Gov. Cooper signs executive order for more state contracts with minority businesses

Keeping yet another campaign promise from his 2016 candidacy, Gov. Roy Cooper last week issued and signed Executive Order #25 "...to create jobs and expand economic opportunity for historically underutilized businesses in North Carolina."

The governor also used the Nov. 2nd occasion to announce members of his new Governor's Advisory Council on Historically Underutilized Businesses, with appointments from the Triangle to the Piedmont and beyond.

"Diverse businesses are engines for our economy and we need to encourage their growth and development," Governor Cooper said. "We have minority business owners to thank for creating thousands of new jobs in communities both urban and rural, and we must nurture their success."

Gov. Cooper had proclaimed October "Minority Enterprise Development Month," paying tribute to businesses, corporations and financial institutions owned and operated by people of color and women statewide, for their contributions and achievements in the face of daunting odds and barriers.

Daisy Walker named Charlotte Post Educator of the Year

BY ELLISON CLARY OF THE CHARLOTTE POST

An inspirational leader who has spent her entire career - nearly 50 years - insisting on excellence in the Charlotte-Mecklenburg Schools is the 2017 Charlotte Post Foundation Educator of the Year.

Daisy Walker was among a very few African-American teachers at Randolph Middle School when she started teaching eighth-grade English in 1969. Through 17 years at Randolph, she expected the best from her students.

"With students," she declares firmly, "you have to demand excellence. They want excellence and they want to be disciplined."

The Charlotte Post Foundation honored Walker at The Charlotte Post Best banquet on Sept. 16 at the Hilton Center City. The banquet draws more than 400 attendees annually and is the foundation's main fundraiser.

"Daisy Walker has spent many years providing guidance and direction to the many students with whom she was involved," said Gerald Johnson, publisher of The Charlotte Post. "She has long served as an advocate for underserved students in our community."

After Randolph, Walker was assistant principal, then principal at Garinger High, and principal at Wilson Middle. Though she "technically" retired in 2006, she since has worked with an entity that furnished new schools in Charlotte-Mecklenburg, then signed on with West Charlotte High as coordinator of volunteers in Project LIFT.

A Wilmington native, Walker earned a bachelor's degree from Winston-Salem State University and holds a doctorate in educational leadership from UNC Charlotte. She has won scores of admirers and produced top achievers at every stop.

Truly caring is the key, Walker said. "You've got to genuinely care about all students. You have to believe that no matter where they live, or whatever happens around

GOP leader alleges "corruption" as federal judges target Dec. 1 for special master to

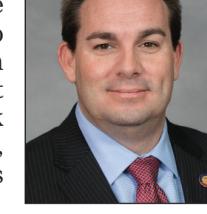

BY CASH MICHAELS
OF THE WILMINGTON JOURNAL

A special master, designated by a federal three-judge panel, is currently tasked to review redrawn NC legislative maps in the Covington case to confirm if nine specific districts are legally problematic, and if so, redraw those so that the maps are constitutionally compliant by Friday, Dec. 1st.

However, Republican legislative leaders, who didn't want a special master appointed to redraw the maps they submitted to the court in September, are not only blasting the decision and the special master chosen, but one GOP lawmaker in particular, House Majority Leader John Bell IV, was recently recorded allegedly telling a Republican fundraiser in Goldsboro not only that the GOP will lose the redistricting case, but that there was "corruption" between the plaintiffs and the judges.

"I feel like we're probably going to lose our case on redistricting. It doesn't look good," Rep. Bell, who represents Craven, Greene, Lenoir and Wayne counties, was recorded telling the attendees at field for a free society. Brunswick County and the counties around us have had a great deal of these brave soldiers. It is still hard to see why, when a football player kneels for freedom, these things are seen, somehow, as disrespectful. I don't understand why it is that, when a civil rights worker asks for a look at an unfair and unjust system that deals out unjust punishment, or even death, to Blacks in what is supposed to be a free society, he or she is labeled a trouble maker. Why is it that, in a free nation, one cannot ask for freedom? Why is it fair that both young men and women have fought, and even made the ultimate sacrifice for freedom for us all and yet there are those who don't want it?

Get up! As we approach Veterans' Day, let us get out and find a way to thank our American service men and women for the service they have given to this great Nation. Let us thank them for their courage to fight for our freedom. Let us further honor them by assuring that the service they have given not be in vain! Perhaps the best way to do this is to continue to fight for freedom in our daily lives! Bernest Hewett is president emeritus of the Brunswick County Branch of the NAACP.

According to the US Dept. of Commerce's Minority Business Development Agency, there are approximately 183,000 businesses owned and operated by people of color and women across North Carolina. They account for over $16.1 billion in sales revenue, and employ over 129,000 North Carolinians annually.

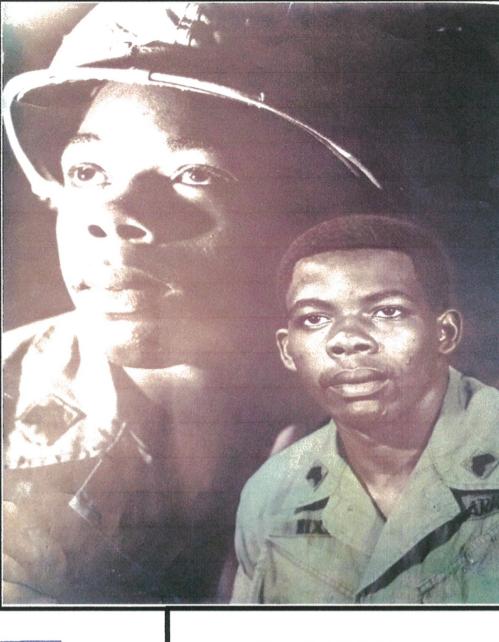

In turn, the NC Dept. of Administration's Office of Historically Underutilized Businesses is the agency that seeks out and promotes Black, women-owned, and other businesses of color in the State, to do business with State government in terms of procurement of goods and services. The "HUB" Office, as it's commonly known, works to make sure that qualifying businesses meet State requirements to contract with State agencies for a variety of needs.

"Investing in the growth and development of small and minority owned businesses creates opportunities for individuals to improve their quality of life and the communities where they live," Secretary Machelle

Sanders said. "I have directed the HUB Office team to explore new and improved ways to deliver effective and efficient services that will spur economic growth. Most importantly, we will foster meaningful and substantive inclusion of historically underutilized businesses across North Carolina to strengthen our State."

Per the Governor's Advisory Council on Historically Underutilized Businesses, among the 21 members appointed by Cooper were Cornelius Lambert, of Greensboro, the former owner and Executive Vice President of CoMor Corporation, an IT and computer networking firm, and a Board Member for the Greensboro Chamber of Commerce; Ms. Iris Reese of Durham, President of Fusion Multicultural Marketing; and Andrea Harris of Raleigh, the founder of, and a Senior Fellow at the Institute of Minority Economic Development. At the age of 23, Harris became executive director of a community organizing group in Henderson, and she was the youngest community action agency director in the nation at the time.

MAJOR MAYORAL ELECTIONS ACROSS NORTH CAROLINA

[RALEIGH] At press time Tuesday, incumbent Raleigh

Mayor Nancy McFarlane, an independent, won a fourth-term to lead the Capital City in a runoff against hard-charging challenger Democrat Charles Francis, who had the support of Raleigh's black community. McFarlane won 58 to 42%..

Mayor McFarlane said this coming term may be her last.

In Durham, City Councilman Steve Schewel outpaced former City Councilman Farad Ali, 60 to 40%. Ali had the endorsement of outgoing Mayor Bill Bell, - who has served for the past 16 years - and the Durham Committee on the Affairs of Black People.

In Charlotte, Councilwoman Vi Lyles, a Democrat, jumped out to an early lead over Republican Kenny Smith, and kept it to become the first African-American woman to be elected mayor of the Queen City. Lyles had a lion's share of the vote, 58 to 42% percent.

Fayetteville's incumbent mayor Nat Robertson lost to opponent Mayor Pro Tem Mitch Colvin. Colvin received nearly 60 percent of the vote.

HALF MILLION IN NC HAVE COPD

RALEIGH, N.C. - More than 7 percent of North Carolina's population has Chronic Obstructive Pulmonary Disease or COPD - meaning the state has one of the highest rates in the country.

Experts say the incurable disease, which killed almost 5,000 people in 2015 in the Tar Heel State, often is undiagnosed and left untreated.

Dr. MeiLan Han, volunteer spokeswoman for the American Lung Association, says shortness of breath or frequent incidences of bronchitis both are indicators of the disease. Also, asthma is a risk factor for developing COPD.

"Certainly, smoking is a risk factor, but if the patient is also experiencing some of the symptoms, those also would be red flags that they need to talk to their doctor," she states.

Han says the rate of COPD also could be under reported since the test to diagnose the disease - spirometry - isn't used with frequency during doctor and hospital visits.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention estimates the chronic illness costs the country upwards of $68 billion annually.

Han says it's important to remember that there are medications that help patients live with COPD - with 60 percent of people with the disease taking at least one medication for it.

"It's not curable but it's definitely treatable," Han points out. "The lung that is destroyed, I have no way of getting it back, but we do have medications that can improve lung function, improve symptoms, as well as reduce the frequency of flare-ups."

A majority of patients with the illness are over 55 years old, and 8 percent of women in North Carolina have COPD, compared with just under 6 percent of men. (SOURCE: STEPHANIE CARSON OF NCNS)

SOME UNSCRUPULOUS LAWYERS TARGET EXONERATED INMATES IN NC

[RALEIGH] Seven death-row inmates in North Carolina have been exonerated in recent years. When many of them are released they're often left to navigate the legal system and a society they haven't been a part of for years or even decades.

Often in need of legal assistance, they sometimes end up with unscrupulous attorneys who offer to sue the parties responsible for their wrongful conviction, looking for a large piece of their settlement.

Co-director of the Duke Wrongful Convictions Clinic Jim Coleman explains.

"Somebody who comes along and offers them money in exchange for an agreement in which, if they recover, the lawyer will be paid out of the recovery, they're sort of easy marks for that kind of an arrangement," he explains.

Recently Henry McCollum, who spent three decades on North Carolina's death row for a wrongful conviction, became the latest victim of the practice. A judge threw out a settlement that would have allowed his lawyers to claim $400,000 of the $1 million settlement in payments from investigators in the case. Additionally, McCollum's lawyers claimed half of a $750,000 payout from the state.

Coleman says McCollum also is intellectually disabled - a condition that makes him even more vulnerable after spending 30 years in prison with little education or real-world skill training.

"In prison, there's no effort to prepare them for eventual release," he says. "The result is that, when they come out, they don't have the skills to deal with day-to-day living, and they're often desperate financially."

Coleman says the judge's ruling in McCollum's case is unusual, and often the court chooses not to intervene, even in instances where an arrangement may be unfair to the wrongfully convicted. The Duke Wrongful Convictions Clinic investigates claims of innocence made by incarcerated felons, helps manage their cases and gathers documentation. (SOURCE: STEPHANIE CARSON OF NCNS)

mayors in the port city's history.

Meanwhile, for City Council, incumbent City Councilman Kevin O'Grady led all candidates in the nine-candidate race, followed by incumbent Councilman Charlie Rivenbark, and Rev. Clifford Barnett, pastor of Warner Temple AME Zion Church, edged out Deb. Hayes for the third open seat. Rev. Barnett replaces councilman Earl Sheridan, who chose not to run for re-election.

Rev. Barnett, now the only African-American on the council after Sheridan leaves, said his win is a testament to the need for diversity on the council, and wants the city to be a better place for all of Wilmington's citizens to live and work. One of his priorities is to advocate for affordable housing for those who work in the city.

GOP ALLEGES

"When you talk about corruption, let me tell you something; did you ever see the plaintiffs and the judges hanging out with each other," Bell is heard asking his audience.

Then Rep. Bell said something that many observers are already surmising, that the Republicans might sacrifice the 2018 midterm elections just to appeal what they already suspect will be a negative verdict to the US Supreme Court, where they feel, because of the 5-4 conservative slant, they would have a better chance to hold on to their legally problematic legislative districts.

"I feel that they, the Supreme Court, actually will agree with us," Bell said.

Rep. Bell's alleged remarks are just the latest indication of Republican legislative leaders hitting the panic button over the federal court's appointment of Stanford law Prof. Nathaniel Persily of California. Persily has previously served as a special master and has redrawn districts in New York, Maryland and Georgia.

It is Persily's job to correct the nine legislative districts - four Senate and five House - that the judicial panel has deemed to be legally problematic.

The four Senate districts still reflect the racial gerrymandering evident in the original 2011 NC legislative redistricting maps rendered by the Republican-led NC General Assembly, and ruled unconstitutional by the US Supreme Court.

The five House districts were redrawn by the legislature in September but didn't have to be because they weren't racially gerrymandered. Since they weren't part of the original 28 legislative districts under court order to be redrawn, then doing so was in violation of the State Constitution. Persily will now have to return those five House districts to their original boundaries.

Through their attorney, Phil Strach, Republican leaders told the court in a motion that it was premature to appoint Persily to redraw anything before an official ruling was handed down on the previous version of the maps (they were deemed legally problematic but not officially unconstitutional yet) before the GOP had yet a third chance to correct whatever mistakes they made the second time.

However, the three-judge panel said, "No," adding, "The State is not entitled to multiple opportunities to remedy its unconstitutional districts."

With Dec. 1st the target date for Prof. Persily to deliver new maps, it is apparent that the three-judge federal panel wants to get them into the hands of both the plaintiff and defendant's attorneys for review and comment no later than January and use whatever time is needed prior to the February filing date for legislative primary candidates to begin filing for office, to finalize the maps.

The expected "monkey wrench" from the Republicans is that they will immediately appeal to the US Supreme Court, which, given past experience, would take its time to render a decision, thus pushing the May primaries back, if not the 2018 fall general elections.

One thing is certain, political observers agree, is that North Carolina Republicans do not want to lose the current electoral advantage that the 2011 legislative maps gave them and would rather delay the 2018 elections until they got a favorable US High Court ruling, as State House Majority Leader Bell said, than try to compete with objectively drawn voting districts that the special master is likely to produce.

OUR VOICE

REV. BARNETT WINS A SEAT

Congratulations to Rev. Clifford Barnett, pastor of Warner Temple AME Zion Church, for winning a seat on the Wilmington City Council Tuesday night, winning behind incumbents Councilmen Kevin O'Grady and Charles Rivenbark.

Rev. Barnett now replaces Earl Sheridan as the only African-American on the City Council. Sheridan decided not to run for re-election after three terms of outstanding service to our community.

This was a tough one for us in Wilmington. Out of three black candidates running, Rev. Barnett came through. That means, in terms of representing the African-American community of Wilmington at the council table, Rev. Barnett is there as our voice. And one look at his community involvement, especially with the children of our community, tells you he is certainly up to the job. We might not agree with him on every issue, but we know his golden heart of service is in the right place.

And it needs to be, and long before swearing in, the community needs to sit down with Rev. Barnett, and refresh him on our issues - economic development in the black community (including the Southside CDC bus depot project, affordable housing for low-income families in the face of increasing gentrification; the need for more African-American police officers, NOT, as we noted last week, more riot gear and military equipment).

How can we get more black small businesses downtown where the money is being made, and how can those businesses get access to needed capital to succeed? Other cities right here in North Carolina have found the answers to those questions, why can't Wilmington?

Attracting more employers here so that more people can get jobs and work their way out of poverty...and YES, clean water. What can the city do to ensure that ALL residents of the port city have clean, unpolluted water to drink, cook and bathe in?

We could go on. The bottom line is, our community MUST come together NOW, roll up our sleeves, and work hard toward making sure that our issues are addressed by Mayor Saffo and the entire new City Council.

An ALL Democrat Council win, by the way, so let's see just how responsive they are.

With three African-American candidates vying for three open seats in a nine-candidate race, the writing is on the wall. We have to learn how to pool our resources, and concentrate our votes to get the best representation possible for OUR interests. Because in the end, that's what all of this is about...making sure that our interests as a community are heard, seriously considered, and answered as positively as possible.

Rev. Barnett can't do it alone, obviously. He has to bring a majority of the council around to his way of thinking, and from what we've seen, he has the respect of many. But that also means that WE, us, our community, cannot raise hell about an issue we want City Council to address, and then not show up in strong numbers to support our City Council representatives who are pleading our case.

If we want progress, we have to support each other; for only then can we come together and advocate for what's just and correct for our community.

Congratulations, Rev. Barnett, on your impressive win Tuesday.

And now, community, the work really begins!

RAINBOW COALITION

To choose not to vote is to surrender self-determination

(Via TriceEdneyWire.com)

(Editor's Note: This commentary was written before Tuesday's election but is still worthy of reading.)

Tuesday is an election day in many parts of America. There are key gubernatorial races in Virginia and New Jersey. A single special election in a suburban Seattle district could win Democrats control of the Washington Senate and thus control both houses of the state legislature and the governorship.

Charlotte, North Carolina, could elect the first black female mayor ever. A record 43 women are vying for seats in the Virginia House of Delegates. Voters in Maine will decide whether to extend Medicaid under the Affordable Care Act.

All eligible Americans should take the time to vote. The right to vote is the foundation of our republic. It is also and has always been contested territory. Originally, voting was restricted to white, male property owners. Against fierce resistance, citizen movements forced it to be extended - to all white males, to women, to

Cash Michaels

Then I came across a post by one of my nieces, who I think very highly of. She was opining about the fact that apparently some people have accused her of "talking white," and this seemed to bother her, though she was quick to dismiss them, and in my opinion, rightfully so.

My niece is a young woman, so I doubt if folks in her generation have ever heard the term "code-switching," or know what it means. Black folks in my generation, who mostly came up in the 1960's, know only too well what "code-switching" means, and I dare say it's a skill that just doesn't apply to African-Americans, as you'll see in a minute.

Code-switching is how black people are able to appropriately adapt to the different circumstances they find themselves in, and effectively communicate accordingly. So, for instance, being a black man of age 61, appropriately educated, generally skilled, professionally trained and having been

African-Americans at the ash end of segregation, to young people.

The right to vote was a centerpiece of the civil rights movement here, of the movement against apartheid in South Africa. Medgar Evers, Dr. Martin Luther King and Nelson Mandela understood: The right to vote is not just a mark of equal citizenship; it is central to self-determination. Enforcing the right to vote would bring an end to apartheid in the U.S. and in South Africa.

Voting is still contested territory today. Across the country, right-wing Republicans have pushed to make voting more difficult for the poor, the young, workers and minorities. They seek to make registration harder; to require various forms of ID, to cut the days and hours for voting, to purge voter lists, to close down the number of polling booths and more. These measures had dramatic effect in many states in 2016, including in Wisconsin, and arguably may have cost Hillary Clinton the election.

Every vote counts. Surely the 2016 election made that clear: 77,000 votes in three states made the difference in the Electoral College. Everyone talks about the voters who went from Obama to Trump, but a far larger number of Obama voters simply ended up not voting.

Too many still choose not to vote, especially in so-called off-year elections, when the presidency is not at stake. The fall-off is particularly extreme in the core of the progressive base: single women, millennials and people of color. By choosing not to vote, they forfeit the power that was won only after the sacrifice and struggle of many.

To go from being denied the right to vote to choosing not to vote is to surrender. It aids and abets those conspiring to suppress the vote. It insures that your voice is muted, while others gain more volume. To fail to vote is essentially to support the side of Trump, of George Wallace, of the Koch brothers, who know they can win only when large numbers of people stay home.

Young people of the so-called millennial generation have more eligible voters than any other. They have every reason to vote. Vote to make college affordable and gain relief from crippling student debts. Vote for affordable health care. Vote for the right to a job. Vote for livable wages. Vote for action against catastrophic climate change that, unchecked, will make your world less habitable. Vote so the concerns of young people cannot be ignored.

Some argue that an election doesn't offer a clear choice, that neither candidate champions the causes or the agenda that would inspire them. In Virginia, for example, the Democratic candidate for governor, Ralph Northam, is a decent, uninspiring, moderate establishment figure. He's run a cautious, defensive campaign almost designed to reduce turnout. His opponent, Republican Ed Gillespie, has run a vile and divisive campaign drawn straight from the playbook of Donald Trump and George Wallace: braying and lying about immigrants, gangs, Confederate statues and more. Northam may not inspire, but a Gillespie victory would ensure that cesspool politics spreads across the country in 2018. Virginians who choose not to vote Tuesday surrender to those who will drive us apart.

Sometimes the choices are narrow, but life can be in those cracks. If single women, young people and minorities vote in large numbers, the candidates they elect may not champion their entire agenda. But they - and future candidates - will pay more attention.

By voting, we gain power. By choosing not to vote, we surrender it. We cannot afford to do less than our best. We cannot create the society we want if we surrender our power to choose. Vote today and make certain your neighbor, your roommate, your coworker has voted. It makes a difference.

CASH IN THE APPLE

CODE-SWITCHING

The other day I was perusing Facebook to see what interesting tidbits people were writing about, or nuggets of news people were reacting to (I find those most interesting).

Then I came across a post by one of my nieces, who I think very highly of. She was opining about the fact that apparently some people have accused her of "talking white," and this seemed to bother her, though she was quick to dismiss them, and in my opinion, rightfully so.

My niece is a young woman, so I doubt if folks in her generation have ever heard the term "code-switching," or know what it means. Black folks in my generation, who mostly came up in the 1960's, know only too well what "code-switching" means, and I dare say it's a skill that just doesn't apply to African-Americans, as you'll see in a minute.

Code-switching is how black people are able to appropriately adapt to the different circumstances they find themselves in, and effectively communicate accordingly. So, for instance, being a black man of age 61, appropriately educated, generally skilled, professionally trained and having been

"around the block" a few times in various settings, I feel that I'm able to be conversant with just about anyone I come in contact with, as long as they are speaking (or at least trying to speak) what they call "the King's English."

Thus, when I have to be "Cash Michaels" in various settings, either meeting the public, or being on a radio or television interview, or conversing with my media colleagues or asking questions of a public official, I instantly "code-switch" to be able to adequately and appropriately do my job. Indeed most black people I know are able to do the same thing, depending on what they do professionally, and that's a good thing.

But some folks would call that "talking white."

Then, when I'm home, talking with my family, the "professional" code is no longer appropriate, and I just...talk, being more relaxed (assuming there's nothing to get upset about). Now if I have to jump on the phone for business, I'll code-switch in a heartbeat, but generally at home, I'm more laid-back in my speech and tone.

Again, most black folks I know are like this.

If I'm talking to an old friend from "around the way, back in the day..." I definitely code-switch to an even more relaxed tone and texture than what I have even at home, and indeed, that's where my "Black side" may show itself most. I'm talking to old friends, almost family, so my language with them is even more intimate, more exclusive. I'm more likely to say "Yo man (or Yo cuz)..." or "Yeah..." or "Damn right..." (I've consciously reduced my cussing significantly in recent months), or "Thank you, my Sistah...." or any other variety of some of what folks would call "street" talk.

Again, it's a language of intimacy, which reminds me, how many of us "brothas" really say, "Yo baby..." when we're talking to our significant others, especially if you're way over the age of 20, huh?

The one thing I've always been proud of when it comes to my people and community is that African-Americans are multi-faceted, and ALWAYS have been. Whether it be speech, literature, music, dance, or other viable means of expression, we can, and have, mastered it all. Indeed, I've always found it extraordinary hearing some foreign guy or gal speak in their language, but then when it came to singing, sound a "black" as possible (anyone ever hear of "Tom Jones" from Wales?)

Indeed, many foreigners who came to America have also had to learn how to code-switch in order to mainstream into American society. Some even adopted Americanized names in order to appropriately fit in. But when back among their own, their Spanish or Italian would be as thick as ever.

A lot of American television newsmen, like Dan Rather or Bob Schieffer, actually have thick Southern accents (they're both from around Houston, Texas), but code-switch on TV in order to communicate better.

I could go on and on, but the bottomline is judging black people by the way we speak is dangerous territory. I've also learned in my life that judging black people by who they marry is also perilous. In both cases, they should be judged by their actions towards or for their communities.

Is a drug dealer who uses black "slang" truly "Black" just because he sounds the part?

C'mon, if you're THAT interested in whether someone is really "Black" or not, broaden your standard, including yourself. What should be the TRUE measure of any black person's commitment to our community? I mean really.

Answer that, and you'll find a lot of the cosmetic stuff we've been arguing about amongst ourselves has been just a tremendous waste of time!

Yo, ya dig??!!

TO BE EQUALOn the 100th anniversary of Fannie Lou Hamer's birth, find inspiration to fight for voting rights

(Via TriceEdneyWire.com)

"You can pray until you faint, but unless you get up and do something, God is not going to put it in your lap." - Fannie Lou Hamer

At a time when the right to vote is being threatened, we look for inspiration in the lives of those who fought most valiantly to extend and protect that right. This fall we recognize the 100th anniversary of one of our greatest champions, Fannie Lou Hamer.

Born to a family of sharecroppers in rural Mississippi, she was forced at the age of 13 from her one-room schoolhouse into the cotton fields. She was forced off the plantation where she worked when the owner found out she had tied to register to vote. She was blocked from actually registering, however, by Mississippi's notorious racially-discriminatory literacy test. At that time, Black voters not only had to prove they could read, but also had to compose an essay analyzing a portion of the U.S. Constitution - to the satisfaction of a white registrar. White applicants were exempt from such requirements under so-called "grandfather clauses."

Her willingness to challenge the registrar and demand she be alone to fill out an application attracted the attention of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, which hired her as a field organizer.

The beating she suffered in prison in 1963 as a result of her activism left her with permanent injuries to her kidneys, eyes and legs.

While her work with SNCC raised her public profile, it was as a founder of the Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party that she gained national celebrity. The party selected 64 delegates to send to the 1964 Democratic National Convention, and Hamer was elected vice-chair of the delegation. Hamer's powerfully moving testimony to the credentials committee was broadcast on national television, drawing attention to the humiliations and violence visited upon Black Americans in the South who tried to vote.

The work of Hamer and others led to the passage of the Voting Rights Act in 1965. It placed restrictions states with a history of discrimination - Alabama, Alaska, Georgia, Louisiana, South Carolina, Virginia and Hamer's home state of Mississippi - and certain jurisdictions in other states, requiring the approval of the federal government for any election law changes. In 2013, the Supreme Court gutted the Voting Rights Act, ruling that "preclearance" no longer was necessary. States wasted no time in proving the Supreme Court wrong. Within two months, North Carolina passed racially-discriminatory voting restrictions that later were struck down in federal court. Overall, 23 states have passed restrictive voting laws.

Meanwhile, the White House has established a sham Commission to perpetuate the myth of widespread voter fraud. The commission is a weapon of mass deception, a Trojan horse to usher in even greater voting restrictions on people of color, the poor, senior citizens and students.

Despite her worsening health, complicated by a lifetime spent in poverty and the beating she suffered in prison, she spent her life battling racism and poverty. It would be a disgrace to her memory if we did not make every effort to defeat the effort to restrict voting rights.

Step-by-Step

(Via TriceEdneyWire.com)

Anyone old enough to remember "The Three Stooges" may also remember one of their most famous skits, "Niagara Falls." In this bit, each time

Moe heard the words 'N i a g a r a Falls' he approached Curly saying, "Slowly I turned, step-by-step, inch-by-inch." He then viciously assaulted Curly. If you appreciate physical comedy, it's a funny, dated art form and, if you like retro-humor, you'll find it funny now. It's NOT funny when viewed in the context of #45's authoritarian governance.

Without amusement, our democracy has not equally fulfilled its promise to all citizens. Less funny is that #45 is slowly creeping upon the most valued principles of our flawed Democracy and step-by-step, inch-by-inch he's assaulting them with reckless abandon.

Paramount among these principles is the expectation of the election of an executive whose veracity is above reproach and whose focus is to build a spirit of unity among the citizenry. #45 entered office with the goal of dissembling the principles, institutions, traditions and expectations that have provided for our reasonably stable societal evolution.

Among his most egregious transgressions is his serially - an estimated daily average of five significant lies. More disturbing is that these lies play to the fears of his supporters and detractors alike creating an adversarial WE vs. THEM dynamic - hyper-polarization.

Historically, The Press has been "Freedom's Watchdog." While never perfect, it has investigated and illuminated wrongdoing that would have shaken our national foundations. Watergate and Enron pop into mind. #45 criticizes any press outlet that doesn't edify him or his agenda.

Like Pravda or RT news, the Fox network has become the state news source for Trumpism. The Sinclair Broadcast Group, supporters of #45's agenda, is pursuing the monopolistic acquisition of television outlets throughout the nation. Sinclair is infamous for forcing their local stations to make nightly broadcasts of pro-Trump, rightwing messaging. Meanwhile, networks which critically analyze #45's messaging are vilified as Fake News.

One year ago, the Department of Justice served as a beacon of fairness and guardian of integrity. Since January, it has turned a blind eye to protecting the rights of ALL citizens. It reneged on promises made to "Dreamers" and established draconian immigration policies. The FBI is targeting Black Lives Matter for investigation as Black Identity Extremists (read: Domestic Terrorists).

Although #45's complaints about the inefficiency of the legislative process aren't new and his criticism of the judiciary pre-date 2016, his recurring appeal for modification of the judicial system pierces the airwaves. Operating in the shadow of Josef Goebbels, #45 seems to believe, "If you tell a lie big enough and keep repeating it, people will eventually come to believe it."

As with the Central Park Five, #45 has morphed into Judge, Jury and Executioner. Although there's no question of his guilt, #45 has violated due process by already proclaiming Sayfullo Saipov guilty and condemning him to death. The problem - too many of #45's supporters - whether in office or not - would willingly surrender this power to him. I, for one, am not willing to accede to this type of justice.

As I've quoted Maya Angelou so many times before, "When someone shows you who they are, believe them the first time."

In words and deeds, #45 has clearly informed us that the laws, freedoms, and civil courtesies we believe in and have come to expect are meaningless to him and those who support his authoritarian agenda. He has fomented fear and anxiety to create the circumstance where his supporters will voluntarily relinquish their personal freedoms. Until we can demonstrate our opposition at the ballot box - and we must vote - it is essential that we engage in civic action to protest the step-by-step and inch-by-inch erosion of our freedoms that has persisted since January 2017.

All souls to enroll - Faith in Action

(Via TriceEdneyWire.com)

For all of this Administration's efforts to kill (as in "repeal and replace") the Affordable Care Act, it is still the law of the land, and still available (and required).

H o w e v e r , since 45 and his team have declared it all but dead, they have shortened the enrollment period from three months to a mere six weeks, from November 1 - December 15, 2018. Additionally, the department of Health and Human Services has drastically cut the budget for outreach. This time last year, there were television and radio announcements, billboards on buses, and other reminders that people should enroll for health care if they don't get health care from their job.

This Administration hopes that, without outreach, people will not enroll for care, so that they can then crow that people "don't want" health care. But some faith leaders have pledged to use their pulpits to remind their congregations to get enrolled for health care. Rev. Dr. Barbara Williams Skinner, the first Executive Director of the Congressional Black Caucus, an activist who melds faith with public policy, and a spiritual advisor to many Black leaders, has developed a toolkit for communities of faith to help them do the work that our government won't in encouraging people to enroll for affordable health care.

The effort has a title, #SOULSTOENROLL, or #SOULS2ENROLL, a Facebook Page, Facebook.com/FaithinPublclife, a toolkit adopted from the government page, ?GetAmericaCovered.org, a weekend campaign that will begin November 12, suggestions for faith leaders, a sample bulletin announcement, PSA, and social media tips. In other words, the faith community is being encouraged to treat health care enrollment like any other grassroots organizing campaign and get involved in it.

Back in the day, before social media, we used to talk about "the drum", or the ways we shared information in the Black community. Lots of our radio stations, or programs, were called "the drum" because they were our ways of sharing information. Now faith leaders are taking the drum viral to ensure that people who don't get the word because of lack of government outreach, will get it through churches and through the Internet.

We will rely on these methods of communicating more and more, as this administration attempts to contract, not expand, the information people need to get essential health care (and other services). The toolkit and other resources are proof that our community has the ability to out organize the evil that is seeping out of Washington. "Woke" members of Congress are working with Rev. Skinner and others to get the word out - Congressman Jim Clyburn (D-SC) had his PSA up BEFORE the enrollment period opened on November 1, and some members of Congress have PSAs posted on their webpages. But everyone won't log on to a Congressional website to get access to the PSA. That's where the churches and community organizations come in.

Once upon a time we could mobilize. Without any Internet, 250,000 people managed to get to Washington, DC for the March on Washington on August 28, 1963. Mimicking that effort, and using both word of mouth and the Internet, more than a million women made it to Washington DC for the post-inaugural Women's March. Now we have the opportunity to rally millions to participate in benefits of the Affordable Care Act.

There are consequences to not enrolling. If you haven't enrolled by December 15, you may have to wait a whole year before getting access to affordable health care and the subsidies available under ACA, and you may have to pay a fine for not enrolling. Some states (California, Washington, Minnesota, DC, Colorado and Massachusetts) will allow enrollment until January, but most will close enrollment on December 15. Even with a longer enrollment period, the best thing to do is to ensure that those you know who need ACA benefits enroll early.

Helping people enroll for ACA benefits is not only a public service, but it is also an act of resistance to 45's pernicious attempts to undermine President Obama's signature piece of legislation. To be sure, ACA is not perfect, but it is responsible for expanding the base of people who can get affordable health insurance.

This example of Faith in Action may be a template for other ways to use the church to organize resistance. The novelist Dr. Daniel Black (author of Perfect Peace) recently gave a talk in which he described our churches as the backbone of the Black community. Disagree with your pastor, or with the sermon if you will, he said, but still get to church for the sense of community that can only be found there. While the Black church is less impactful than it was in 1963 when most of us could be reached through church announcements, it is still a place where we gather and share information.

If you don't usually go to church on November 12, when the #SOULS2ENROLL weekend campaign kicks off, consider making our way there to check this campaign out (or encourage your pastor to participate).

CRAZY FAITH MINISTRIESIs the Church impotent to end racism?

Is the Christian church supposed to be able to destroy racism?

The words of the Christ, taught to me, were awe-inspiring, powerful and had the power of transformation. The Christ taught that love was the principle upon which all things of God must stand. We were taught to love everyone - our friends and our enemies. In so doing, the world would be transformed.

Meanwhile, the White House has established a sham Commission to perpetuate the myth of widespread voter fraud. The commission is a weapon of mass deception, a Trojan horse to usher in even greater voting restrictions on people of color, the poor, senior citizens and students.

Despite her worsening health, complicated by a lifetime spent in poverty and the beating she suffered in prison, she spent her life battling racism and poverty. It would be a disgrace to her memory if we did not make every effort to defeat the effort to restrict voting rights.

Marc H. Morial, former mayor of New Orleans, is president and CEO of the National Urban League.

But it seems that God's people needed and still need more direction. If we believe that God created us all, then the variety of races and ethnicities is of God and from God. We in the church are supposed to represent the God whom we say we love. That would seem to mean that we work to embrace all of God's created people.

The church does not do that, however. The Christian church - and other religions as well - have found it difficult to embrace and to accept the concept and the practice of love.

Instead of being a voice for the voiceless, or a home for the homeless, instead of being a community of like-believers, members of the church are dividers. Instead of gathering people into community, the church characteristically drives people apart - all in the name of the Christ.

It seems that this institution, which has such transformative power, has forfeited that power and replaced it with naked humanity, humanity which gives in to base emotions and prejudices, all the while ignoring God and the words of the Christ which form the spine of the church. The church engages in prejudice and hatred and sees nothing wrong with it.

That is a problem.

During the Civil Rights movement, some pastors of white churches in the South preached that it was OK to treat black people poorly, and that to defend the Civil Rights Movement meant that one could lose favor with God and jeopardize one's own salvation. The Church, North and South, black and white, debated over the essential meaning of Christianity. There was a clear divide, in spite of the words of the Christ. Individualism began to emerge as a Christian tenet, as opposed to "the Beloved Community."

The Church developed a bifurcated theology; white theology was and is distinctly different from that of African Americans, and there is no intersection point. Those white pastors and church members who challenged white theology paid a price; many pastors lost their churches and many church members lost friends and ended up leaving the churches they loved.

There were pangs of protest in the very souls of a few. Both black and white Christians often remained silent, blacks because they were not interested in "causing a stir" and perhaps upsetting the tenuous "freedom" they had, and whites because they could and did lose so much. Some white pastors in Mississippi dared confront this bifurcated Christian theology and wrote a statement dubbed "Born of Conviction" in 1963.

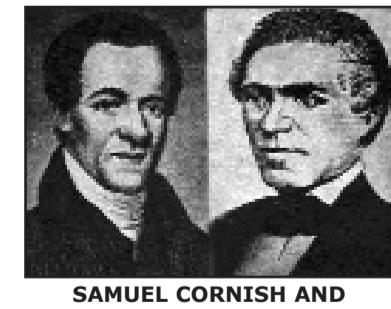

In that document, the pastors wrote "confronted with the grace crises precipitated by racial discord without our state in recent months, and the genuine dilemma facing persons of Christian conscience, we are compelled to voice publicly our convictions. Indeed, as Christian ministers and as native Mississippians, sharing the anguish of all our people, we have a particular obligation to speak."

They did speak, but their cries were overwhelmed by the noise of racism being practiced in and by the church. Dr. King addressed the weakness, the impotence of the Church, the progressive Church in particular, in his Letter From a Birmingham Jail, but in the end, neither the voices of anguished white Southern pastors or an anguished Black civil rights leader could say or do whatever needed to be said or done to end racism.

Has the Church failed, then, as a moral force against racism? Up to this point, that seems to be the case. The Church, the Christian church, in spite of having a revolutionary named Jesus be the center of its belief system, has pushed the Christ to the curb and continues to help nurture this illness called racism which will ultimately destroy this country.

HOMETOWN NEWS FROM BRUNSWICK COUNTY

More women needed in politics

Today, there is a real need for more women in politics. We get daily information on this issue daily through watching the news on television and reading the news in the newspapers and magazines, etc. Much of the reading material we receive on this issue comes to us in the mail.

Today's women make a great impact in our lives in various ways. Women serve a great role in the schools of our communities and make worthwhile contributions to helping young people fulfill their fondest dreams. Every investment made in the education of a child is a step in that direction. Much ado is made about the tax dollars spent on the improvement of the infrastructure of our communities, but we must never forget the significance of the time, attention, and materials necessary to teach necessary educational skills to our young people. If the necessary teaching materials are not accessible, it creates a problem for all involved. All children ought to have available to them the best education possible.

More and more of our women are becoming more and more involved in all aspects of our lives, particularly politics, and women's voices are making a difference on the various issues that affect every area of our lives. As we face more critical times in the days ahead, we live with the hope that, out of future generations, will come even more of our women who will enter the critical areas of life in all of our communities and take a firm stand. If we stand on solid truth and righteousness, we must achieve our ultimate goal, total rights for women. If we stand for righteousness, our rights will never be destroyed!

Oliver N. Peoples

Oliver N. Peoples, age 67, of Wilmington, passed away Sunday, October 29, 2017. Friends are cordially invited to a visitation with the family from 6:00 - 8:00 PM on Friday, November 3, 2017 at Davis Funeral Home. A celebration of Oliver's life will be conducted at 1:00 PM, Saturday, November 4, 2017 at Union Missionary Baptist Church. Interment will follow in Shoulders Branch Missionary Baptist Church Cemetery.

Oliver Neal Peoples was born to the late Leroy and Sarah Peoples on February 7, 1950. On Sunday October 29, 2017 while holding the hand of his loving wife, our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ called him home to enter into internal rest. Oliver accepted Christ at an early age and gained his Christian experience as a member of Shoulders Branch Missionary Baptist Church.

In his early years while playing in the Castle Hayne community he earned his nickname "Cheetah" because of his quick speed at running. He was always very competitive and willing to meet any challenge. Oliver was also a very compassionate and loving person who loved talking with anyone. Those who knew him would say that he could talk for hours and hours and more hours and then end with "hey, it's just conversation." He liked playing cards games, washing his car; dancing to his James Brown songs and going to the movies.

Oliver's working career began with him working with his dad at Carolina Meat Processing Company. Oliver was able to gain invaluable leadership skills that he later would use when he moved to Houston, Texas. The skills Oliver obtained at an earlier age enabled him to be an effective supervisor at A-1 Rocket Moving and Storage along with Grabel Moving where he worked for a combined 24 years before retirement.

Oliver loved the Lord, his wife, children, grandchildren and he also had a deep love for his Pastor and friend, Rev. Leonard Peters. He talked often about how much he loved working in the church alongside Pastor Peters. His family always knew that any conversation they had with him would lead to Pastor Peters, Sister Valerie and the members at the Good Shepherd House of Prayer of Houston, Texas.

SENIOR CITIZENS' FELLOWSHIPFocus on prayer

BY FANNIE ALLEN AND SHEILA ROSS
CONTRIBUTING WRITERS

The Senior Citizens' Fellowship met on Tuesday, November 7, 2017, at First Baptist Church. We were all glad to be in the house of the Lord. Our meeting was called to order by President Eloise Purdie. Our choir gathered under the direction of Mr. George Hill. We opened with "Pass me Not." Prayer was offered by Mrs. Ella Brown. We next sang "Glory to His Name."

Mrs. Thelma Gates was the speaker for today. We began each day with The Lord's Prayer. She read from the King James Version and the NIV. She said that Matt 6:7 indicates that we should not use repetitions. We run through the words of the Lord's Prayer, but, if we pay attention, the Lord's Pray has a true meaning. God wants us to come to Him. We should not hold grudges. God will deliver us from evil. God has power over evil. When we say the prayer, we should focus on the prayer and its true meaning. That prayer says that God will take care of us and our needs. Mrs. Thelma Gates was given a hand for such a great message.

We had expressions. Mrs. Cherry Pearson thanked everyone for their acts of kindness shown to her during her surgery and recovery. Mrs. Ethel Mae McClammy also thanked everyone. The expressions heard are always so encouraging. Mrs. Thelma Gates will have back surgery 12/6/17. Prayers are needed for each of them.

The meeting was then turned over to Mrs. Gladys Taylor. She thanked Mrs. Cherry Pearson and sisters for warm greetings and for providing refreshments. They were delicious. The minutes were read by Mrs. Mary Greene, and they were approved. The roll was called, and tickets for our anniversary and our trip were given out. Mrs. Annie Haskins gave the sick report. She asked us to continue to pray for those who are sick.

The callers were announced, and the winner was Mrs. Frances Burney Matthews, with 11. Smiles and laughter were given by Mrs. Mary Martin. Our circle was formed, and we sang, "Bind Us Together." Prayer was given by Minister Henrietta McGlenn. There were 45 present.

SENIOR MOMENTChurches can form The National Association for Advancement of Christianity or Humanity

My fellow citizens,

When I was a child, I heard men have heated arguments about the Sunday School lessons. However, when it was over, they would shake hands and move on.

Ruth Johnson
Today they don't argue. They just listen quietly and then get up and go, but the children will ask questions they know we can't answer. For example, how did Adam and Eve make clothes for their children. When they don't like Bible Study, they ask impossible questions.

However, we have come to realize that Moses did not know everything. He wrote as if all mankind descended from one man and one woman. In the Book of Numbers, he estimated some men to live several hundred years, which would explain the passage of time, but today, we know better and so do the children. We don't know who first said, "All of it is God's Word." However, we know he was not acquainted with all the authors. Besides, this is a different world. Our children read books by many different authors. They also search the internet. So they drop out of Bible Study at a very early age.

We already know that God does not change the direction of a hurricane, no matter how hard we pray. Besides, someone else is praying that it will go the other way. So what are we saying to the children about the value of prayer? What are we saying about the purpose of the church?

Today, we see God as the Holy Spirit that lives within us, not an outside force that controls nature and directs the wind and the rain. Why would he send a hurricane or maintain a place called hell? The church should be a vessel strong enough to navigate the swirling tides. If not, we're going down. Now is the time to strengthen the pillars, widen the doors and put something more on the table.

However, one church can't do it alone. We should form something like The National Association for the Advancement of Christianity, or should we say Humanity? If politicians can draw up a proposal, so can the church, and the people united can never be defeated.

Mrs. Ruth Johnson is a First Baptist Church Ministry Worker.

TELL SOMEBODY"If the Blind Lead the Blind"

"And he spake a parable unto them, Can the blind lead the blind? Shall not they both fall into the ditch?" Luke 6:39

Blind - Being without sight

How do you know if you are following good leadership? We must be able to hear, and obey God's voice when choosing leadership. Proverbs 3:5,6 tells us to "Trust in the Lord with all our heart, and lean not to our own understanding. In all our ways to acknowledge him, and he shall direct our path."

Morgan E. Lewis, Jr.
Morgan Elton Lewis, Jr., 77, passed away peacefully at his home in Wilmington, NC on October 30, 2017, surrounded by his loving family.

Morgan Elton Lewis, Jr. was born in Youngstown, Ohio on July 4, 1940 to the late Morgan Elton Lewis, Sr. and Louise Lewis. He graduated from Hubbard High School in 1958. He served in the United States Marine Corp from 1958 to 1966 and obtained the ranking of Sgt (E-5). While enlisted as a Marine, Morgan worked in the capacity of Cannoner, Motor Transport Technician, and Helicopter Mechanic/Crew Chief. Post military discharge, Morgan worked at Chrysler Mack Plant, General Motors, and the Detroit House of Correction. On October 29, 1966, Morgan married Jean (Lucas) in Detroit, Michigan.

Morgan obtained a Bachelor's and Master's degree in Social Work from Wayne State University. He later earned certification as a Licensed Clinical Social Worker and established his own private practice in Dearborn, Michigan, Greenville, North Carolina, and Wilmington, North Carolina. He was employed as a counselor at the University of North Carolina - Wilmington for 8 years.

On any given day, you could find Morgan participating in his life-long passions and love of outdoor activities which he shared with his family and friends. He took great pride in teaching them all about the wonders and beauty of nature. He had many hobbies and was an avid reader. He loved sailing, motorcycling, camping, kayaking, archery and martial arts. He attended motorcycle rallies and toured in Lake George, Vermont, Knoxville, Atlanta, Charleston, Myrtle Beach, Raleigh and toured from Wilmington to Nova Scotia, Canada.

He was preceded in death by his mother, father and sister Dana Lewis Dyer.

Morgan leaves a legacy of love and cherished memories. He is survived by his wife of 51 years Jean Lucas Lewis, son Alan (Dawn) Lewis, daughter hewn down, and cast into the fire. Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them."

Following leadership is very important within the Body of Christ. The bible tells us to esteem our leaders highly, and to give honor to whom honor is due. For consciousness sake, we should believe that our leaders are also followers of Christ. When they preach or teach the scriptures to us, we should be following along with our own bibles wide open to confirm God's truths.

Our Christian leaders should also be living holy. How can they lead us to victory, if they are struggling with sin? We should also set high standards when choosing those to lead us politically. Apostle Paul was a great leader and wrote quite a bit of the New Testament, yet he humbly stated, "Follow me as I follow Christ."

The greatest leader this world has ever known, is in the person of Jesus Christ. He was and still is a perfect role model for leadership. In Matthew 4:19, he said to Peter and Andrew, "Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men."

1. Jesus was fully focused on them individually.

2. He knew the plans he had for their future

3. He recognized their potential

A good Christian leader is willing to model what their ministry teaches. A good leader sets the example, and is always seeking what is best for his/her followers.

A good Christian leader may use other sources of information or inspiration, but remains true to Holy scripture. His life is fruitful and he is concerned about the souls of his followers. He preaches good tidings to the meek, he binds up the broken-hearted, and proclaims liberty to those held captive by the enemy.

On the contrary, a leader who is blind, will seek to influence you more than Christ himself. Your life will be unfruitful and non productive if you are following someone who is spiritually blind. A blind man cannot help but stumble. Everyone who follows a blind man will likewise stumble and fall into the same ditch as the blind leader!

"Where there is no vision, the people perish, so choose your leaders wisely! You will have to live with the consequences of the choices that are made by your leaders. Remember, what happens when the blind lead the blind.....

Prayer: Father open our eyes to see what you want us to see when it comes to choosing our leaders politically and spiritually. Give us wisdom in Jesus Name we pray. Amen.
