to its merger with CBS Radio in February 2017, also calls Bala Cynwyd home.

Bala Cynwyd has a strong community spirit. The Neighborhood Club of Bala Cynwyd, formed over a century ago, features several annual events. The Bala Cynwyd Public Library is not only well equipped with computer facilities, but also holds 1.4 million items within its walls and stands in the 99th percentile for most residents' visits per year and volumes per resident capita. It also features a renowned children's library on the second floor.

The Lower Merion Academy, Cynwyd Elementary School and Bala Cynwyd Junior High (now Bala Cynwyd Middle School) are all listed on the National Register of Historic Places. Other schools in the area are Kohelet Yeshiva High School, the private Catholic Merion Mercy and Waldron Mercy academies, and the bilingual French International School of Philadelphia.

GLADWYNE

Gladwyne, known until 1891 as “Merion Square,” was originally settled by Welsh Quakers beginning in 1682. It has been ranked among the richest ZIP codes in the country.

A tiny town center includes a few shops and the recently renovated public library. Nearby are four churches, a synagogue, Gladwyne Montessori, a private school, and the public school, Gladwyne Elementary, as well as the Gladwyne Fire Company.

A portion of the original Merion Square town center and surrounding streets were designated a Lower Merion Historic District.

The Lower Merion Conservancy plays a significant role in protecting the local heritage and maintains its office in Gladwyne’s Rolling Hill Park. Early to preserve space and a heavy receiver of land donations, developers have been unable to subdivide the area into typical suburban developments, and Gladwyne is still a host to late 19th/early 20th century homes, uncharacteristic of other Main Line communities.

Gladwyne hosts numerous annual community-sponsored events. Gladwyne Clean-Up Day is supported by local businesses and is entirely volunteer based. The popular Memorial Day Parade and Block Party is sponsored by the Gladwyne Civic Association and children are encouraged to ride on decorated bikes, wagons and strollers in the parade. After the march, a ceremony honoring veterans is held, followed by food and festivities at the subsequent block party. In December, residents are encouraged to watch and sing during the Tree and Menorah Lighting Ceremony.

Your Town

MERION

Often referred to as “Merion Station” by postal service worker who hope to distinguish the town from its Lower Merion and Upper Merion neighbors, Merion was first settled in the 1690s by Welsh settlers who established the Merion Meeting House at what is today the intersection of Meetinghouse Lane and Montgomery Avenue.

By 1913, the community had set up the Merion Civic Association, which was organized by Ladies’ Home Journal editor Edward W. Bok, and offered a motto for the town to live by — “To be Nation right and State right, we must first be Community right.”

One of the Main Line’s many celebrities, Eldridge R. Johnson, the founder and president of the Victor Talking Machine Company and later RCA, made his home in Merion. Johnson would go on to donate his house, located at Hazelhurst Avenue, but was later demolished to make way for a new Merion Tribute House.

The town is also home to a celebrity of the art world — Albert C. Barnes — who curated the world’s most renowned collection of Impressionist and Post-Impressionist art work along with an arboretum at 300 North Laches Lane in Merion.

After a long and public court battle, the Barnes collection was moved to its current location on the Benjamin Franklin Parkway in Philadelphia.

In addition to the public Merion Elementary, the town is also home to the Catholic, all-girls Merion Mercy Academy and the Catholic, co-ed Waldron Mercy Academy. Four Hebrew schools also call Merion home, including Solomon Schechter School, Chabad School, Congregation Adath Israel Religious School, and Lower Merion Synagogue Religious School.

NARBERTH

Narberth, a quaint borough that stretches only a half-mile wide, has no major thoroughfares running through the town, giving it a quieter small-town feel. Primarily residential, townies or Narbs can hop off the Paoli/Thorndale train line to be met with town shops, a playground and, of course, residential homes, all within walking distance.

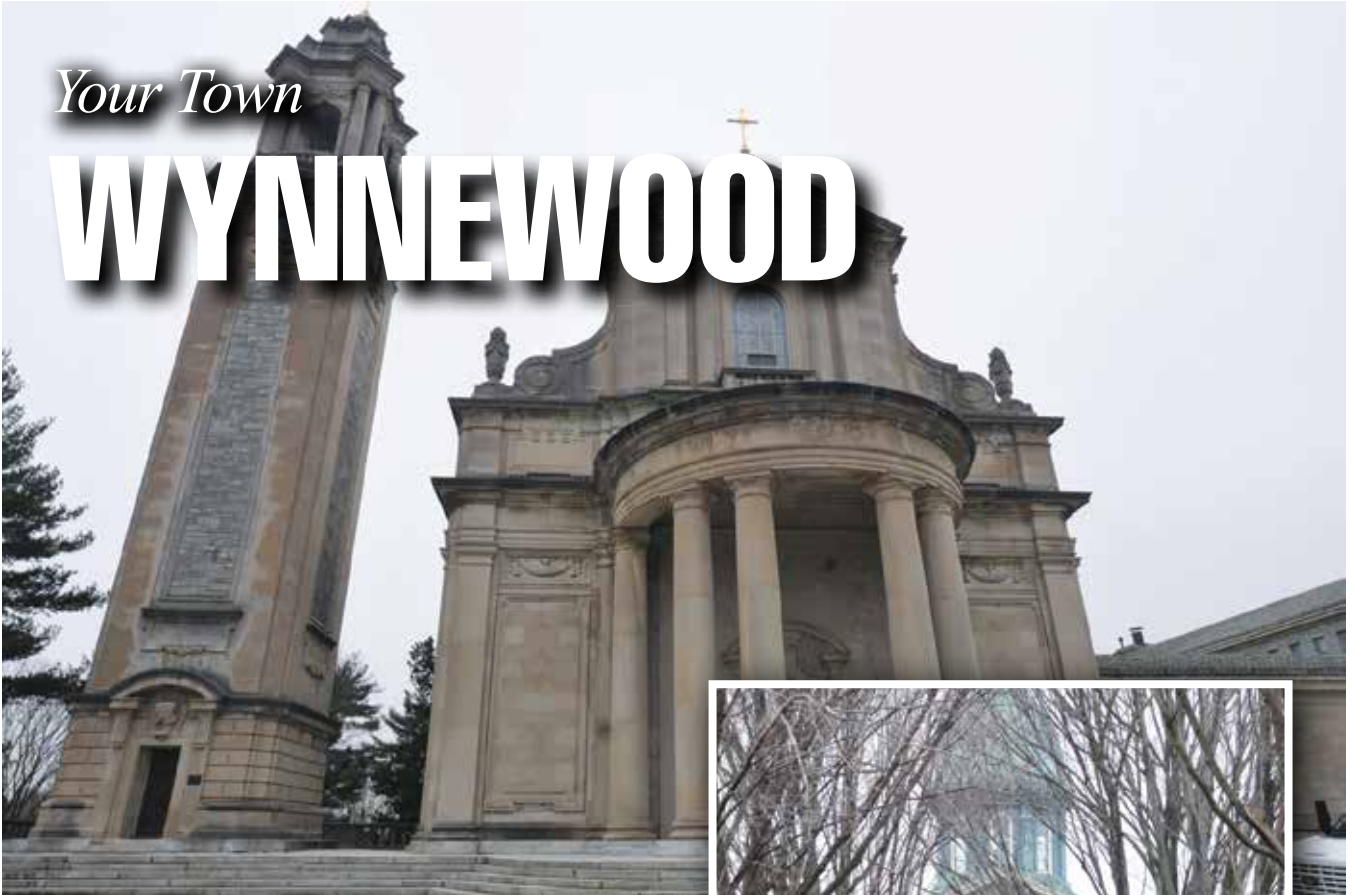

Narberth's business district is filled with small businesses that locals simply love, including Ricklin's Hardware and neighborhood pubs like The Greeks and McShea's.

Narberth's Civic Association has been quite the power-house in recent years hosting events like the Dickens Festival, when the down town is redecorated for an immersive experience for any fan of "A Christmas Carol," and NarbEarth Day along with the family-favorite NarBark dog and costume parade.

With so much going on, it's no wonder why Narberth has a reputation for being "The Heart of the Main Line."

WYNNWOOD

For most of its history, Wynnewood was a rural farming community. It was named in the late 17th Century for Dr. Thomas Wynne, William Penn's physician.

Today Wynnewood is predominantly residential, with shopping, schools and a large modern hospital. As of 2010 Census, there were 13,572 people and 5,436 households residing in this Lower Merion Township community.

The eastern border abuts Philadelphia and runs along City Avenue from the Delaware County line to the town of Merion to the north at East Wynnewood Road.

Wynnewood is part of the Lower Merion School District.

Within Wynnewood is the community of Penn Wynne, which has a small shopping area along Manoa Road.

Wynnewood's other shopping areas include the Wynnewood Shopping Center and numerous other smaller shopping centers along Lancaster Avenue. The Wynnewood Shopping Center houses an Old Navy store, Bed Bath and Beyond, Giant food market and smaller stores and eateries with plans to expand the shopping and dining options. The center sits across East Wynnewood Road from the Wynnewood train station and near the intersection of Lancaster Avenue.

Both SEPTA and Amtrak trains stop at the station.

A new Whole Foods and new retail stores and a bank are currently under construction along East Wynnewood Road and due to open in 2016.

If you're headed to City Avenue, be sure to drive past Saint Charles Borromeo Seminary. Named after Saint Charles Borromeo, the seminary is world renown and was visited by Pope Francis during his 2015 visit.

The SEPTA Route 100 trolley line runs just south of Wynnewood through Haverford Township and also serves residents living in the southern end of Wynnewood.

Civic associations serving Wynnewood and its sub-communities are Wynnewood, Penn Wynne, Shortridge and ArdWood. The Penn Wynne Civic Association is known for its Fourth of July parade.

ARDMORE

Originally known as Athensville, the town of Ardmore was rechristened in 1873. Today, it serves as a host to a charming center of business, industry and residential diversity, swimming in both vibrant history and modern culture.

The town's Lancaster Avenue business district is home to a mix of buildings with architectural styles dating from the late 19th and early 20th century, making it one of Lower Merion's seven historic districts.

Looking for prime shopping and dining? Suburban Square is one of America's oldest outdoor shopping malls, thriving with a wonderful mix of retail and restaurant options. Stores such as Urban Outfitters, Madewell, Sephora, and J. Crew offer fun clothing options, while Paper Source and The Paperia speak to the craftier individual.

Dining options like Besito Mexican, Sweetgreen and Not Your Average Joe's (stationed in the former Suburban movie theater) offer sit-down dining, while the Ardmore Farmers Market allows for a fun perusal of local tastes.

In an effort to attract more consumers, this year, Suburban Square will see the addition of a new four-story parking garage and a doubling of the Trader Joe's grocery store.

Live entertainment is another important aspect of life in Ardmore. The Ardmore Music Hall, recently refinished, hosts several musical acts of various genres throughout the year. The Main Line Ballroom, owned by Lana Rossi, who featured in the locally filmed "Silver Linings Playbook," hosts monthly dances. Ardmore Initiative and the Ardmore Business Association host a number of family-friendly events throughout the year.

Ardmore's easily walkable town layout, mix of historic and contemporary housing, and bustling downtown make it one of the most desirable close-in suburbs of the Philadelphia area.

BRYN MAWR

Bryn Mawr, once known as Humphreysville, is named after the estate of Rowland Ellis, a Quaker who emigrated in 1686 to escape religious persecution. The town was renamed by railroad agent William H. Wilson after he acquired the 283 acres for the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Bryn Mawr Hospital, built in 1893, is ranked as one of the top healthcare providers in the state. Main Line Health recently dedicated $250 million to the renovation of the building, an investment that largely funds a new medical office building, an addition to the parking garage and a new Patient Pavilion.

Students with Bryn Mawr addresses attend schools in the Lower Merion, Radnor and Haverford school districts. Bryn Mawr is also home to The Shipley School, the Baldwin School and the Holy Child School at Rosemont. Additional schools such as The French International School of Philadelphia and Clarke Schools for Hearing and Speech are located in the area as well. Bryn Mawr also hosts several schools of higher education, such as Bryn Mawr and Harcum colleges.

Bryn Mawr has several points of interest for residents and visitors. The Bryn Mawr Campus Arboretum has a lovely variety of trees and is the perfect spot for an afternoon walk while the Bryn Mawr Film Institute is a fun visit for any movie lover.

ROSEMONT

Rosemont is the town used by soap opera creator and writer Agnes Nixon as a model for the fictional town of Pine Valley, Pennsylvania, the setting for the popular daytime drama All My Children, which debuted on ABC in 1970.

The fictional town of “Rosewood” Pennsylvania in the show “Pretty Little Liars” is also based on Rosemont, PA.

The Joseph Sinnott Mansion was listed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1980.[1]

The neighborhood of “Beaupre” in Rosemont was once the 200-acre estate of the same name, built for Alexander Cassatt’s son Robert. The original mansion still stands and is part of Rosemont Presbyterian Village, and the original French iron gates flank entrances from Conestoga Road and South Ithan Avenue.

VILLANOVA

Villanova men's basketball players, Ryan Arcidiacono and Daniel Ochefu with the NCAA National Championship trophy after the campus celebration at Villanova stadium Tuesday evening April 5, 2016.

It's not surprising that the history of the Villanova Train Station and Villanova University are intertwined. The train station that was built in 1890 is actually located within the college campus on Spring Mill Road. The stone station that was built in the same style as the Haverford and Wynnewood train stations, features ground-level eastbound and westbound platforms that are connected by a pedestrian tunnel that runs beneath the tracks.

The town of Villanova, which lies in both Radnor and Lower Merion Townships, takes its name from Villanova University, which was established as Villanova College in 1843.

The college was founded by the Augustinians in 1842 and took its name from St. Thomas of Villanova, a 16th Century Spanish Augustinian bishop, writer and educator. In January 1928 a devastating fire destroyed the main college building. A new building was constructed on the same site and was christened Mendel Hall.

In addition to Villanova University, Villanova was home to a second college, Northeastern Christian Junior College, which used a private home on Montgomery Avenue as its central building. The site was part of the original 250-acre Clairemont Farm that belonged to Joseph E. Gillingham. On March 3, 1892, the first cattle tuberculin test in the country was given to the herd belonging to Dr. Gillingham.

Morris L. Clothier, head of the Strawbridge and Clothier firm, owned the estate from 1922 to 1947 and hosted grand parties for up to 800 guests in the 32-room mansion, also called Clairemont. After NCJC officials purchased the estate, the mansion was renamed Boone Hall in honor of entertainer Pat Boone who committed the royalties from his book "Twist Twelve

And Twenty" to help finance the purchase of the mansion.

NCJC later merged with Ohio Valley College which became Ohio Valley University.

While not a college, the Mount Pleasant School was built in 1830 on a small lot bought for $55 on Mount Pleasant Roads that was opened in 1736.

From schools to roadways, Old Gulph Road, which bisects both Villanova and Rosemont, was originally an Indian trail. "Its milestones, reputed to have been set in place by William Penn, bore a design on their backs similar to his coat of arms. Farmers conveyed their produce or drove their herds through the gulph to the Philadelphia markets along Old Gulph and New Gulph Roads," according to "Montgomery County - The Second Hundred Years," a history on the county.

RADNOR

Radnor, which is Welsh for red earth, is said to be a nod to the town of Radnorshire in central Wales. The former old-time village was initially named Morgan's Corner for the owner of the land, Mordecai Morgan. The land that comprised both Morgan's Corner and Radnor can be traced back to a land grant issued from King William in 1682.

Radnor Township, which was once home to the Lenni Lenape Indians, was first settled in the 1660s by a group of 40 Quakers who traveled from Radnorshire, Wales, to the Main Line seeking religious freedom. The immigrants settled on a 5,000-acre section purchased from William Penn, according to a history of the township found on the Radnor Township website.

The township was officially founded in 1682. In 1717 the Welsh Friends erected a Quaker meeting-house on a trail made by the Conestoga (Susquehanna) Indians, connecting the Schuylkill and Susquehanna Rivers. Later this trail became the Old Lancaster Road, then the Conestoga Road

The Radnor Township seal, which was adopted in 1977 and designed by artist Duncan Miles Terry, includes a nod to the town's railroad history. The seal features seven designs and the date 1682 for the year of William Penn's land grant. Two of the symbols are tied to the township's past and its connection to Wales. The Lion is part of the Coat of Arms of Radnorshire, Wales, while the Griffin is a Welsh dragon. The tree represents William Penn's Greene Country Town, while the wheat sheaf represents the township's early farming country. The Conestoga Wagon is for the freighting transportation that traveled west along Lancaster Pike, while the railroad tracks are for the Main Line railway that also traveled to the west. The Pendules are taken from William Penn's Coat of Arms.

The Columbia Railroad, later known as the Pennsylvania Railroad, first traveled through Radnor Township in 1832.

Downtown Wayne, located in Radnor Township, has had a family-friendly environment since its beginning. The town was originally named Louella after founder J. Henry Askin's daughters, Louisa and Ella. The first inhabitants of modern Wayne were the Lenni Lenape Indians, and were quickly followed by 40 Quakers seeking religious freedom from Radnorshire, Wales, who settled the land between 1633 and 1635. In 1880 banker A.J. Drexel and newspaper editor G.W. Childs purchased the Louella land from the Askin family, Modern-day Wayne offers a rich cultural center. Many annual festivals, including the Main Line Jazz and Food Festival, Radnor Fall Festival, the Top Dog Show, Wayne’s Old-Fashioned Christmas celebration and the Radnor Memorial Day Parade line the calendar with a dusting of light-hearted fun. Iconic structures such as the Art-Deco Style Wayne Movie Theater, Gothic-style Wayne Presbyterian Church, and Tudor-revival style Wayne Hotel offer a brief lapse in time to the curious onlooker.

Downtown Wayne has established itself as the place to go for quality dining. North Wayne Avenue is lined with unique restaurants such as Teresa’s Café, Christopher’s, Margaret Kuo’s, White Dog Café and Matador.

Students throughout Wayne attend Radnor High School, Conestoga High School, Upper Merion Area High School, Archbishop John Carroll High School, The Shipley School and the Agnes Irwin School. THE BALDWIN SCHOOL

When The Baldwin School's new Head of School, Marisa Porges, Ph.D., began her tenure at Baldwin, she wanted to bring her leadership skills to the classroom and launched a program for the senior class titled Ladies Who Lead. This seminar was designed to help the students develop a better understanding of themselves as leaders - as individuals and as a class, at Baldwin and more broadly.

The students were assigned readings prior to each seminar and given questions to think about, such as "What does leadership mean to you?" "How might being a leader change over time, during different stages of life?" "What style of leader do you want to be?" and "What traits or virtues do you think most important as a leader?"

During small group discussions, the students explored leadership in different settings and reflected on their own leadership attributes, skills and strategies.

student interns every summer, said Lynda Risser, chief talent and inclusion officer. The program gives the students a chance to learn about Vanguard, both as a potential employer and as an investment company. The 10-week program gives rising juniors and seniors “exposure and an opportunity to learn more specifically about any field of study,” she said. For example, a finance major would get real life experience in the field, she said. The same is true with students majoring in investment management or information technology. The students, who come from a variety of colleges and universities, can do their internships at Vanguard’s campuses in Pennsylvania, Arizona or North Carolina.

“A good portion of the time is about career development,” she said. There are workshops, personality surveys, and classes “in our Vanguard University” that offers “world class training” in areas such as presentation skills or professional relationship skills.

“We really try to give them an opportunity to see what it’s like to be a team member here in Vanguard,” said Risser. And that can lead to job offers for many of the interns, she said.

Lindsey Press, 24, of Wayne interned as an intern at Vanguard twice while a student at Villanova University. A Radnor High School graduate, she graduated from VU in 2015 with a major computer science and a minor in math.

She was an intern in the IT division, first in retail systems, then in international and corporate systems and now works in the global investment subdivision.

“I loved it,” said Press, a software engineer. “I came back twice.” She was on a school trip to Minnesota for a computer science conference when she came across Vanguard, which had a table there.

“I wanted something close to home,” she said. “I wanted a big internship program, something that provided me with a lot of opportunities to learn about different areas.” Vanguard “was the perfect fit.”

Being an intern before going to work also gave her a leg up with networking at the company.

“The best thing that happened with me was my manager from my first summer internship ended up switching to a different subdivision and she pulled me into her team...It ended up being my favorite role at Vanguard." She also likes that the company gives employees opportunities to explore different areas and learn.

United States Liability Insurance Group

USLI has been hiring college students for 20 years, said Kate Mulvey, assistant vice president and team leader, who is in charge of the program.

The College Help Program is not a traditional summer internship. Rather students are hired as part-time employees while attending college.

"We average 140 students on a year round basis at our home office in Wayne," said Mulvey. "We hire based on what our need is."

"We're pretty forward thinking," she said. "It's a fairly young company. We're bringing youth into the insurance industry."

They are also "very committed to helping our students pay off their student loan debt," she said. There part of the tax code that allows employers to pay tax free dollars toward employees' student loans, she said.

"At the end of each semester we send a check to their school that pays down their loan debt," she said.

Students USLI hires are also required to take professional development courses in their in-house university, she said. They learn various "power skills" that will enhance their careers, whether they continue to work at USLI or not. They take exams and get certificates "at no cost to them," she said.

"I think we have a really strong program," said Mulvey.

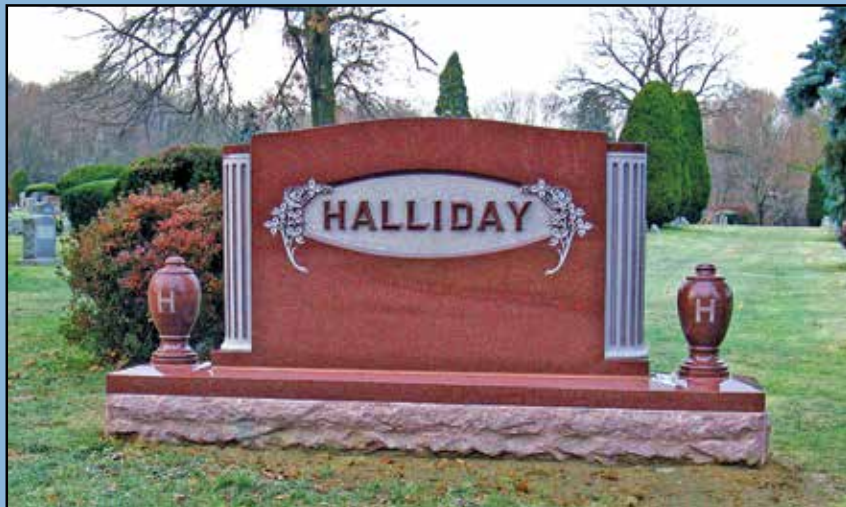

"We love to share the story. The nice thing is the students come in here and have a great experience. They tell all their friends. It makes recruiting fun."

They get more applicants for the program than openings to it is a competitive hiring process that includes a skills assessment, she said. Areas students might work in include underwriting, sales, marketing and IT. The College Help program is "so much more than an internship," said Mulvey.

The people we need to power our region

A message from the president of The Main Line Chamber of Commerce

There's a saying in the chamber of commerce business, if you know one chamber of commerce – you know one chamber of commerce. Some are focused on small communities. They can represent businesses in a county, a state or an entire nation. In addition to such differences in geographical makeup, chambers have different areas of focus.

The cover story of this Guide to the Main Line, which also serves as our annual membership directory, dovetails nicely with The Main Line Chamber of Commerce's focus on business, leadership development and talent. Our geographical footprint puts most of our members in Delaware, Montgomery, Chester and Philadelphia counties.

But thanks to our focus on the people of the region through our leadership development and talent programs, we aren't just bringing people together – we are helping employees to contribute more effectively to the growth of their companies.

After three years of helping companies strengthen their internship programs and attract more diverse candidates, our Talent and Education Network is launching a Talent Writers Collaborative that will highlight best practices in hiring, training and retaining employees – helping companies to learn from each other.

A more robust workforce in our region benefits all our members from retailers who need customers with disposable income to the Main Line Health System and Vanguard, which require employees with the right talent. Companies grow here because educated employees are a key ingredient. Our colleges and universities, social service nonprofits and The Chamber itself are all stronger when the region takes full advantage of its talent.

So what are we all about? Consider this sampling of recent events and programs:

- As the region's largest women's networking group, heading into its ninth year, our Society of Professional Women provides personal and leadership development that companies value as they commit to workforce diversity.
- Our Talent and Education Network connects employers around best practices in keeping talent.

Find The Main Line Chamber of Commerce members as of July 14, 2017 (Key information follows)

MLCC Main Line Chamber Member ♦ Gold Member

- Leadership Main Line and our new Leadership Principles & Profiles program help companies to develop their rising stars and current leaders to ensure success.

- All our members benefit from our Members First events, which welcome new members and help longtime members reconnect – included in the price of membership.

- The Main Line Chamber Foundation provided $53,000 in scholarships to volunteer firefighters and emergency medical technicians this year. That's the most ever.

We also help to support non-profits through education and help companies with their corporate social responsibility initiatives. Our Young Professionals and Business Card Exchange networking events provide high-value and low-cost opportunities to connect with and help each other. Few chambers can match that portfolio, and there's so much more.

Unlike many chambers of commerce that struggle to draw a small group, our rooms are full of members and first-time attendees who are friendly and helpful. Our size and strong member support allows us to offer more opportunities than a typical chamber. Our team, which is made up of both staff and volunteers, works hard to provide worthwhile settings in which to invest the valuable resource of time.

We are proud to partner with Main Line Media News on this guide. Please mention The Main Line Chamber of Commerce when you give our members a call. They will appreciate you noticing they are part of the club as you give them the opportunity to earn your business.

Have an energizing and profitable day.
