Dundalk celebrates Irish roots with ST. PATRICK'S PARADE

The Baltimore City Pipe Band headed up the 11th annual parade through the Dundalk Village Shopping Center with a medley of celtic melodies from their bag pipes. And although the overcast and chilly weather contributed to a relatively small crowd, fun was had by all in celebration of the Irish heritage which helped found the community of Dundalk. Groups from all over Baltimore County, Baltimore City and even Washington, D.C. came to participate in the parade and celebrate the greater Irish community. Stemmers Run parents express concerns over Crossroads addition

- By Devin Crum -The principals for Stemmers Run Middle School and the Crossroads Center, as well as other Baltimore County Public Schools officials, hosted a community meeting with parents on Wednesday, March 9, at SRMS to discuss the upcoming integration of the two schools.

But many of the parents expressed their reservations about the move, which they say could present problems for their children and the school as a whole.

Because of the scheduled demolition and reconstruction of Victory Villa Elementary School during the next two years, the students attending VVES during that time will need to be relocated to another building. And BCPS has decided that they will move them to the Rosedale Center Middle/High School at 8200 Old Philadelphia Road in Rosedale. The students attending the Rosedale Center will move to the Crossroads Center at 11640 Crossroads Circle in White Marsh and the Crossroads students will move to the vacant spaces inside Stemmers Run.

SRMS currently has about 700 students enrolled, but the building has capacity for 1,154. Therefore, after some minor construction and building upgrades to take place during the late spring and summer of this year, the roughly 180 students at the Crossroads Center will begin attending their programs at SRMS for the 2016-2017 school year.

"We have space," said SRMS Principal Bryan Thanner. "We have all these empty classrooms around; if we shifted into one section, we can free up a section of the school."

The plan for SRMS is being modeled somewhat after what was done at Holabird Middle School in Dundalk following the closure of Eastwood Elementary. In that - see CONCERNS on page 6 -

Perry Hall residents, area developer oppose Strawbridge Commons PUD

- By Devin Crum -

As with most any new development, traffic issues and school overcrowding were brought up as concerns at a community input meeting (CIM) for a planned unit development (PUD) proposed for a 12-acre plot situated south of E. Joppa Road between Gough Park and Cowenton Avenue in Perry Hall.

The PUD, first approved for review via a County Council resoultion in 2014, proposes to build 58 townhomes across eight acres of the property while leaving the newly-acquired four acres along Cowenton Avenue for use as open space by the community.

While the CIM on March 1 was the third one held since the County Council resolution allowed the project to enter into the review process, land use attorney for the developer David Gildea said the project is still in the conceptual stage and has not yet been approved by any county agencies.

And "what is proposed for [the original eight acres] is what was always proposed," he said, noting that the only major change is the acquisition of the four acres, which allows them to amenitize the development.

Additionally, now that the developer, Maryland Land Real Estate Advisors, owns both sides of Rexis Avenue, Baltimore County has requested that the road be closed to through traffic.

Residents of the neighboring communities protested this, describing the problems they have with traffic and getting out of their own developments and their use of Rexis Avenue as a "back door."

They also scoffed at the calculation that a total of only 21 children would be added to area schools by the development, noting that the schools are already intensely overcrowded.

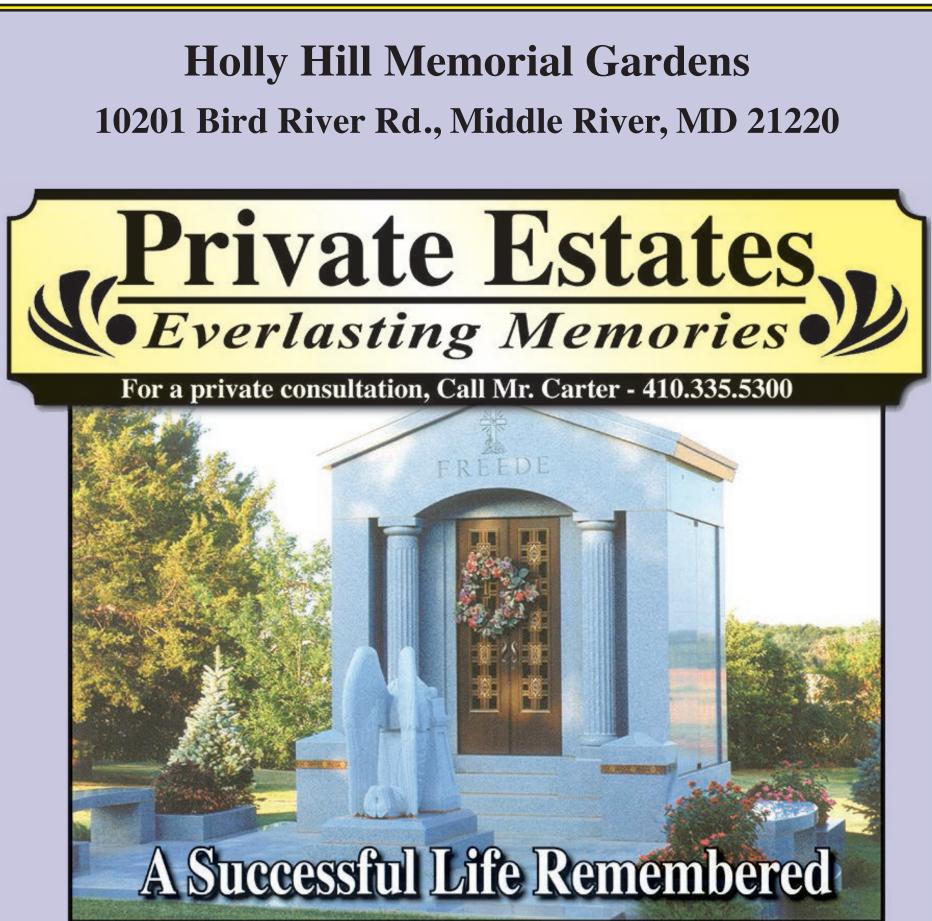

Area developer Paul Amirault, who has built at least 10 other developments consisting of hundreds of homes in Perry Hall, criticized the project and Councilman David Marks for allowing the project to move forward.

He questioned how the developer can reconcile putting such density into the project when the underlying zoning would only allow for 42, preferably single-family homes and the community faces such serious issues with residential density already.

In a conversation with the East County Times, Councilman Marks defended his allowance of the PUD to proceed in that the plan would keep some land from being developed while garnering other improvements for the community. However, he did not say that he necessarily endorses the project. He also pointed to his plans to downzone up to 4,000 acres in the area to lighten growth.

"I do find it hypocritical that one of Perry Hall's biggest developers, Paul Amirault, would attack me when his projects flooded our schools with new students," Marks charged. "Mr. Amirault can offer a litany of complaints; I will present solutions and try to reduce the school overcrowding past developments created."

Kamenetz travels to Parkville for Coffee With Kevin

- by Patrick Taylor -Over the past few years, County Executive Kevin Kamenetz has held approximately a dozen "Coffee With Kevin" forums, where he meets up with members of the public to openly discuss what is happening in Baltimore County. Last week, Kamenetz, along with Councilwoman Cathy Bevins, traveled to St. Andrew's Lutheran Church for another installment of the series.

Kamenetz started off the event by boasting that the county hasn't raised property taxes in 27 years, while also stating that it has been 23 years since the county has raised the income tax. From there, he jumped to the county's triple-A bond rating.

"That rating is important because when we borrow money for schools and roads and all the things we do, we pay the lowest interest rate possible," said Kamenetz. "That helps us save tax dollars."

Kamenetz stated that the county has increased its efficiency, utilizing technology as much as possible to save money.

After touching on the ways the county saves money, Kamenetz touched on how the county spends its money, dividing it into three categories - schools, public safety and infrastructure.

On the issue of schools, some members of the crowd pushed Kamenetz on the effectiveness of providing air conditioning to schools that essentially need to be rebuilt. Kamenetz responded by noting that sometimes a total rebuild isn't totally necessary, citing the success of renovations at Pikesville High School and Hereford High School. Kamenetz maintained that it would cost approximately half a billion dollars to rebuild four high schools - including Patapsco - and that renovations were the much better option, costing the county $20 million per school with the state kicking in an additional $20 million per school.

In regards to public safety, Kamenetz claimed that overall crime is down in the county, and thanked the police department and Police Chief Jim Johnson for doing such a strong job cutting down on crime.

According to Kamenetz, lifestyle is an area where the county is improving, citing the recent groundbreaking of Angel Park, which will provide access for children with physical and social disabilities. The park was designed in part utilizing surveys from over 4,500 elementary school students.

Not everything went smoothly for the County Executive, however, with a tiff over the role of county inspectors threatening to ruin the day. One gentleman in the crowd conveyed his displeasure that inspectors had approved a deck attachment to his home, only to be told later that it was in violation of county regulations. Kamenetz maintained that the role of inspectors was to ensure that the minimum requirements of safety were met, and that any issues the man had were not the responsibility of the county.

Dundalk boy plans swim to benefit Kidney Foundation of Maryland

- by Patrick Taylor -

On March 17, Jake Rusnak turns ten. He's a lot like other young children - he plays video games, participates in the Cub Scouts and loves math and reading. His father, Andrew, referred to him as the "classic all-American boy."

But unlike most ten-year-olds, Jake, with the help of his parents, is planning his second benefit swim, one that will raise money for the Kidney Foundation of Maryland. Jake previously did a 100lap swim, raising $2,200 that was split evenly between the Y of Central Maryland and the Maryland Kidney Foundation. This year, the Kidney Foundation will be receiving 80-percent of the funds. The money that the Y of Central Maryland receives will go towards sending kids to camp in the summer.

Jake was born with a kidney condition called hydronephrosis, which causes the kidney to not function. Sometimes the condition will reverse itself, but that wasn't the case for Jake. When he was four, what was left of his kidney was removed from his body.

"We kind of have a house rule that he has to participate in a sport or activity just to stay in shape, and swimming is what he picked," said Andrew. "We were told that he couldn't do contact sports, so swimming is a good option for him." Since he was only a year old, Jake has been in the water. Over the years his love of swimming grew. When asked how he compared to Olympian Michael Phelps, Jake pointed out that Phelps is more of a speed swimmer while he is more of a distance swimmer.

Jake, an A student at St. Casimir's, did his 100 lap challenge on Oct. 5, 2013, finishing the swim in an hour and eight minutes. The five mile challenge is a bit trickier, with Jake having to do 360 laps. Three months ago, he did four miles and could have kept on going.

According to Andrew, Jake has great form and can swim at length without getting tired. That's a good thing, considering he will most likely be in the pool for more than a few hours.

Jake hopes to eventually take to open waters with his swimming, setting his sights on the English Channel. His father hopes that he'll be able to swim to Hart Miller Island this summer. But more than anything, Jake simply aspires to be a good swimmer.

The benefit will take place on May 7 at the YMCA's Aquatic Center in Dundalk. It's slated to begin at 10 a.m. To donate, feel free to stop by the YMCA in Dundalk to pick up a pledge sheet, or stop by the East County Times. Pledges can be made by the lap or as a flat donation.

instance, fourth and fifth grades were added to the school which are separate from the rest of the middle school.

By the same token, the plan at SRMS is to create a barrier between the two schools, which will have their own distinct areas and highly regulated access between them. Teachers would be able to pass between the two sections and students would need to be approved via a camera feed to buzz them through the doors.

"The idea is that only staff, almost like a hospital, with a keycard would be able to go between the two," Thanner explained.

Crossroads and SRMS students would have separate entrances to the building and would not use any common areas, such as the library or gymnasium, at the same time. Additionally, the two schools are not on the same schedule, with arrival and dismissal times offset by about an hour.

"As the principal of Stemmers, the last thing I want is interactions that could become negative between the students," Thanner stated. He added that there is "misinformation" going around about what type of school Crossroads is, but they still want the students and the identities of the two schools to be separate, and that the BCPS executive leadership has committed to that as well.

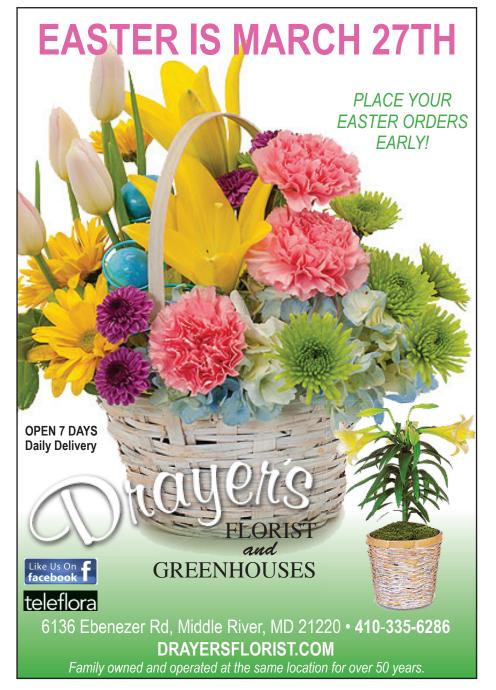

Crossroads Center Principal John "Jay" Ward wanted to set the record straight about what type of school Crossroads is. He stressed that it is not a school that kids get sent to when they get in trouble or have a lot of behavioral problems.

Fort Howard VA Outpatient clinic closed to assess water damage

Due to water damage, the Veterans Administration's Maryland Health Care System has temporarily closed the Fort Howard VA Outpatient Clinic pending a full assessment and evaluation of the building to determine the necessary repairs that will be required.

With the temporary closure of the clinic, all patient care activities and staff have been transferred to the Loch Raven VA Outpatient Clinic, located at 3901 The Alameda in Baltimore. Veteran patients who receive their care at the Fort Howard VA Outpatient Clinic will be able to see their same primary care providers at the Loch Raven VA Outpatient Clinic throughout the temporary closure. The main phone line for the Fort Howard VA Outpatient Clinic has also been transferred to the Loch Raven VA Outpatient Clinic. Patients can continue to dial 410-477-1800 to schedule, change or cancel a clinic appointment or to speak with a member of their primary care team.

Patients who need medical advice or have questions about their medications may call the VA Maryland Health Care System's Telephone Care Line 24 hours a day, seven days a week at 1-800-865-2441.

It is an "academic intervention program," he said, which aims to find "different options for students to be successful when they may not have been successful in a larger comprehensive setting" and is completely voluntary.

Ward pointed out that they screen their students before accepting them and do not accept those with primarily behavioral issues. In fact, he said, the most common issue with their students is school avoidance due to bullying, anxiety or other reasons. Because they have been avoiding school, their grades begin to slip. And the Crossroads Center works to get them back on track.

Although the principals tried to ease their worries, parents still expressed concerns about the move. They remained unconvinced that the two schools could be kept entirely separate, as well as that the Crossroads students are not those who have been removed from their normal schools due to behavioral issues.

Since Crossroads serves students in grades seven through 10, parents also noted their concerns over mixing high schoolers with middle schoolers - a concern that was levied during the plans to close Eastwood Elementary as well.

But Ward explained that the system works at Crossroads, which is both a middle and a high school. And, it is not entirely unheard of in Baltimore County, with Sparrows Point in Edgemere housing both a middle and a high school.

Some also took issue with the perceived lack of communication with parents on behalf of the school system. They lamented that they had been given only a short notice of five days before the community meeting and that it was simply via a letter sent home with students. They also decried that BCPS had already made the decision as a fait accompli before coming to the parents for input when they should have come to the community first.

With the last-minute timing of the announcement, some parents of incoming sixth graders for next year complained that they have missed their opportunity to apply to magnet schools if they no longer want their children to attend SRMS.

BCPS spokesman Mychael Dickerson said the decision has not been made whether the Crossroads move into SRMS will be permanent. "The situation will be assessed and evaluated as we go along, particularly during the two years while Victory Villa is at Rosedale," he said.

Parents Jessica Long and Tom Holcomb have begun circulating a petition calling for a halt to the plan and calling for an in-person meeting with BCPS Superintendent Dr. S. Dallas Dance. They call into question the logistics of the move and cite that it would not be good for a school that is "already struggling."

Recognizing that they could not necessarily answer all of the parents' questions or that they may bring up something officials had not thought of, Thanner and Ward offered the website http:// tinyurl.com/SRMSquestions where parents can submit questions that can be looked into.

Opiate forum stresses need for more available treatment options

- by Patrick Taylor -With the recent surge of heroin related deaths across the country, many jurisdictions, including Baltimore County, are trying to find ways to combat the deadly epidemic.

Last week, the Derpartment of Juvenile Services hosted an opiate forum at Loch Raven High School to discuss the opiate problem and how it should be addressed. Toni Torsch, head of the Daniel Carl Torsch Foundation, emceed the event which featured Baltimore County Police Chief Jim Johnson, Circuit Court Judge Kathleen Cox, State's Attorney Scott Shellenberger and Gregory Branch from the Department of Health.

Branch referred to the opiate abuse problem as our "new Great Depression" before stating that in Baltimore County 2015 there were 144 alcohol and drug related intoxication deaths. Branch stressed the need to educate the public more while putting programs that help deal with opiate abuse - including treatment programs, prescription drop boxes and opioid overdose response training - in the spotlight.

Johnson touched on the recent announcement that Baltimore County police officers will be carrying naloxone, stating that it's the right decision but adding that more needs to be done.

"[Emergency services] have revived one county resident ten times with naloxone in the past few months, including three times [in the last week]," Johnson said. He continued that while it's great that naloxone was being used to save lives, it's apparent that more readily available treatment options are needed.

Johnson also stressed that his department will "continue to prosecute dealers while reaching out a humanistic hand to those who are users and suffering from [addiction]."

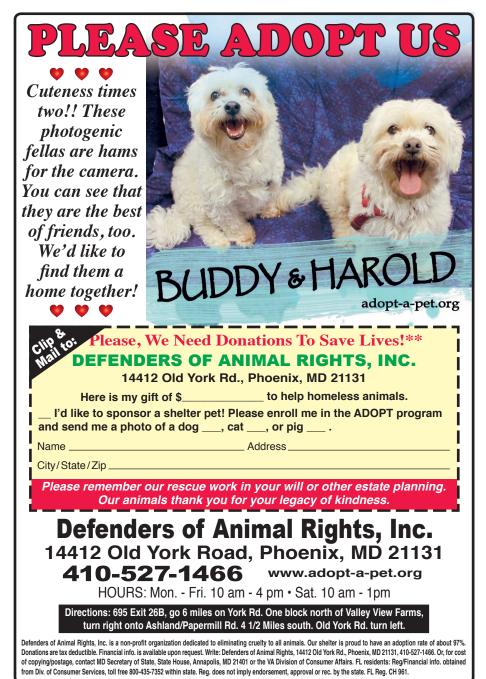

One thing all members of the panel agreed on was that a lot of the damage is caused by over-prescription of opioids. Many who suffer from an addiction get hooked on oxycontin and other opiates, and a lot of times those prescribing can offer large amounts so a patient doesn't have to keep refilling their prescription. And when that prescription eventually runs out and they can't get it refilled, they often turn to heroin.

Shellenberger pointed out that a big issue with that is that over the last few decades, the potency of heroin has risen while the price has remained cheap. According to Shellenberger, that means addicts no longer need to use needles to get high, but can opt to snort their heroin.

Shellenberger also stated that treatment needs to be available immediately for those who request it. He also cited his marijuana diversion program, which gives those caught in possession the opportunity to avoid punishment if they enter treatment. Last October, that program expanded to include other drugs.

The forum provided a slew of information regarding drug treatment and how you can find help if you or someone you know is struggling with addiction. To find out more about the substance abuse centers in the area, call 410-887-3224. An opioid overdose response training event will take place on Tuesday, May 19 from 6 - 8 p.m. at Oregon Ridge Lodge in Cockeysville.

Dr. Michael J. Bina, President of The Maryland School for the Blind, was one of three recipients to receive the 2016 Migel Medal Award by the American Foundation for the Blind (AFB). Bina, along with Gordon Gund and Lulie Liggett Gund, was presented with the award at the AFB's Leadership Conference in Arlington, VA on March 5.

ROTTEN TO THE CORE

Today's automobile radiators are composed of two plastic tanks that attach to either side of an aluminum core consisting of metal tubes and fins. While the plastic tanks are lightweight, they are also susceptible to cracking and leaking over time. When this problem arises, the engine will overheat and sustain severe damage if the radiator is not immediately replaced. While it may seen possible to repair a plastic radiator tank with epoxy, this fix is usually not recommended. Epoxy may effectively seal a leak in a windshield washer reservoir, but a plastic radiator tank is subjected to great heat and pressure. In addition, the tank's glass-reinforced nylon structure eventually grows brittle, making another leak likely. Better to replace than repair.

Clearly, a broken radiator can be catastrophic. Getting it checked regularly can catch wear and tear before it turns into a leak that can lead to an expensive engine replacement. If you can't remember the last time that a technician checked out your car, please call our office for an appointment right away. Our ASE-certified techs can provide the thoughtful preventive care that you need to prevent expensive meltdowns.

Open Mon.-Fri. 7:30-5. We fix check engine lights! HINT: Radiators tend to clog over time, which restricts coolant flow, causing heat to build up and the engine to overheat.

"We are honored to recognize Michael, Gordon and Lulie for their outstanding achievements in the field of blindness and low vision," said Carl R. Augusto, AFB president and CEO. Hit and run crash in Essex leaves boy seriously injured

Just before 6:30 p.m. on March 12, Baltimore County Police and Fire personnel responded to the 1000-block of South Marlyn Avenue in Essex next to Deep Creek Middle School for a crash involving a pedestrian. A five-year-old boy, who had been crossing South Marlyn Avenue, was struck by a vehicle that fled the scene.

The boy was flown to Johns Hopkins Hospital by Maryland State Police Medivac helicopter. Baltimore County Police have identified the boy as Maxwell Marcus (Nickname DJ) of the 3500-block of Kenwood Avenue 21206. He remains hospitalized in critical condition.

The suspect in this case, a teenage boy, turned himself in during the afternoon on March 14. He will be released and charges against him are pending further investigation.

Police have the suspect vehicle, a 2010 GMC Yukon Denali.

This incident remains under investigation by the Baltimore County Police Department Crash Team. The investigation is expected to take several weeks.

Don't let luck dictate life

As St. Patrick's Day approaches, troopers suggest those whose celebrations will include alcohol take time to make the right decision and designate a sober driver.

Based on past experience, Maryland state troopers are anticipating an increase in impaired driving as celebrants will be traveling on St. Patrick's Day to and from different locations to enjoy festivities throughout the state. With this in mind, Maryland State Police Superintendent Colonel William M. Pallozzi, has directed each of the 23 barracks to conduct saturation patrols focusing on impaired, aggressive, and distracted drivers. Additional troopers will be assigned.

During March 14-18, 2015, troopers arrested 158 drunk drivers. Driving with a blood alcohol content of .08 is evidence of intoxication and is against the law. A driver under the age of 21, with any measurable alcohol in their system is in violation of alcohol laws in Maryland.

Remember to designate a sober driver, or take a cab if you're too drunk to drive. Never let a friend leave your sight if you think they're about to drive drunk. If you are hosting a party, remember that you can be held liable and prosecuted if someone you served ends up in an impaired crash. Be safe and always buckle up.

'THE PERFECT MATCH' is anything but

- By Teddy Durgin -

There are few movies more boring to me than those "playboy who gets tamed" flicks. The beats, by now, are so familiar. You know exactly where each film of this type is headed within the first few minutes. And what are you rooting for anyway as an audience member? That the awesome-looking dude who has dodged disease and bedded a couple of hundred or more willing females over the course of his life finally settles down and finds true love? Why would anyone anywhere ever really care about that?!

And, yet, I've seen dozens of these stories. And I've found that if you're going to tell one more of them on the big screen, what you absolutely have to get right is the casting of the main Cassanova, the lead lothario, the wild stallion who's spirit needs to be broken. While Terrence Jenkins is certainly a likable actor and an entertaining host of various E! and BET programs, he ain't much on Casanova. Now, he and another Romeo here could have been friends. But cast as the pinnacle playboy? Uh, no. Sorry. Just no. As one female audience member sitting behind me at my recent screening so astutely observed aloud 15 minutes into this flick, "He ain't all dat!"

Now Eddie Murphy in "Boomerang?" Will Smith in "Hitch?" Mel Gibson in "What Women Want?" Ryan Gosling in "Crazy, Stupid Love?" All four of those on-screen stud ponies were "all dat" and more. And they made those flicks and those characters work. On some level, you actually wanted to see those dudes meet their match and fall target to Cupid's arrow. Here, Terrence J is so nice-guy good and dull and bland as entertainment industry agent Charlie Mac, that he's practically forgettable in some scenes before they are even over. He's really just a wounded heart romantic hiding from past loss. Gag.

To compensate, director Bille Woodruff and a trio of screenwriters over-pad their film with subplots involving Charlie's best friend, Victor (Robert Christopher Riley), trying to survive his Bridezilla's (Lauren London) wedding planning; his other best friend, Rick (Donald Faison), having problems conceiving a child with his wife (Dascha Polanco); his ditsy psychologist sister (Paula Patton), attempting to analyze him at every turn; problems at work involving a crooked boss (Joe Pantoliano) playing an up-comingrapper against a rising YouTube sensation, while cross-promoting a cutting-edge cell an awning or room that matches your home and your budget.

phone app; and so forth.

I'll give the movie points for its relaxed pace. The writers and actors seem to really like their characters here, too, and I also appreciated that the film never devolved into a broad smut farce as so many flicks of this type do. There is an emphasis of class over crass here, for the most part, as the characters know their wine, their art, their fashions and so forth. But there's just no spark, no reason for being. The chemistry between Charlie and Cassie Ventura's Eva is not there either. I really wanted the film to seduce me. But I left the theater untamed.

"The Perfect Match" is rated R for nudity, sexuality and language throughout.

CCBC Essex Academic Theatre goes for laughs with 'The Menaechmi Twins'

The Academic Theatre at the Community College of Baltimore County, Essex performs Plautus' hilarious "The Menaechmi Twins" on March 17, 18 and 19 at 8 p.m., March 21 at 10 a.m. and March 22 at 11:15 a.m. in the College Community Center Theatre at CCBC Essex, 7201 Rossville Blvd. Tickets are $8 general admission, $5 seniors, students and CCBC faculty, staff and alumni. Admission is free for CCBC students with a current ID. For tickets and information, call the CCBC Box Office at 443-840-2787 (ARTS).

An early Roman comedy by Plautus, "The Menaechmi Twins" is the earliest recorded "separated twins" comedy. Its plot, filled with mistaken identities, misplaced blame and missed connections, has inspired other comedies through the centuries, including Shakespeare's "A Comedy of Errors" and the musicals "Boys from Syracuse" and "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum."

CCBC Essex Academic Theatre's ensemble cast includes CeCe Heck of Baltimore City as Ancilla and Medicus; Christian Fisher of Essex as Menaechmus 1; Anjali Cornish of Lutherville as Messenio, Anna Steuerman of Lutherville as Prologa and Matrona, and Claire Wescott of Lutherville as Peniculus and Senex; Jalon Payton of Overlea as Thalio and Cylindro; Yasmine Hasib of Owings Mills as Erotium and Giustino Puliti of Perry Hall as Menaechmus 2.

Linda Chambers, an accomplished area director and playwright, as well as a teacher at Carver Center for the Arts and Stevenson University, is guest director for the production. CCBC's Terri Raulie is the scenic and lighting designer and James J. Fasching is the costumer.

I gotta hand it to filmmaker J.J. Abrams. The dude can keep a secret! In fact, he absolutely relishes his secrets and makes a game out of shielding the public, industry insiders and even people working on his various movies and TV shows from spoilers on everything from "Star Wars" to "Star Trek" to "Lost." Many of his cast and crew don't even get entire scripts. He's probably that way in his personal life, too. I imagine him being a major jerk to his wife and kids when it comes to their birthday presents. "It's a surprise, and you're gonna have to wait ... a long time. And even when you unwrap your gift, it won't be the whole gift... you'll get the rest of it next year ... maybe."

He's probably even a real S.O.B. when he's fixing his family dinner. "You won't

Surf Harp release debut album, Peel

Dad,"

- by Patrick Taylor -

Indie rock can be so self-serious, that every now and again you need an act to come along and remind everyone that music can still be good while maintaining a decent sense of humor. Tom Waits, Stephen Merritt, Kurt Vile, Mac DeMarco and Ween basically sit at the top of the pile when it comes to humor, but there's always room for more. And on Surf Harp's debut album, "Peel," the Baltimore quintet certainly show a lot of it.

From the Devo inspirations and silly, high-pitched vocals to ridiculously named tracks like "Rubber Dad," this album has plenty to offer in the laughs department. The song "Europro" bounces along for the first half in an almost cartoonish fashion.

But for all the laughs provided, these are some seriously good songs. Album

Imagine how he's gonna be one day with his last will and testament!

At any rate, while most of the world focused in on his directing "The Force Awakens" for the past two years or so, he was able to sneak into production an actual "semi-sequel" to "Cloverfield" that few people knew anything about. Even the cast, small as it is, wasn't fully aware of what they were making. Two months ago, few people knew that the hit creature-feature "Cloverfield" was getting a follow-up. And that's a good thing, because I think if we had a year or more to ponder it, the expectations would have grown way too high.

The original script for this, titled "The Cellar," was a Hitchcockian study of three characters holed up in an underground bunker while all Hell broke loose above ground. But at some point, Abrams and Co. asked themselves, "Well... why can't what's happening outside the bunker possibly be the events of what we saw in 'Cloverfield?'" Now, I'm not saying that's exactly the case here. When all is said and done, it's still a bit of a tease.

Mary Elizabeth Winstead stars as Michelle, a woman who is in a bad car accident to open the film and wakes up chained to a bed in an underground bunker. She is tended to by two strange men. The first is Howard (John Goodman), a farmer, former Navy man and crazed conspiracy theorist who owns the farm, beneath which the bunker is located. The second is Emmett (John Gallagher Jr.), a young, blue-collar handyman who helped Howard build the elaborate underground shelter and has come to believe his endof-the-world scenarios.

For a while, Michelle can't believe the end of the world as she knows it has happened while she was knocked out. Every once in a while, she hears a car, or something resembling a car, above ground. Howard talks of Martians and al Qaeda as if they are equally plausible threats to the Earth. Emmett is little help. He claims he headed for the shelter when he saw a flash of light "like out of the Bible." But he didn't see any actual death or destruction. And her cell phone can't get service that far down to contact her boyfriend who she just dumped. So, she's stuck.

ENTERTAINMENT

"10 Cloverfield Lane" then becomes a study in pressure and personalities. Think "Room" crossed with "War of the Worlds" and you have a pretty good idea of the feel of this flick. The three main actors are terrific here, but it's Goodman that is the standout. This was filmed before he dropped a large amount of weight in real life. So here, in such a confined space, his girth and physicality is absolutely frightening. But he also gets under the skin of Howard emotionally and is constantly keeping the audience off-balance with his glimmers of charm masking a real sick soul.

This may remind you a bit of M. Night Shyamalan's recent past works, especially "Signs" and even "The Village." I wouldn't call the film riveting. I think the concept is just a bit stretched out for a feature film. But there's no denying the immediacy of "10 Cloverfield Lane" as you're watching it. And you'll want to see another installment in this idea franchise much sooner than another eight years. Who knows? Maybe Abrams already has one in the can.

"10 Cloverfield Lane" is rated PG-13 for thematic material, including frightening sequences of threat with some violence, and brief language.

Delegate McDonough supports Governor Hogan

- By Delegate Pat McDonough (R-7) -All of the attacks against the governor from the General Assembly and other politicians are motivated by partisan politics and power plays. The most recent complaint about the governor wanting to construct a much needed city jail reeks of hypocrisy. Baltimore's mayor and others complained for years about the terrible condition of the city jail and the corruption that dominated the place. They constantly demanded something be done about the problem. Governor Hogan, through smart leadership, demolished the mess and put forward an intelligent plan for the new city jail. Once again, the radical Democrats blasted the governor.

One of the most dangerous pieces of legislation ever put forward to benefit criminals was the law that permitted convicted felons, including murderers and rapists to vote before they completed their sentences. This criminal-friendly legislation passed the General Assembly last year with all radical Democrat votes. Fortunately, the governor saw the insanity in this type of policy and vetoed the bill. Some politicians in Annapolis are more concerned about criminal rights than public safety and crime victims. This year they had the misguided audacity to override the governor's veto by one vote.

This reckless act is something that the people deserve to know about. The administration sent out emails about this tragic mistake and informed the public. The people were outraged and bombarded the senators and delegates with their opinions. Senate President Mike Miller whined about how wrong it was for the governor to create this response from ordinary people. I guess Miller believes what happens in Annapolis should stay in Annapolis.

The governor saved the taxpayers a lot of money, including city residents, by making a great decision to not build the light rail Red Line. This brain-dead "hole in the ground" would have cost billions and accomplished very little. The current light rail systems are already losers, heavily subsidized by the taxpayers. The city politicians squawked loudly proclaiming the end of the world was near. Frankly, I believe they were more concerned about contracts and handouts. Once again, they called the governor names and accused him of evil intentions.

Allow me to be blunt. As I said in the opening, these attacks are all about party politics and the loss of power. The radical Democrats will not accept the fact that the people of Maryland elected an independentminded Republican governor. The voters of this state overwhelmingly rejected the tax-and-spend policies of the O'Malley, Millers and Busches of the world.

It is important to note when I use the term "radical Democrats" I am not referring to those common-sense Democrats who helped to elect Larry Hogan as our Chief Executive. I believe it is time for someone to request that the Department of Justice investigate the General Assembly for committing hate crimes against the governor. Just kidding, maybe!

Spring is a good time to clean up the community

- By Councilwoman Cathy Bevins (D-6) -

March makes me think that spring is just around the corner, which means the days will be getting longer and the flowers will be blooming. If you're like me, then you might also think this time of year is for fresh starts and community cleanups.

Hopefully you live in a community that provides an annual dumpster day or community clean-up effort. If not, Baltimore County provides opportunities for you to bring a dumpster day to your community! This kind of community clean up provides terrific opportunities to get your neighbors out of their houses, communicating with one another and making our communities a better place to live. The Baltimore County Community Clean Up Program is a great way to wake your neighborhood up from the long dark days of winter. Visit www.baltimorecountymd.gov/ Agencies/publicworks/solid_waste/ communitycleanup for information on how you can create a community cleanup in your neighborhood.

In addition, spring makes me want to get up and go... and not just because my Fit Bit tells me so! Most areas around the county have their own recreation council and offer fun activities for both children and adults, including sports leagues, access to fields, nature centers and therapeutic recreation. Take advantage of what's happening right in your own backyard by visiting w w w.baltimorecountymd.gov/ Agencies/recreation/programdivision/ reccnclmtgs.html for more details. The early bird gets the worm, so get active!

I'm making my rounds to different community associations, supporting local events and many other great activities all month long. I hope to see you around the Sixth District!

Long's Residential Revitalization Tax Credit gets support from County Delegation

- By Delegate Bob Long (R-6) -

On Friday, Feb. 26, a bill that I sponsored, House Bill 337, received the unanimous support of the Baltimore County Delegation. This is a major step towards the passage of this legislation.

The bill (Baltimore County Property Tax Credit - Revitalization Districts) is legislation that would allow the Baltimore County Council and the administration to create a residential revitalization tax credit. This credit would, in essence, phase in the increased property tax assessment due to rehabilitation and / or improvements to a home. This credit would be granted to residents in the county's designated revitalization districts. The application process would be determined by the Baltimore County Council.

HB337 would provide relief from an immediate increase in property value assessment. This bill would give incentives for home repairs and improvements. Additionally, it would help reduce the number of vacant properties by incentivizing buyers to purchase revitalized homes in these districts. The credit is also transferable upon sale and therefore could be used as a purchase incentive.

I am proud to have the support of the entire Baltimore County Delegation on this important bill. When I was elected, I promised to fight to revitalize our aging neighborhoods and to promote the American Dream of home ownership. This bill makes good on both of those promises.

HB337 is expected to receive the approval of the House Ways and Means Committee in the coming days. From there, it will move to the full House of Delegates. Final passage is expected in the coming weeks.

As always, feel free to contact me at 410-841-3458 or Bob.Long@house.state. md.us about this or any other issues.

Periodic Update: The heroin/opioid epidemic

- By Delegate Eric Bromwell (D-8) -On Monday, Feb. 22, Baltimore County Executive Kevin Kamenetz announced that all Baltimore County police officers will start carrying Narcan, a drug that can immediately reverse the effects of an opioid or heroin overdose. This announcement comes almost a year to the day after Senator Kathy Klausmeier and I introduced legislation, which is now law, that provided civil immunity for police officers who administer Narcan. In addition, the county executive announced a new hotline for those who are dealing with drug abuse, or for anyone seeking information regarding drug abuse. That number is 410-88-REACH.

The statistics on heroin and opioid deaths are beyond alarming. We truly are in the midst of an epidemic. According to the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention - CDC - heroin deaths have nearly quadrupled since 2000. In 2014, nationwide, there were 28,648 deaths from heroin and other opioids, exceeding the number of deaths from car crashes. In Maryland, 578 people died of heroin overdoses in 2014, a 25 percent increase from 2013 and more than twice the number who died from heroin in 2010.

Dozens of bills have been introduced to deal with the epidemic. The Hogan Administration is sponsoring bills modeled on recommendations of the 11-member Task Force, chaired by Lt. Governor Boyd G. Rutherford. One measure would target drug dealers more effectively by changing the state's gang laws to mirror the federal Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organization Act, commonly known as RICO. Baltimore County State's Attorney Scott Shellenberger said RICO "is a very powerful tool for police and prosecutors because it has a wide reach." He said prosecutors have been trying to make this change to the gang law for years.

Another bill will be phased in to mandate that doctors and pharmacists use the Maryland Prescription Drug Monitoring Program. They will have to enter information about prescriptions into the database that can be used by health care professionals and pharmacists to see patterns of overprescribing. Currently, use of the Drug Monitoring Program is not mandatory.

In December 2015, the Department of Health and Mental Hygiene issued a directive allowing individuals to get Narcan without a prescription. They would only have to show that they had been trained to administer the drug, which can instantly reverse an overdose. The directive will enable addicts, their families, and friends to save lives.

Perry Hall slips up against Eleanor Roosevelt in state semifinal

- by Patrick Taylor -

Last week, the Perry Hall Gators boy's basketball team traveled to the Xfinity Center in College Park to take on Eleanor Roosevelt High School in the 4A state semifinal.

For the Gators, it was their first trip to the Xfinity Center, while a trip to the state semifinal was nothing new to Roosevelt. Combine that with the fact that Perry Hall is comprised of mostly underclassmen, and you have quite the uphill battle.

For most of the game, Perry Hall seemed up to the challenge. Perry Hall entered the game with a 21 - 3 overall record, while Roosevelt entered play with a 22 - 3 record. It was everything you would hope for in a semifinal matchup.

The two teams went into the half tied at 32, with both teams making use of early runs to get going.

The Roosevelt Raiders started off hot, with seven different players scoring in the first quarter. The raiders used a seven-point stretch towards the end of the first to take a 17 - 9 lead with just over 1:30 left to play. Perry Hall responded with the final four points in the quarter, cutting Roosevelt's lead to four.

The Gators continued to press in the second and looked to be making up ground. After Roosevelt took a 21 - 16 lead, Perry Hall hit two big threes to take their first lead of the game with over five minutes left in the half.

From there the teams traded baskets, with neither the Raiders or Gators able to pull away. When the halftime buzzer finally sounded, the game was squared away at 32.

After Roosevelt started off the second half with a quick two points, Perry Hall responded with a big three from junior guard James Rider. Things looked to be going well for the Gators, but then the proverbial wheels on the bus started falling off.

Erratic play and miscommunication led to sloppy turnovers. Suddenly the basket seemed more like one you would find at the seediest of carnivals, with every Gator shot rimming out.

And to make matters worse, not only was Roosevelt taking advantage of Perry Hall's misses and sloppy play, they did so with authority. Two massive dunks from Roosevelt's Victor Okafor brought the crowd at the Xfinity Center to their feet. And five minutes after Rider started off the second half by giving the Gators the lead with a big three, Perry Hall was suddenly looking down the barrel of defeat. By the time Gator forward Anthony Higgs converted a three-point play after getting fouled in the post, the Raiders had gone on a 16-point tear and taken a 50-37 lead.

During that five minute stretch, Roosevelt was absolutely lethal. Due to Perry Hall's turnover woes in the third, the Raiders had plenty of opportunities for fastbreak points, and they took full advantage. And in the instances when Perry Hall was able to get set in their defense, Roosevelt was able to take advantage of Gator fatigue and open up lanes, which led to quite a few uncontested midrange shots.

Perry Hall was only able to put up a meager eight points in the third quarter while their defense gave up 21, and at quarter's end they faced a harrowing 53 - 40 deficit.

"I guess at that point we just couldn't keep up with their transition speed. We got down in a hurry," said Perry Hall coach George Panageotou. "We struggled offensively. Missed jumpers started their transition and the next thing you knew they got easy layups."

Despite being down, the Gators weren't exactly out at that point, and their strong play in the fourth quarter allowed for a shimmer of hope that a comeback was being mounted.

Suddenly, Roosevelt wasn't able to score at will. Perry Hall had settled down and regained composure and their offense was in full swing again. The Raiders struggled to get anything going from the free-throw line all night, hitting only 50-percent of their attempts. In the fourth quarter, the Raiders missed six straight foul shots, and the Gators slowly chipped away at the 13-point lead.

Eventually, Perry Hall cut the Raider lead down to five, giving the young Gators hope. But with only a couple minutes left to play and Perry Hall having to foul, Roosevelt finally started doing damage from the free-throw line, hitting six of their remaining eight attempts to extend the lead and keep it out of Perry Hall's reach. When the final buzzer sounded, Roosevelt was heading to the state final with the final score set at 69 - 59.

Junior Darrell Green finished the game as Perry Hall's leading scorer, putting up 17 points. The only other Gator player in double digits was Rider.

Despite the loss to Roosevelt, Perry Hall's players and coaches were proud of the fight they put up all year.

"I couldn't be more proud - not only the guys, but the school and the community really came together for this game," said Panageotou. "For these young guys to come in and perform the way they did against a very experienced and very good team, I couldn't be more proud."

The odds were always against the Gators, whose team was comprised of four seniors, six juniors and three sophomores. At the beginning of the year, very few expected Perry Hall to win as regularly as they did. But Perry Hall showed they had what it took, and the success of their team this year means that they'll certainly be the team to watch next year.

"Almost every big game we played we were never the favorites, so we came out with a chip on our shoulders and ready to go," said Rider. "And I still believe we should have won today, just because that's the confidence I have in the team."

Perry Hall will be looking to build on their success, and they'll certainly be returning plenty of talent. Rider, a junior guard and First Team All-Baltimore County selection will be the centerpiece of next year's team, along with center LaQuill Hardnett, an imposing 6'7" center who was a Third Team All-Baltimore County selection. Rider and Hardnett also made appearances on the All-Division team, with the two underclassmen featuring on the first and second teams respectively. Joining them on the third team was sophomore forward Anthony Higgs.

Also receiving honors this year was Panageotou, who was named as Baltimore County Coach of the Year.

IN YOUR WORDS

Thanks to our Leadership

The recent record-breaking snow storm brought out the best in our state government. All of us need to commend our governor for the measures he put in place in anticipation of the storm. Declaring a State of Emergency long before the first snow flake fell allowed the National Guard to be activated and in place as the storm began to wreak havoc on Maryland.

It was evident all available resources were made available by the governor to keep Maryland roads clear and to manage all jurisdictions before, during and after this severe weather event. Clearing and removing 24-plus inches of snow is a huge undertaking which required crews to work around the clock. Thanks to the leadership of Governor Hogan, everything was in place to lessen the impact of Jonas on all Marylanders.

Transparency Every ruler of every stripe says they are in favor of transparency in government, except when the transparency affects them.

Recently, the governor decided to let the people know how senators voted to overturn his veto of a criminal-friendly bill. Well, the howling commenced almost immediately. In fact, one of the boss rulers said it was immoral to let the people know how their ruler voted on the measure.

Immoral, really. What happened to open government and transparency? I guess it depends entirely on whose ox is getting gored. I do not condone the people who do not know how to voice their displeasure except through name calling and threats. However, when you put yourself in the public spotlight you should expect that sometimes people will not like the way you vote.

Frankly, I am surprised that Common Cause does not routinely publish votes on major legislation. Maybe it is something they should start. Maybe if the rulers know their actions will be made public, they will be more likely to consider their constituents' positions before they vote.

ST PATRICK'S PARADE

It certainly would not be a St. Patty's parade without a leprechaun sighting. The Dundalk parade included two of the fabled creatures, guarding their gold and spreading luck

throughout the crowd.

CELEBRATE OUR SCOT-IRISH ROOTS

Harry Connor and Bruce Null carried the "Welcome to Dundalk" banner with Gaelic translations of that phrase and several other locations in the community.

The procession included two solo pipers - Chris Spagnolo and Geoff Douglas - as well as the pipe and drum duet of Dan Lyden and David McDonough to keep the music flowing throughout.

One crowd member commented that it just would not be a parade in Dundalk without the Aisquith's Sharpshooters, who fired their muskets to liven up the parade near its end.

> The festive 1951 Ward LaFrance fire engine, presented by the Chesapeake Antique Fire Apparatus Association, added variety to the parade.

Agriculture and Food Counsellor Dale Crammond, representing the Irish Embassy in Washington, D.C., served as the honorary grand marshal for the parade. He was accompanied by his family and escorted by Sam Caravello in a 1963 Cadillac.

"Now that's when they knew how to make a car!" exclaimed Edgemere resident Fran Taylor from the crowd. North Point Precinct 12 Captain Orlando Lilly was escorted through the procession by Boyd Hassel in a 1963 Ford Falcon. Taylor noted that a Ford Falcon was the first car he owned in his

Students at Dundalk's O'Connor School of Irish Dance danced a merry jig while making their way down the Dundalk streets in the midst of the parade. They also have a location in Towson.
