Franchot visits Chesapeake Gateway Chamber of Commerce to discuss economy

Democratic Comptroller Peter Franchot has been in the news frequently for his battle to get Baltimore County schools air conditioned, but his message to the Chesapeake Gateway Chamber of Commerce was solely focused on economic growth in Maryland.

- Article & photo by Patrick Taylor -
 Comptroller Peter Franchot paid a visit to the Chesapeake Gateway Chamber of Commerce at Red Brick Station in White Marsh last week, hitting on a variety of subjects including the economy and tax returns.
 "Our economy continues to be unstable," Franchot told the crowd. "It's not what I want, but I see the data everyday. We've got high levels of unemployment, wages that are not growing."
 Franchot stated that while it has been a slow economic recovery, he is optimistic for the future, citing the addition of 40,000 private sector jobs last year as well as a declining unemployment rate.

 "In order to maintain the forward momentum, I think we need to implement policies and strategies that will let us attract large businesses to locate in our state, will also help small businesses and allow middle class families to keep more of their hard-earned money," Franchot stated.
 The Comptroller went on to say that these aren't partisan issues, but "Maryland issues." Franchot then went on to praise Governor Larry Hogan for his ability to work across the aisle, while stating that he didn't mind taking a few hits from his party for working with a Republican.

Regarding taxes, Franchot stated that lawmakers need to stop viewing businesses as an ATM for every well-intentioned program.
 Despite economic hardships, Franchot said that we have plenty of money to take care of the issues that concern our state, but that we need a new approach to spending.
 "We need to reign in spending, we need to reign in unnecessary debt," Franchot said. "I call it fiscal responsibility for purpose. It's being cautious about state spending, ensuring we have a cushion, rather than spending every cent only to be faced with cuts later on."

District 5 CZMP hearing sees struggle between land owners, communities

- by Devin Crum -

The line stretched out the door of Perry Hall High School on Tuesday, March 22, as residents, land owners and developers packed the auditorium for the Fifth District's hearing on potential zoning decisions before the Baltimore County Planning Board.

The hearing was held as part of the quadrennial Comprehensive Zoning Map Process to garner input from the public before the Planning Board makes its recommendations for what each zoning decision should be. Other such hearings will be held before the County Council members in June before they make their final decisions in September.

Speakers at the hearing came out right away in favor of Councilman David Marks' attempts at downzoning for the sake of the quality of area schools and traffic infrastructure, as well as preserving open space and environmental quality.

Marks, who represents District 5 on the County Council, downzoned hundreds of acres in Perry Hall through the 2012 CZMP and followed that this year by raising approximately 2,500 acres of land in his district for review and potential downzoning.

Perry Hall resident Dan Williams stated at the hearing his feeling that area land should not be given zoning for increased residential density, especially when it would allow for apartments, noting that it would be "morally and ethically wrong and not good for the community."

Williams and several of his neighbors are new homeowners in the area and moved there because of the quality of the schools and the area in general. They do not want to see a dramatic change in their quality of life or the schools, he said.

Two Perry Hall High School ninth graders spoke at the hearing as well noting their support for downzoning in the area because of issues with school overcrowding. They testified that because of the sheer number of students at PHHS, some students are forced to eat lunch too early, and that congestion in the hallways can make it difficult to navigate the school.

Other residents aired their concerns about crime increases and future open space, with one stating that, "At this rate [of development], my four children won't have any open space on which to play."

Many who were opposed to increased zoning density or supported downzoning noted their respect for property values and that they do not want to see them decrease. But they also do not want to see urban development in rural or suburban areas, and they do not want development to be a detriment to the environment and wildlife in the area.

However, perhaps just as many land owners testified at the hearing, and their chief concerns were property rights and the value of their property.

Donna Fuhrer, one of the owners of a 122-acre parcel near White Marsh Mall which is under contract by a developer, said she and the other owners support leaving its zoning unchanged. She said the zoning has been the same on that tract for a long time, and it was not until the South Perry Hall Boulevard Improvement Association - which raised the issue - learned that it was under contract that it became an issue.

She pointed out that no one is asking for the density to be increased and that the owners have worked with Councilman Marks and the developer to reduce the amount of residences in the plan by 65 percent, as well as the fact that the property is districted for Overlea High School - not Perry Hall - which is not overcrowded.

While the zoning issues raised by Marks were simply for review, the Perry Hall Improvement Association requested that much of the undeveloped land in eastern Perry Hall be downzoned to help slow development. One of those properties was the Gerst farm, which consists of nearly 55 acres behind Honeygo Village and is slated for development.

Baltimore County had been interested in acquiring the Gerst farm in the late 1990s for a large public park. And owner Lawrence Gerst said at the time that the land would continue to be farmed until his death, then passed on to his daughter who wanted to continue the family's agricultural tradition.

However, the family's real estate broker said at the CZMP hearing that it is no longer feasible for them to keep farming the land, so they want to develop it in a high-quality and responsible manner as a "legacy to their children."

He added that downzoning of the land would ensure that it would become "just another ordinary subdivision with large, boxy homes."

Marks blocked a planned unit development for the property in June 2015 which would have seen many densely packed homes built there. And he noted that if the PHIA's request is granted, about 50 homes could still be built on the property, as opposed to about 150.

"A lot of these developers don't live in Perry Hall," the councilman explained. "They may have these grand plans for these projects, but they don't have to deal with the traffic or school overcrowding" that is the result.

Fort Howard VA outpatient clinic to be closed permanently, relocate

- by Devin Crum -

Following water damage and the discovery of mold at the Veterans Administration's outpatient clinic at Fort Howard, the VA announced on Wednesday, March 23, their decision to close the clinic for good and find a more accessible and less problematic location.

The clinic initially closed on March 9 due to water damage from a broken water heater, and a more thorough evaluation of the damage revealed mold in several areas of the building, according to a statement from the VA.

After the initial closure, all patient care activities and staff were transferred to the Loch Raven VA Outpatient Clinic at 3901 The Alameda in Baltimore, where they will remain until a new location can be identified and opened in eastern Baltimore County.

Dr. Sandra Marshall, chief of staff for the Fort Howard clinic, said the decision to close the clinic permanently was made in conjunction with its entire staff, not just because of the water damage and mold, but also its myriad problems including its numerous infrastructure issues, location within a flood plain and lack of public transportation resources.

"A real desire with this relocation is to look for a site with better accessibility," Marshall commented.

She said they filed for emergency assistance through the chain of command in the Department of Veterans Affairs and asked their contracting office to start looking for new locations in eastern Baltimore County.

Those locations would have to be medical space with a certain square footage, on a major thoroughfare and on or near bus lines since so many veterans use them or other mobility services to get to the VA's clinics, Marshall explained.

"So we want to make sure that that's part of what is incorporated into a location that we use to provide medical care," she said.

Marshall noted that the sites being considered would be up to the contracting office using the criteria provided. But it was rumored by a source who declined to be named that one of the potential sites is near Franklin Square hospital in Rosedale.

Marshall also said that the clinic would be looking for space to expand with the relocation based on the number of veterans residing in eastern Baltimore County.

"We would be looking, hopefully, to expand services at the new relocated site," she said, adding that the square footage of the new site would be proposed to be larger than the current building which is 8,272 square feet.

The current building's location within the flood plain has been particularly problematic with storms and high tides causing flooding a number of times over the years. And the entire building underwent extensive renovations following damage from Hurricane Isabel in 2003, Marshall said.

FORT HOWARD

- continued from page 3 -

The VA has estimated the cost of the move at around $2.5 million, but the final cost would be determined by solicitations through the contracting of office and which new site is chosen.

And the fate of the current building will be evaluated by the VA's engineering office and the chain of command at the central office, which will make a decision on what to do with it.

In the future redevelopment of the Fort Howard property under the Enhanced Use Lease with the VA, the most recent development plans revealed to the public showed the clinic remaining at Fort Howard. However, Marshall said the clinic's relocation would not affect the terms of the EUL since the VA was to own and maintain it.

"My understanding is that the Fort Howard clinic was not maintained by the developer [in the plan]; we were independently maintaining that," she explained. "So moving the clinic at this time would not impact on the Enhanced Use Lease."

The main phone line for the Fort Howard clinic has also been transferred to the Loch Raven clinic and patients can continue to dial 410-477-1800 to schedule, change or cancel a clinic appointment or to speak with a member of their primary care team.

"We apologize for any inconvenience the closure of the Fort Howard VA Outpatient Clinic may cause our veteran patients and employees," Dr. Marshall said, noting that they have tried to make sure they have contacted all of the veterans in the area that they serve at the clinic and other stakeholders about the move.

"We really see this as a great potential to help serve additional veterans in east Baltimore County," she said.

it pauses development and forces people to come to the table to discuss it. And what he is hearing from the community is that they want growth and development to slow down, and that will likely be the result at the end of the process, he said.

"My constituents want development to slow down, new schools to be built and for the county to make sure green spaces are preserved," Marks commented. "They also don't want their taxes raised to pay for the infrastructure needed by new development."

"If land is downzoned, private property owners will still make a profit," he asserted. "But the consequences will not be as severe once they sell their land and, in many cases, move away."

Marks assured that the issues raised during this zoning cycle are still being reviewed and that he is not determined to downzone everything. But he wanted to hear from both the community and property owners to get the best result and strike a balance where possible.

"That's my job," he said, "to strike a balance." Marks said one of the benefits of the CZMP is that it pauses development and forces people to come to the table to discuss it. And what he is hearing from the community is that they want growth and development to slow down, and that will likely be the result at the end of the process, he said.

How to handle car trouble while driving

Sudden car trouble is something no driver wants to experience, but many a driver has been driving down the highway only to feel his or her vehicle start to sputter. Such sputtering might indicate a car is running low on fuel, or it could be a sign of something more serious that requires motorists to think as quickly and safely as possible.

When car trouble strikes while a vehicle is on the road, the first thing many drivers do is check their fuel gauges. A car that runs out of gas is certainly inconvenient, but if you can pull over to the shoulder or make it to the nearest filling station, then this unfortunate situation can be remedied rather easily. But when a car's tank is full and it is still showing signs of trouble, drivers must take steps to protect themselves, their passengers and their vehicles. The following are a few simple tips motorists should keep in mind so they can safely handle any car trouble that may arise while they are out on the road.

- Keep a first-aid kit, spare tire and tire jack in the car at all times. Flat tires are no fun, but they are even more of a nuisance when drivers are not prepared to address them. Always keep a jack and spare tire in your car, even if the spare is a donut you can temporarily use to replace a flat tire until you make it to a filling station or automotive supply store. As an added safety measure, keep a fully stocked first aid kit in your vehicle in case you cut yourself while changing the tire or need to address another medical situation. Visit www.redcross.org for a list of items to include in your automotive emergency kit. Keep a blanket in the trunk as well so your passengers can stay warm should you experience car trouble on a cold day or night.

- Make note of your surroundings. Some car troubles can only be fixed by the professionals, so pay careful attention to your surroundings in case an issue arises and forces you to pull over and call for help. Always pay attention to mile markers and any landmarks that might help you describe where you are. Car troubles can strike at any time and anywhere, so be sure to pay special attention to your surroundings when driving in unfamiliar areas.

- Pull over. Don't panic if an issue arises suddenly.

Remain calm and pull over onto the shoulder. The right shoulder is the area for pulling over on most roads, but you may also use the left shoulder on multilane highways with medians. Try to get as far away from traffic as possible without driving off of level ground, and always use your signals when pulling onto the shoulder. If the vehicle can't make it to the median, put your emergency flashers on and get out of the car, moving away from both the vehicle and traffic. Immediately call for emergency roadside assistance, alerting the authorities if need be.

- Use flares or triangles to alert other drivers. So long as you are not risking your well-being, you can place flares and/or warning triangles behind your vehicle so oncoming traffic knows to drive around it. The popular not-for-profit motor club AAA recommends placing the first flare or triangle 10 feet directly behind the side of the vehicle that is closest to the road. The second should be placed between 30 and 60 feet (increase the distances as the posted speed limit increases) behind the middle of the bumper, while the third flare or triangle should be placed between 120 and 360 feet behind the vehicle's right side.

- Stay with the vehicle. Once you have called for help and set up flares or triangles, stay with the vehicle, though do so at a safe enough distance so you are not in harm's way.

- For motorists who see a disabled vehicle on the side of the road, give as much space as possible when driving around the car. Hundreds are killed or injured every year while they wait with their cars on the side of the road. Many states even have laws in place to protect those stuck on the side of the road.

Sudden car troubles can be scary, but drivers who approach such issues calmly and quickly can reduce their risk for accident or injury.

Did you know?

The excitement of driving a new car off of the lot extends beyond the thrill of having a new set of wheels to show off. Some people just love the smell of a new car. But while that aroma may be pleasant to the olfactory senses, it may be wise to eliminate the smell as soon as possible. According to a 2012 study from the nonprofit Ecology Center, that "new car smell" may include toxic fumes from chemicals used to create the car's interior. There are some indications that the smell is generated from more than 50 volatile organic compounds, or VOCs, that are off-gassing in a confined space. While the potential dangers of breathing in all of these compounds continues to be studied, the flame retardants and plastics used in cars have been linked to illnesses when they have been used in other applications. To speed up the process of removing VOCs from a car, open all of the windows and let it sit in the hot sun. Also, purchasing a vehicle that has been sitting on the lot for a while may mean some of the chemicals have dissipated.

AC IN WINTER

Not only should you check to see that your vehicle's air conditioning (AC) system is in good operating order before summer heat sets in, but you should also be running your AC during the colder months. Even though it may be cold outside, operating the AC full blast for about ten minutes every few weeks allows the coolant to circulate through the system. This is important because the coolant acts as a lubricant that keeps rubber seals and pipes from cracking and shrinking. Failure to keep these rubber parts in good condition invites leaky seals that will not hold coolant. Now is a good time to see if any seals need to be changed and/or the coolant needs recharging.

Checking your AC isn't the only reason that you should schedule a tune-up in the spring. The wear and tear of winter roads can leave your car vulnerable to damage during the warm weather driving season. Our ASE-certified technicians can provide the preventive care that will catch small problems - like cracked seals - before they turn into big headaches - like a failed air conditioner during a traffic jam on a hot summer day.

Open Mon.-Fri. 7:30-5. We fix check engine lights!

HINT: Unless a vehicle's air conditioning system is used throughout the year, moisture buildup can lead to mold and bacteria growth that has that unpleasant "dirty socks" odor.

Why it pays to replace headlights in pairs

When it comes to vehicle maintenance, the rule of two has long reigned among professional automotive technicians and driving safety advocates. In accordance to this rule, drivers replacing important parts in their cars and trucks, such as tires, brakes, shocks and wiper blades, should always do so in pairs.

Replacing parts in pairs can ensure vehicles are properly balanced and functioning safely. But it's not just tires, brakes and other big-ticket components that should be replaced in pairs. Vehicle lighting plays an integral role in keeping drivers and their passengers safe, and motorists should exercise the same caution regarding their vehicles' headlights, taillights and turn signals that they do when maintaining the rest of their cars and trucks.

Why replace aging headlight bulbs?

Few drivers include headlight bulb replacement in their vehicle maintenance routines. But old headlight bulbs can drastically compromise visibility at night, when drivers' visual acuity is naturally reduced by as much as 70 percent. As headlight bulbs age, the effects of exposure to sunlight, ozone and pollution can significantly reduce their light output. According to Philips Automotive, a leading manufacturer of vehicle lighting components, headlight bulbs begin to project significantly less light within two to three years of their initial usage, producing dimmer light outputs that compromise the safety of drivers and their passengers. For example, new headlight bulbs capable of projecting 240-foot beams in front of a vehicle may see that projection dwindle to just 160 feet within two to three years.

Why replace bulbs two at a time?

In an effort to promote the importance of changing headlight bulbs two at a time, Philips developed the "Change In Pairs" safety campaign, which aims to educate motorists about the dangers of dimming lights while promoting the many reasons that changing bulbs in pairs makes the road safer for all travelers. To support this safety initiative, Philips also packages its Upgrade Headlight Bulbs in pairs.

Though replacing two headlight bulbs when only one is dimming may seem unwarranted, maintaining a consistent light output in both headlights makes the road safer for drivers, their passengers and oncoming motorists. When only one bulb is replaced, the resulting light output can be both unbalanced and unpredictable, providing inadequate lighting that can compromise driver visibility. In addition, oncoming motorists may experience difficulty seeing vehicles with just one headlight operating at full capacity, and some may even mistake oncoming cars and trucks for motorcycles, creating positioning issues for drivers on both sides of the yellow line.

How else can drivers improve visibility?

- Replace worn out wiper blades. Wiper blades need to be changed each season or in three-month intervals. Rubber wiper blades can grow brittle rather quickly, potentially compromising driver visibility at times when they need their vision to be as strong as possible, such as when rain or snow is falling.

- Clean interior glass and mirrors. Over time, interior glass can develop a film-like buildup that reduces vision and creates hazy reflections from the sun. Smokers may notice such buildup is especially thick in their vehicles.

- Don't hang accessories in your vehicle. Fuzzy dice, photos and other items hung on rearview mirrors can prove distracting and block you from seeing the road.

Simple maintenance tips to keep you running

Motor vehicles are sizable investments that, for many people, trail only homes and educations in terms of the biggest expenses they will ever have. So it's in drivers' best interests to take every step possible to protect their investments and keep their vehicles running smoothly as long as possible. While knowledgeable mechanics can be invaluable resources, drivers can take several minor, simple steps to keep their cars running smoothly for years to come.

- Perform weekly visual inspections. Few drivers take the time to look at their vehicles once those vehicles lose their new car luster. But visual inspections can help drivers find problems that, though minor, may impact their vehicles' performance. For example, a routine examination of vehicle tires can indicate if those tires are properly inflated. Poorly inflated tires can decrease fuel efficiency and affect the overall safety of a vehicle. If tires appear flat, check their pressure and inflate them to the levels listed in your owner's manual.

- Look for fluid leaks. Another telltale and easily identifiable sign that a vehicle needs some maintenance is the sight of fluids beneath the car. If you notice puddles or stains beneath where you normally park your car, your vehicle may be leaking fluids. Note the color and consistency of the fluid and then call your mechanic to determine which fluid is leaking and how to fix the problem.

- Stick to manufacturer-recommended maintenance schedules. Whether your vehicle is brand new or has some tread on its tire, consult the owner's manual for manufacturer recommendations with regard to changing fluids and replacing filters. Many recent models can now be driven roughly 5,000 miles before they need an oil change, but check your owner's manual for the guidelines established by your vehicle's manufacturer, and adhere to that schedule religiously. If you drive an older car, recognize that the vehicle may benefit from more frequent oil changes and tuneups.

In addition, read the manual for additional guidelines, such as how often to replace the air filter, headlight, turn signal and brake lamps, windshield wipers, and other vehicle parts that can wear down over time.

- Look under the hood as well. Inspect rubber belts for signs of wear and tear, and know that such belts may need to be replaced every 50,000 miles or even more frequently depending on your driving habits. Lifting the hood is also necessary when checking fluid levels, which you should check periodically and before and after any long trips.

Woman shoots husband and son in Dundalk

The Baltimore County Police Department has identified the suspect in a March 26 shooting in Dundalk as 30-year-old Erica Nicole Shifflett of the 7300-block of School Avenue in Dundalk. Shifflett has been charged with attempted first-degree murder, first-degree assault, and related charges. She is being held without bail at the Baltimore County Detention Center.

Just after 7 p.m. on Saturday, police responded to the 7300-block of School Avenue for a shooting. The investigation has indicated that Shifflett was trying to take her 7-year-old son from the location and became involved in an argument with her 31-year-old husband. When the husband went to take the son inside, Shifflett pulled out a gun and fired, injuring the husband and their son. Family members held Shifflett down while they waited on police to arrive. The victims were taken to an area hospital for treatment and are expected to survive.

This incident remains under investigation by the Baltimore county Police Department Violent Crimes Unit.

Trooper's truck inspection leads to dirt bike recovery

An alert state trooper's inspection of a tow truck with an equipment violation lead to the recovery of a stolen dirt bike and the arrest of a juvenile on March 23 in Essex.

The suspect is not being identified due to the suspect being a juvenile. The juvenile was charged with theft and possession of marijuana. The juvenile was released to the custody of his father.

Shortly after 8 p.m. on March 23, a Maryland state trooper assigned to Commercial Vehicle Enforcement Division was monitoring traffic on southbound Maryland Avenue at Platinum Road, when he observed a tow truck with a non-working headlamp. Subsequently the trooper made a traffic stop and conducted an inspection. The tow truck was towing a Kawasaki KX 100 dirt bike. Further investigation by the trooper determined the dirt bike was reported stolen in January through Baltimore City Police Department.

The preliminary investigation revealed the driver had no knowledge the bike was reported stolen. The driver of the tow truck advised the bike was being towed at the request of his front seat passenger, identified as the accused juvenile. The tow truck operator further advised the juvenile was riding the bike earlier and flagged him down due to running out of fuel.

Maryland State Police contacted the Baltimore City Police Department and advised them of the recovery. The bike was later returned to the owner. The owner of the Kawasaki KX 100 dirt bike expressed his gratitude to the trooper and advised the trooper he thought he would never see his bike again.

Deception burglaries on the rise as weather changes

Citizens are alerted to certain crime trends that have occurred throughout the county in recent years. Deception burglaries and home improvement scams occur throughout the year, but are known to increase when the weather gets warmer. Typically these are criminals who are on the move. They begin working in the southern states and head north during the spring and summer months.

The elderly are the most likely targets since they tend to be trusting and very concerned about their property and their neighborhood. Adult relatives of senior citizens should remind them of this possible crime.

Be mindful of certain ruses:

* Suspects generally work in pairs and approach homeowners at their residence with the intent of gaining entry under a seemingly benevolent role like posing as a legitimate worker from a local gas company, water department, cable company, or as a tree trimmer, paver, county inspector, or government official. One suspect will distract the homeowner while a second suspect will quietly enter the home and search for valuables and cash.

Police looking for woman last seen in Dundalk

The Baltimore County Police Department is seeking the public's assistance in locating a woman last seen in the Dundalk area.

Lillabelle Butler is a 66-year-old African American woman, 5'04", 140 pounds, and wears a black leather jacket. Butler, who is homeless, was last on February 16 on Merritt Boulevard and her family has not heard from her in a while. She is also known to frequent the Towson Mall and may carry a suitcase.

The search for Lillabelle Butler is being led by the Baltimore County Police Missing Persons Unit.

Anyone with information on Lillabelle Butler is asked to call police at 410-307-2020.

* A suspect may also pose as a family friend of a relative or friend of a neighbor. He or she will knock on the door and ask for a pen and paper to leave the victim's neighbor a note. The suspect may appear to have difficulty writing the note, and will ask to come inside the house. Once inside the victim's house, the suspect will ask the victim to help write the note. While that criminal distracts the victim, others enter the residence to remove money and valuables.

A variety of vehicles have been associated with these subjects including pickup trucks, vans, and sport utility vehicles. Often, the victim doesn't even know he or she has been victimized for hours or days later when they might go looking for a piece of jewelry or precious heirloom.

Be alert to anyone in your neighborhood asking to gain entry into your home. Always ask to see identification and let them know you are going to call and get authorization from their company before allowing them access. If they are legitimate, they won't mind the wait.

There have already been a number of deception burglaries just in the last few weeks. If you suspect that someone at your door is a scam artist, call Baltimore County police. You could help other potential victims from being scammed.

Investigators believe many deception burglaries don't get reported because the victim is too embarrassed or fears retribution. Neglecting to call may allow a criminal to go free and victimize someone else.

Remember, do not intervene, but call 911 immediately with a description of the suspect and vehicle used in the suspicious activity.

Delegate McDonough voices concerns over failed JLENS program, taxpayer waste

- by Delegate Pat McDonough (R-7) -

The familiar blimps that have been our neighbors in the sky for many years have become a disturbing story as we learn more about them. The JLENS project cost taxpayers $2.7 billion. These funds, which could have been used to create jobs, finance education and promote other needed projects, were wasted since the blimps are being phased out. A 2012 report by the Pentagon's Operational Test & Evaluation Office faulted the system and rated its reliability as poor.

Senator John McCain (R, Arizona) and others lampooned the troubled system, and Governor Mike Huckabee ridiculed the runaway blimp on national TV as a "bag of gas." Huckabee said, "They could not get rid of the blimps because the government had too much money invested in them."

One major embarrassment unfolded last spring when a U.S. Postal worker landed an aircraft called a gyrocopter on the lawn of the U.S. Capitol. The blimps should have identified the gyrocopter long before it entered Washington, D.C., airspace. Congressman Dutch Ruppersberger (D, Maryland) who serves on the House Defense Appropriations Subcommittee was one of the chief cheerleaders for the JLENS blimp project. "The JLENS workers will be buying homes, shopping in our grocery stores and eating in our restaurants," said Representative Ruppersberger. The blimps were built by defense contractor Raytheon and, since 1999, the company has donated $1.6 million through its political action committee. Ruppersberger has received $91,250 from Raytheon over the years, the highest amount of contributions to any member of Congress, according to The Center for Responsive Politics.

"I believe that Dutch Ruppersberger 'owns' this failed program that cost taxpayers $2.7 billion in wasted funding. 'Dutch's blimps' squandered funds that could have been used for education, jobs and veterans. The cozy relationship between Congressman Ruppersberger and Raytheon Corporation is troubling. The taxpayers deserve a federal audit and investigations into the JLENS blimp program. This fiasco has put the nation at risk because a more effective defense system could have been developed. Despite a lack of interest by the major media, I will not permit the controversy to just fade away," said Delegate Pat McDonough.

Construction to advance on new Kingsville fire station

- By Councilman David Marks (R-5) -

This year has brought exciting news for the Perry Hall and Kingsville communities. In early February, the White Marsh Volunteer Fire Company finalized a deal with General Motors that will lead to a new six-acre location on Philadelphia Road. Then, in late February, the Kingsville Volunteer Fire Company announced that construction will finally occur this summer on an upgraded and expanded station.

The new facility, which will be located at the current location off Bradshaw Road, is expected to cost $2.7 million and take about a year to build.

The company had launched a capital campaign to raise more than $4 million for a new station. With help from state bond bills and funding from Baltimore County, the fire station can supplement private money and begin construction on the fire station.

The Kingsville Volunteer Fire Company serves White Marsh, Perry Hall, Long Green and Jacksonville, as well as Joppa, Joppatowne, Edgewood and Fallston in Harford County.

I would like to thank the leadership and members of the 62-year-old Kingsville fire station for their service to northeastern Baltimore County, and all those who have supported the construction of this new facility.

"MY BIG FAT GREEK WEDDING" Sequel is Strictly for Family Only

- By Teddy Durgin -

"My Big Fat Greek Wedding 2" is less of a movie and more like one of those made-for-TV reunion movies they used to do in the 1980s, '90s and 2000s where a show that had been on the air one or two or three decades earlier like "Leave It to Beaver" or "Eight Is Enough" or "Dallas" returns for a curtain call and a revisit. There's not really an important story to tell. The world would have been fine if the past had stayed in the past, and we didn't see all of the ol' cast members' new wrinkles, gray hairs and additional pounds. But it ends up being comfort viewing for the diehards.

To be honest, I saw the original "Greek Wedding" once when it came out in 2002 and then never again. I remember liking it and marveling at the box office and minor phenomenon that built up around it. But it didn't become one of my favorites. The only thing I really recall vividly is that the bride's parents bought the newlywed couple a house, and how half the people in the audience at the time lost it and started crying and clapping.

Pretty much everyone returns from that first film ... er, I think. It was a massive cast 14 years ago, and it's a massive cast again. Lots of checks are being cut as we speak. The big returnees are Nia Vardolas as Toula and John Corbett as Ian. The first film had a good center that drove the plot, Toula and Ian's mismatched romance. The sequel picks up actually 18 years later, and it's a bit more scatter-shot. This time around, Toula and Ian have a teenage daughter (Elena Kampouris), who is a senior in high school and Mom is freaking out over where her baby will be going to college. At the same time, Toula's mom and dad (Michael Constantine and Lainie Kazan) learn that their wedding five decades earlier never became legit because the priest neglected to sign the wedding papers.

I keep being tempted to use the phrase "Oy vey!" But this is a Greek flick. So, in the words of Maxwell Q. Klinger, "This is a fine piece of baklava!" There, is of course, also a subplot involving Toula and Ian's marriage hitting a dry spell. And that leads to one of the film's better gags where the once-super-happy couple try to get a little something-something going in a parked car only to be interrupted by the whole family.

And the whole family here continues to largely travel as a pack. The chuckles are certainly on the level of a sitcom circa the '80s and '90s. In fact, about a decade ago if I recall, Vardolas turned her hit film into an actual sitcom with many of these actors appearing, and it only ended up lasting a handful of episodes before being cancelled.

Will these folks be welcomed back as big-screen characters? I don't know. The original was one of those flicks that started small and steadily built its audience over a number of weeks. It actually holds the record for being the highest grossing film of all time never to actually occupy the No. 1 box office slot on any given weekend. In 2016, it will have to do battle with the likes of Batman and Superman and, in the coming weeks, a new Melissa McCarthy sitcom movie and a live-action version of "The Jungle Book." So, I don't see this one hitting the top spot either.

If you enjoyed the first one, I'm not going to dissuade you from attending this reunion. But to people who just casually liked the first movie and haven't given it a second thought over the years... eh, better to spend time with your own annoying family.

Long-awaited DC Comics team-up is not so super

- By Teddy Durgin -

I'm chalking up "Batman v. Superman: Dawn of Justice" as one of those "I Don't Wanna" movies. As I prepared to see it earlier this week, I kept saying things like "I don't wanna go to another Superman film where the Man of Steel is portrayed as tortured and stressed and wholly uncertain of his place in this world" and "I don't wanna see a Superman/Batman movie that's NOT meant for kids."

And then the movie started, and the "I Don't Wannas" continued. "Oh, man! I don't wanna be seeing a movie in which more than half the world fears and mistrusts Superman" and "I don't wanna be seeing a Batman who has horrific nightmares, is a sadistic vigilante and is completely hollow inside."

And now I sit here at this keyboard, and the three words that keep echoing through my brain? Yup. I don't wanna! "I don't wanna give a negative review to a movie featuring heroes I grew up thrilling to, dressing up for Halloween as and generally loving" and "I don't wanna report to parents who are readers of mine that this film is definitely not appropriate for their young children."

But... sigh... that's what I must do. I found "Batman v. Superman" to be an utterly joyless moviegoing experience. It's an unrelentingly bleak and grim take on both Metropolis, Gotham City and their two favorite sons. It's not a movie that seeks to thrill. It's not a movie that aims to make your spirit soar. You won't believe a man can fly. You'll just come out tense and bothered.

Most of the cast of "Man of Steel" returns. The film opens with Henry Cavill's Superman doing battle with Michael Shannon's General Zod through Metropolis. It's the climax of "Man of Steel," only this time seen at street level as billionaire Bruce Wayne (Ben Affleck) frantically dodges falling debris from all of the skyscrapers Supes and Zod are toppling during their slugfest. When he witnesses first-hand the destruction two Kryptonian aliens can inflict on a major city, he stands among the carnage and vows as his alter ego Batman to stop whoever turns out to be the winner.

Superman, of course, is triumphant. But the battle costs thousands their lives. Eighteen months later, the world appears split on whether Superman is a benevolent protector of the planet or a false God who, if provoked, can lay waste to the world. Into this mix comes oddball corporate titan Lex Luthor (Jesse Eisenberg), who has spent untold chunks of his fortune mining the Earth for fragments of Superman's home planet. The green material, known as kryptonite, is humanity's only shot at protecting itself. It's also Luthor's ticket to push forward vague world domination plans.

The plot is more muddled than that

BATMAN V. SUPERMAN
Dawn of Justice

brief recap. And don't get me started on Hans Zimmer. I can't believe this is the same man who once composed such gentle scores to films like "Rain Man," "Driving Miss Daisy," and "Green Card." Ever since he laid down the tracks for the "Pirates of the Caribbean" movies, his scores have been the symphonic equivalent of getting close to one's ear and just screaming. In addition to his horns and percussion, he employs a large chorus here that sound less like they are singing and more like they are crying out in physical torment. Zimmer's music has become so over-the-top bombastic that even if Christ Himself returned to walk this Earth again, He would request, "Uh, just don't let my return be set to the music of THAT guy!"

It's hard not to compare this to the vastly more entertaining Marvel movie franchise. One smart thing that's being done over on "that side" is the hiring of different directors (everyone from Joss Whedon and Joe Johnston to Kenneth Branagh and Anthony and Joe Russo) to keep things fresh. New blood seems to energize each film that hits screens. I hope that's the case here. Because when it comes down to it, I don't wanna see future DC Comics films if they're going to be like this.

Baldwin not wrong on outlet mall, but fuzzy on the details

- By Devin Crum -

On Thursday, March 24, The Avenue News printed an opinion editorial by Associate Editor Dan Baldwin with the title, "Voters won't get a say on outlet mall."

That headline in itself is not a true statement since the referendum drive for Baltimore County Bill 53-15 - which would allow the Paragon Outlets outright - did collect enough signatures and it will be on the ballot for voters to decide in November.

So the voters will get their say; it's just a matter of whether or not it will mean anything. But that's a technicality.

Baldwin is correct that the zoning change requested for the planned outlet mall site in the ongoing Comprehensive Zoning Map Process (CZMP) would effectively render the referendum moot since it would allow the development by right, much like Bill 53-15 itself.

But what Baldwin neglects to mention is that the zoning change is just the latest insurance policy Paragon Outlet Partners has taken out to ensure the mall gets built and the third way that it could be approved to move forward.

The first way was, of course, the planned unit development (PUD) plan which brought this whole thing about. That plan has continued to move through the judicial process throughout this whole ordeal and was most recently in the Baltimore County Circuit Court.

The judge in that case remanded the appeal back to the county's Board of Appeals for a more elaborate rationale for their approval of the project. And Paragon has appealed that decision to the Court of Special Appeals for dismissal of the case. If that appeal fails, it will be back in the Circuit Court.

With no end in sight for the legal proceedings, though, County Councilwoman Cathy Bevins, who represents the area and supports the project, proposed Bill 53-15, which the County Council unanimously approved last August. Contrary to Baldwin's assertion, it was not a zoning change, but would change the law to allow for an outlet mall under the site's current zoning (another technicality, I suppose). This was the second method of approval.

And finally, Paragon requested the zoning change on the site from the current designation for light manufacturing to Business Major (BM), which would allow the mall - the third possibility.

To be clear, if any one of these methods is successful, the other two make no difference.

But where Baldwin really faults is in describing what the project would bring to White Marsh. While the outlet mall project would be a $100 million investment in the area and is expected to create 1,600 jobs, and it did cut 1,000 units off of the approved plan for 1,250 apartments, he incorrectly states that it would also involve the construction of the other 250 apartments.

Paragon purchased only about 52 acres of the original 83-acre site, which is all that they need for the outlet mall. It does not include the acreage on which the apartments were to be built. The remaining acreage is still owned by Corporate Office Properties Trust (COPT). So while the apartments are still technically in the picture, it would be COPT who builds them, not Paragon.

However, COPT has also requested a zoning change on their parcel similar to Paragon's request, except that a portion of it would be designated BM-AS which would allow for a gas station and convenience store. The community is hoping that this change will take the remaining 250 apartments off the table, and Councilwoman Bevins has stated previously that she was working toward that end.

Baldwin also wrote that "Paragon has agreed to build an $8 million ramp from Interstate 95 which will help take traffic off of Philadelphia Road." But as the two highways are nearly parallel in this location and do not intersect anywhere, they would be almost impossible to connect with a ramp.

What I'm sure he meant to say was that Paragon plans to build a ramp allowing traffic to travel from Philadelphia Road eastbound onto MD Route 43. Currently, traffic on Philadelphia can only go westbound onto MD-43, and eastbound traffic must go north to Cowenton Avenue or south to Middle River Road.

As a result, the traffic at these intersections backs up as it is, particularly at Cowenton Avenue. The new ramp would be a great improvement for moving traffic out of the area and onto larger roads that can handle it, as well as an asset for the White Marsh Volunteer Fire Company which plans to build a new station across from the site on land donated by the White Marsh GM facility.

Furthermore, Baldwin states that the state "would not, and will not" build the ramp, which is not entirely true. The project is on the Maryland State Highway Administration's list of projects to be completed. It is just not expected to be funded for at least 10 years, according to SHA officials.

I agree with Baldwin's overall message that the referendum vote essentially will not matter if the County Council approves Paragon's requested zoning change (which they are likely to do since Bevins has supported the project from the beginning and the other Council members almost always defer to the decision of the one who represents the district), and that the only people opposed to the outlet mall seem to be the "loud minority."

And he is right that the Planning Board held a public hearing at Parkville High School on Tuesday, March 29, regarding Sixth District zoning change requests, where the public again had their say. He simply needs to brush up on the details.

The above opinion reflects only the opinion of the author and not that of the East County Times. For comments or concerns, feel free to email Devin Crum directly at ecteditorial@comcast.net.

very eager to find my forever family and am anxiously awaiting your arrival to our shelter. See ya' soon!

Beethoven here, looking for my forever home. I may not be famous like the composer or the movie, but I am special in my own way by being friendly and loyal. My owner had become ill so I was spending a lot of time by myself. Now when I see people I become very excited and don't want them to leave. So as you can tell, I like attention. I also enjoy long walks and food. If you show me you want to play, I'd be happy to join in as well. I am

ASPARAGUS

The adoption fee is $100 for Beethoven and sponsored and free for Asparagus. For more information visit www.bmorehumane.org.

Hi there, I'm Asparagus and I'm a social and friendly guy who needs a forever home. I love attention, head and butt rubs. At times I also like to be talkative so that people know I am looking for attention. I enjoy being held and meeting new people. I did test positive for FIV, which means I have Feline Immunodeficiency Virus and if you have any questions about that, please call us and ask or speak with one of our adoption counselors. Believe me, it does not change my super happy and sweet personality.

Nationwide company involved with sales of a remarkable health care product, with its headquarters in Baltimore, is looking for well-spoken, energetic individuals to work in a fast-paced environment, setting appointments for the outside sales representatives. The company responds to its direct mail, television and internet campaigns, and direct call inquiries on an immediate basis.

POSITIONS ARE AVAILABLE FOR TWO SHIFTS:
8AM-3PM • 6PM-10PM

Company offers Vacation Leave, PTO Leave, 401k Retirement Plan, Department Goal Reward Program, and more as well as an on-going bonus plan which could increase earnings up to $15 per hour.

Experience is not necessary. Company will provide training.

Interested candidates should call for an interview at 443-696-3016 and ask for Debbie or Steve. E.O.E.

Holly Hill Memorial Gardens seeks a full time family service counselor. Experience preferred but will train the right candidate. The right person will be comfortable using computers, working with families under difficult situations, willing and interested in learning a new career. This position does require the ability to work evenings and weekends on occasion. As a full time employee you will qualify for health, dental, vision and a 401k retirement plan. If you wish to apply, please e-mail your resume to William.Carter@dignitymemorial.com
