BROKEN ARROW WELCOMES MORE DEVELOPMENT

EMILY RAMSEY for Broken Arrow Express

HOTELAND CONFERENCE CENTER: Stoney Creek Hotel & Conference Center in Broken Arrow opened on Oct. 25 after breaking ground in December 2015. The hotel and conference center is located just north of Bass Pro Shops along Highway 51 and features a 40,000-square-foot conference center, meeting rooms and a 177-room hotel.

Broken Arrow continues to see a number of economic development projects reach completion with more currently underway, including the city's first dog park.

Stoney Creek Hotel & Conference Center, the city's long-awaited conference center, officially opened on Oct. 25, just north of Bass Pro Shops and Highway 51.

Stoney Creek sits on 15 acres and includes a 40,000-square-foot conference center, with a 10,000-square-foot ballroom and nine breakout rooms and audio and visual technologies to host conferences, conventions, expositions, receptions and corporate events.

The property also features a 177-room hotel with a business center, complimentary high-speed internet, fitness facility, complimentary breakfast and pet-friendly rooms. Stoney Creek's room options are made up of 10 room and suite options, including extended stay rooms.

The hotel also features an indoor/outdoor heated pool that will be open year round and the Blind

Buffalo Pourhouse with an outdoor patio that is open to the community.

Stoney Creek Hospitality is headquartered in Des Moines, Iowa. In addition to Broken Arrow, the company operates 14 sites in Illinois, Iowa, Missouri and Wisconsin. Its first location opened in Iowa in 1995.

What attracted Stoney Creek CEO Jim Thompson to Broken Arrow after being approached by city officials was partly due to the company's plans to expand into new regions, he says.

He also appreciated the hotel's proposed location in an already developed retail area, with Bass Pro Shops located across the street and the area's various restaurants.

"I loved the idea of helping to bring this whole area together," Thompson says.

Additionally, the size of the land allows opportunity for future expansion of the Broken Arrow property, he continues, with a possible phase II.

The steps for Broken Arrow's first conference center were laid in 2004, with the passage of a bond issue to fund a conference center, said Mayor Craig Thurmond at the Oct. 25 press conference.

After additional funding needs were identified, Broken Arrow residents were asked to approve new stipulations for the property in a 2014 bond issue.

The project broke ground in 2015.

In order to further enhance walkability in the area, the City added sidewalks, additional lighting and pedestrian crossings leading to Bass Pro Shops all in order to improve walkability in the area, says City Manager Michael Spurgeon.

"When people are at the hotel but not at their conference, we want them to have an area where that allows them to walk to the various restaurants in the area."

Spurgeon expects Stoney Creek's opening to spur additional restaurant and commercial development in the area, which only increases the city's sales tax revenue, he says.

The hotel and conference center will hold a community grand opening on Dec. 2.

On Oct. 10, the City of Broken Arrow broke ground on the Rose West Dog Park, five acres of land located on New Orleans (101st Street, east of Garnett Road.

The park will feature two fenced play areas, one for large and one for small dogs; a holding area prior to the play areas; and restroom facilities and water fountains.

The restrooms and water fountains will also be open to cyclists and joggers using the adjoining Liberty Park Trail.

Shade structures are planned to be added in the future.

The park will cost under $500,000 and is funded by the 2014 General Obligation Bond.

The land was donated by Joan and Monte Dunham with the request that the park be named after Rose West, the former owner of the property.

The park is expected to be completed in the spring of 2018.

The Future of South B.A.

While north Broken Arrow continues to thrive, south Broken Arrow continues to see not just lack of growth but retailers vacating the area, such as Hobby Lobby and Applebee's, two businesses that recently left the 101st Street and Elm Place intersection. That topic was the theme of a special

KUDOS: Lobeck Taylor Family Foundation

The year 2017 marks two decades of service to the Tulsa community for the Lobeck Taylor Family Foundation.

Since 1997, LTFF has been working towards making Tulsa an innovative, collaborative and thriving city by focusing on entrepreneurship, innovation, and community engagement and, over that time, has committed more than $20 million dollars to over 100 grantees.

LTFF recently celebrated its anniversary by announcing its $5.5 million-dollar development of Mother Road Market, Tulsa's first food hall that will feature a mix of local food entrepreneurs, to be located on the corner of 11th Street and Lewis Avenue.

The LTFF program Kitchen 66, a program that helps to launch food entrepreneurs, will expand into the Mother Road Market upon completion in late spring 2018. Currently, Kitchen 66 has served over 65 food entrepreneurs from over 10 different countries.

Also, to increase equal access to startup capital, LTFF brought internationally acclaimed "crowdfunding" platform Kiva to Tulsa in November. Kiva allows entrepreneurs to borrow up to $10,000 with no interest and gives Tulsans the opportunity to lend in $25 increments towards these crowd-sourced small business loans.

The Tulsa StartUp Series, which LTFF operates with support from OSU's Riata Center for Entrepreneurship, Cox Business and Cox Media, is celebrating its 10th year of giving local innovators a platform to pitch their ideas.

Tulsa Press Club Names Headliners

The Tulsa Press Club has announced its 2017 Headliners – Bill and Kathy LaFortune.

They will be recognized at the 2017 Headliners Dinner, to be held Tuesday, Dec. 5 at the BOK Center. The reception begins at 6 p.m. with dinner following at 7 p.m.

This extraordinary couple embodies service to the community:

Bill LaFortune helped redefine Tulsa while serving as its 37th Mayor. He ushered in the redevelopment of Tulsa's downtown and the great revival of Tulsa's central business core.

During his tenure, he took on the role of consensus builder in working with elected officials, local governments, business leaders and neighborhood advocates to create a capital investment campaign known as Vision 2025, which was approved by voters in 2003. Those Vision 2025 projects, including the BOK Center, were the beginning of a bold new future and served as a catalyst for Tulsa's renaissance, spurring more than $1 billion in private investment in downtown Tulsa.

As a member of Tulsa's legal community for more than 30 years, Bill has served as an Oklahoma Assistant Attorney General and Tulsa County District Attorney, in private practice and as a partner with the firm of Norman Wohlge-muth Chandler & Dowdell.

Entire generations of Tulsa families have been helped by the work of Kathy LaFortune. As a nationally-recognized forensic psychologist, she has given a voice to the Tulsa community's most at-risk populations, serving to help juveniles and individuals with severe mental illness. She is currently the Forensic Psychological Services Coordinator of the Tulsa County Juvenile Bureau and has served as Chief of Forensic Psychological Services for the Oklahoma Indigent Defense System. She has published articles on the competency to stand trial and child custody evaluations and has taught and spoke on these issues across the country as a noted expert in her field.

"This is a first for the Tulsa Press Club – honoring a husband and wife as Headliners," notes Melani Hamilton and Nicole Burgin, 2017 Headliners co-chairs. "Bill and Kathy LaFortune have worked to create a vibrant and healthier community for all Tulsans. Beginning with the vision of the redevelopment in downtown Tulsa and a sustained commitment to advocate for our troubled youth and mentally ill, these two individuals have shaped Tulsa for the better."

Since 1956, the Tulsa Press Club has honored Headliners – a group of outstanding Tulsa area civic, business, professional and industrial leaders whose unselfish contributions to the growth, prosperity and culture of Tulsa have made headlines.

Previous Headliners include Alan Armstrong, Dr. Keith Ballard, Henry Bellmon, David Boren, Chet Cadieux III, Sharon Daugherty, Sharon King Davis, Nancy Day, Becky J. Frank, Robert LaFortune, Wilma Mankiller, Elliot Nelson, Julius Pegues, Major Dan Rooney, former Mayor Kathy Taylor, Steve Turnbo, Steadman Upham and Michael Wallis.

The Tulsa Press Club will use a portion of event proceeds to fund scholarships for Oklahoma college journalism and communications students.

For more information about the 2017 Headliners event, sponsorships and tickets, email kelly@tulsapressclub.org, call 918-583-7737 or visit shop.tulsapressclub.org.

BILL AND KATHY LAFORTUNE: Former Mayor Bill LaFortune and Kathy LaFortune will be honored on Dec. 5 as the Tulsa Press Club's 2017 Headliners. The event will be held at the BOK Center, with a reception beginning at 6 p.m. and dinner at 7 p.m.

Gateways to Growth to Promote Immigrant Integration

From Tulsa's Mayor

By G.T. BYNUM
Mayor of Tulsa

As your Mayor, I recognize that Tulsa's greatest assets are our people. For the past few decades, a growing number of people from different countries are choosing to call Tulsa their home.

Trends show that immigrants have been a key part of Tulsa's economic and social growth. As Tulsa becomes a world-class city, I believe that immigrants are valuable members of our community who can help contribute to our city's overall success.

Recently, our city was selected as one of 25 Gateways for Growth Cities by the New American Economy (NAE) and Welcoming America. Our city has joined the ranks of Chicago, Dallas, Des Moines, Little Rock and Memphis, among others. The Gateways for Growth Grant will allow us to utilize data to better understand our growing immigrant and refugee population here in Tulsa.

With the Gateways for Growth Grant, I also announced a new effort to promote immigrant integration in Tulsa. The New Tulsans Initiative, spearheaded by Christina Starzl Mendoza community development and policy assistant in the Mayor's Office, is a purposeful approach to promote the social inclusion of immigrants. Our partners in this new effort are the Schusterman Foundation, Tulsa Regional Chamber of Commerce, Tulsa County Health Department, Tulsa Area United Way and YWCA Tulsa.

This month, the City and the Tulsa Regional Chamber will host a "New Tulsans Summit," which will bring local community organizations, businesses, nonprofits and residents together to help shape the direction of a strategic plan. We hope to have this fully developed within the coming year.

Immigrants are an important part of Tulsa's success and prosperity. Right now, Tulsa is fortunate to have more than 2,200 immigrant entrepreneurs who help sustain our economic growth. Immigrants from different parts of the world are choosing Tulsa to buy homes, raise their families, participate in our faith communities and be our neighbors. I believe it's crucial for our city to unite our diverse communities, engaging both native born and immigrant Tulsans to nurture healthy economic and social growth for everyone.

Many people know my family has been in Tulsa for a long time. However, I often think about my Irish ancestors coming here 100 years ago and what it would have meant to them to have a city that welcomed them with compassion and included them to participate in the economic and political leadership of that city. Ultimately, my desire is to let immigrants bring their best to our Tulsa – providing fresh perspectives, starting businesses, and contributing to the vibrant diversity that makes our city prosper.

Tulsa County Elected Officials Working for Constituents

From Tulsa County

By COMMISSIONER RON PETERS

Last month, all eight Tulsa County elected officials hosted a legislative luncheon for the State Representatives and Senators who represent some portion of Tulsa County.

This meeting was an opportunity for our elected officials holding state or county office's to discuss how they can work together to provide a more efficient and effective government to all Tulsa County residents.

During the meeting, County officials presented some of the issues and challenges they face that could be addressed with the passage of legislation in 2018. Here are some of the ideas that were presented.

Court Clerk Don Newberry believes it's time to add members of our law enforcement to the list of those professions which are exempt from jury duty. As a practical matter, when a law enforcement officer is called for jury duty they are never selected to serve on a jury because of the perception they have a professional bias or personal knowledge of the facts of the case. This would be a savings for taxpayers, as these law enforcement officers are currently paid by the county to sit in the jury assembly room, paid by the city which employs them and often the city that employs the officer has to pay overtime to another officer to cover the shift of the officer who is summoned to jury duty.

County Clerk Michael Willis supports a measure that would address how for-profit businesses receive land information, which they use in their business dealings. Currently, while these businesses do not have to pay for the right to access this information, they do sell this information to their clients. In a sense, these businesses are acting like "records brokers" where they expect to collect it for free and then sell it for a profit. The County Clerk believes there should be a reasonable and fair cost assessed for access to these records.

County Purchasing Director Matney Ellis believes that the way current construction-at-risk contracts are awarded could cost the county millions of dollars and should be changed. Currently, when the County is preparing a major capital improvement project, a "Request for Qualifications" is issued. After several contracting companies reply to the request, the selection is based upon which contractor appears to be the most qualified to do the work. Consequently, the selection of the contractor is not based on competitive bidding, the best and lowest bid, which ensures the least cost to the taxpayers, but instead solely on their qualifications to do the work. When there are several well qualifying businesses it is common that they bid differing amounts to do the work. But the county never gets to compare their bids...only their qualifications. The legislative request is to allow the final selection to be based upon competitive bidding and not exclusively based on qualifications.

Sheriff Vic Regalado believes it's time for Oklahoma to make the possession of a stolen firearm a felony, not a misdemeanor as it currently is. People in possession of a stolen firearm are predictably up to no good and involved in patterns of criminal behavior. Between 2012 and 2016 in Oklahoma, over 35,000 firearms were reported stolen from private owners and over 500 from firearms dealers. Because most of these guns are valued at less than $1,000, this is considered petty larceny, a misdemeanor that generally results in little or no jail time. The Sheriff wants to get tough on stolen firearms with stiffer penalties and consequences.

Our Director of Social Services, Linda Johnson, believes it time to crack down on fake and forged prescriptions for controlled substances. Currently, these prescriptions are prepared by a physician on medical security paper, which is easily accessible to anyone through local office supply stores. With this paper, and the ability to use technology, individuals can prepare fake prescriptions for certain controlled drugs, which are a leading cause in the opioid crisis facing Oklahoma and the country. Legislators are being asked to consider mandatory E-prescribing for controlled substances where the physician no longer uses the medical security paper but rather electronically transmits the prescription to the pharmacy.

These ideas, and others, seemed to be well received by the legislators in attendance. Armed with firsthand information from county officials dealing with these issues on a daily basis, the legislators are now better informed on these issues and can consider how they can propose and/or support legislation to address these concerns.

With the 2018 Legislative session just 3 ½ months away, this was a great beginning of a public servant partnership that can help every citizen in Tulsa County.

Kimberly Johnson Has Long-Time Love of Libraries

By EMILY RAMSEY
Managing Editor

Editor's Note: Tulsa City-County Library CEO Kimberly Johnson is one of Greater Tulsa Reporter's "10 People to Watch in 2017," as announced in its January 2017 issue. GTR was the first news group in Greater Tulsa to introduce "10 People to Watch," which launched in January 2009.

Look for a review of GTR's "10 People to Watch in 2017" in the December issue.

As a self-proclaimed lifetime library user, it is only fitting that Kimberly Johnson would devote her professional life to improving a library system.

"The library has always played a special role in my life," she says.

Johnson, who assumed the helm as Tulsa City-County Library chief executive officer at the beginning of the year, has been with the Tulsa library system since 1998, when she was originally hired as coordinator of the African-American Resource Center at Rudisill Regional Library.

From there, she has held various positions, including library manager, regional director and chief operating officer. Johnson also oversaw the preparation and opening of Librarium.

"Librarium was a project that allowed us to test many of our ideas of ways to address the 21st-century library user," says Johnson, a New York native.

That quality of consistently looking at ways to further the library's effectiveness in meeting community needs, Johnson feels, summarizes her aim with the library and the goals of her staff, many of whom have been with the organization for decades, just like Johnson.

"Our staff is passionate about our communities; they want the right books in the hands of the right people," she says.

Johnson had an early experience during her school years with a librarian named Miss Sperling, who impacted her love of books.

"She was welcoming and challenged students to read at the next level," Johnson says.

"At the Tulsa City-County Library, I feel like I'm surrounded by Miss Sperlings."

Johnson's love of books led her to earn her bachelor's degree from the University of Tulsa in secondary education and English literature with her plan being to teach literature.

Although the library was not in her original plans, after reading the description for the job opening of coordinator of the African-American Resource Center at Rudisill Regional Library, a newly created position with the library system, she felt that the position lined up well with her skills and her educational background.

Regarding her professional goals, Johnson always knew that she would pursue a career that allowed her to serve.

"I do my job in service to others: what better place to do that than here at the library?" she says.

During her time as coordinator, Johnson created the historical All-Black Towns Bus Tour, which has continued to run every summer since 1999. The tour shines a light on Oklahoma's history as having one of the highest number of all-black towns in the country between 1865 and 1915.

Once Johnson began with the library, "I felt like I had found my place," she says. "The library was a natural fit for me."

She later earned her master's degree from the University of Oklahoma in library and information studies.

Johnson's later jobs with the library put her in management roles, which allowed her to focus on more than serving solely the community but also library employees, she says.

Since Johnson took over as CEO in January, she has made it a goal to visit each library location within the library system.

She completed all of her visits earlier in the year and is currently on her second round.

"My visits allow me to see what our staff is dealing with and how we can improve," she says.

Also, in the past six months, library staff has hosted library systems from Frisco, Texas, and Washington, D.C.

Johnson credits the library's array of cutting-edge offerings as reason for the attention.

"Our library system is something that our customers can be proud of," she says. "We are a model system for the country because of our offerings."

Those offerings include maker spaces, digital literacy labs, audio labs, movies, music, books, spaces for community gatherings—"Think about the value of a library card, that all of these services are free with the card," says Johnson.

LIBRARY LOYALIST: Tulsa City-County Library CEO Kimberly Johnson assumed the leadership helm in January, replacing previous CEO Gary Shaffer. Johnson, a New York native, has worked for the Tulsa library system since 1998.

Additionally, the library remains connected with the local schools to provide books for them. The library system has been a part of Books to Treasure for 15 years, a program sponsored by the Zarrow Family Foundation that gives a book to each Tulsa-area second-grader followed by a visit and book signing by the book's author. During summer 2017, the library saw 52,000 participants in its summer reading program. "We are creating a more literate community," she says. Another benefit of reading? "Books open up new worlds. They evoke empathy and compassion and help make the world better." Spoken like a true book, and library, lover.

HONORING OUR VETERANS: U.S. Veterans will be honored in Tulsa at the Veterans Day Parade that is scheduled for Friday, Nov. 10 to begin at 11 a.m. at 300 S. Boston Ave. Anticipated attendance is 15,000. GTR Publisher Forrest Cameron is a proud veteran of the U.S. Army, where he served in the Military Police.

Holidays Launch with Arts and Entertainment

November in Tulsa is rich with entertainment. Celebrities, big-name bands and Grammy-winners galore can add variety to your holiday-time planning. And, if the fine arts and family-friendly events are more your style, look no more. Tulsa-area venues comprise a cornucopia of it all.

Tulsa Ballet performs the light-hearted "Don Quixote," Nov. 3-5 at the Tulsa PAC. Perfect for holiday-time, the ballet is a showcase of great dancing. Anna-Marie Holmes, the choreographer/former dancer who set the piece on Tulsa Ballet, is a world-renowned ballet master and an authority on Russian ballet. Also opening Nov. 3 and playing through Nov. 11 is Theatre Tulsa's "Amadeus." I'm looking forward to seeing Tulsa actor Will Carpenter as the Mozart's menacing competitor, Salieri, and the superb Cody McCoy as Mozart.

Chamber Music Tulsa presents the acclaimed Meccore Quartet, from Poland, Nov. 12, performing works by Haydn, Szymanowski and Schumann. The Sunday afternoon performance will be held in the PAC's Westby Pavilion. The Meccore has the distinction of performing their music while standing!

Do you remember Paul Anka? "Put Your Head of My Shoulder"? I associate Anka with that song but not with Frank Sinatra's "My Way," which Anka wrote. For his River Spirit Paradise Cove appearance, Nov. 3, he'll sing a range of cover songs, all performed Anka's way.

Comic Dennis Miller entertains at the Cove that same weekend. "What can I tell you?" You'll remember Miller best from "Saturday Night Live." Although he appeared to sway to the left in his "Weekend Update" segments, he is known to have neo-conservative political leanings these days. We'll see who he's making jokes about when he lands in Tulsa, Nov. 4.

Hey, hey it's the Monkee, Micky Dolenz, Nov. 5 at Hard Rock's The Joint. Five decades have passed since the Monkees grabbed a piece of TV history. Dolenz was a childhood actor who learned to drum for his Monkees' role. Moreover, he was the voice behind the foursome's biggest tunes, like "Last Train to Clarksville." His act will combine Monkees' songs with other tunes linked to Dolenz's life story.

The BOK Center hosts three notable music events this month, beginning with Kris Kristofferson, Nov. 6. Did you know he is a Rhodes Scholar, an Army helicopter pilot, a Golden Globe winner and a former boyfriend to Janis Joplin? She and others sang his "Me and Bobby McGee." He wanted to be a novelist but became a songwriter, penning "Help Me Make It Through The Night," among many other hits.

TULSA BALLET: The light-hearted "Don Quixote" runs Nov. 3-5 at the Tulsa PAC.

KATY PERRY: The pop diva brings her "Witness: The Tour" to the BOK Center, Nov. 29.

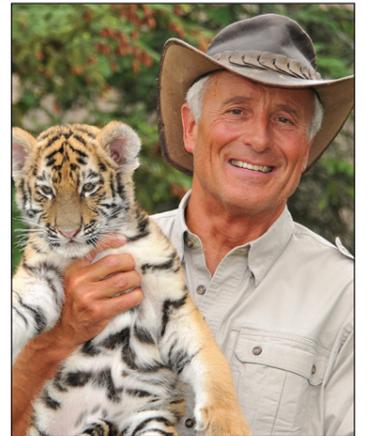

KRIS KRISTOFFERSON: The singer, songwriter and actor performs his hits songs at the BOK Center, Nov. 6.

HOLIDAY CLASSIC: Celebrity Attractions presents two performances of "Rudolph The Red-Nosed Reindeer" on Nov. 26 at the Tulsa PAC.

CHAMBER MUSIC: The Meccore Quartet performs their concerts standing up! They appear on Chamber Music Tulsa's concert series Nov. 12 at the Tulsa PAC.

WILD LIFE: It's a wild November at the Tulsa PAC with Jack Hanna's "Into the Wild Live!," Nov. 9, presented by Celebrity Attractions.

McDonald, Nov. 9. They co-wrote the Grammy-winning "What a Fool Believes." McDonald sang with Steely Dan and then the Doobie Brothers. Aside from his years making music with Jim Messina, Loggins wrote "Footloose," "Danger Zone," "Angry Eyes," "I'm Alright," and "Your Mama Don't Dance." I expect this show will sell out. Also appearing at River Spirit are Oklahoma's Swon Brothers, Nov. 11, and the country music cross-over band Alabama, Nov. 17.

Family-time takes center stage in November on several fronts. "PJ Masks Live! Time to Be a Hero," Nov. 8 at the PAC, is a musical production based on the "PJ Masks" series airing on Disney Junior. It gets wilder at the PAC, Nov. 9, when Celebrity Attractions hosts Jack Hanna's "Into the Wild Live!" Hannah will tell stories of his adventures, share film footage, and bring live animals with him. Not recommended for the younger set is William Shatner's "Shatner's World," Nov. 4 at the Broken Arrow PAC. What a career he's had! There are tales to tell in this engaging one-man show featuring Shatner in command once again.

The Grammy-winning American rock band Foo Fighters lands at the BOK Center, Nov. 15, and Katy Perry brings her Witness: The Tour to "rock the BOK" on Nov. 29. Perry is a mega-star, the first woman in U.S. history to have five number one hits on one album. She and Taylor Swift had a falling out, resulting in Swift's "Bad Blood" record and Perry's answer, "Swish, Swish," which you can hear on her "Witness" album. Look for Perry in a judge's chair on the 2018 revival of "American Idol."

Tulsa's Broadway presenter, Celebrity Attractions, keeps the PAC rocking and gleeful. "Rudolph The Red-Nosed Reindeer: The Musical" is slated for two shows on Nov. 26, and the long-awaited "Beautiful, The Carol King Musical" runs Nov. 28 through Dec. 3. King's songs express the heart of an era.

Everyone I knew owned her "Tapestry" album in its day. This true-to-life musical tracks King's rise to fame, incorporating all her hits: "I Feel the Earth Move," "You've Got a Friend," (You Make me Feel Like) A Natural Woman," and so many others.

Entertainment for a range of interests and ages includes puppeteer Terry Fator at The Joint, Nov. 12; the Mabee Center presentation of "Moscow Ballet's 'Great Russian Nutcracker,'" Nov. 24; and "Paw Patrol Live!" at the BOK Center, Nov. 25-26. "Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone, In Concert," at the PAC Nov. 18-19, features the complete Harry Potter film projected on a giant, high-definition screen while the Tulsa Symphony performs the film's score. We saw the film "Raiders of the Lost Ark" in this same format last year. The live music makes the action jump off the screen!

I hope you will enjoy this abundance of talent brought to our door. Happy Thanksgiving to all!

Red Dirt Music: A Farm-Raised Oklahoma Original

New Orleans has Dixieland. Seattle has Grunge. Stillwater has Red Dirt.

Literally and musically.

It's a genre that has gained popularity nationwide and even internationally, but Stillwater, Oklahoma, is its undisputed birthplace.

More specifically, a 160-acre farm a few miles east of Stillwater which, in the 1980s and 1990s became a creative mecca and served as a melting pot, combining country, rock and roll, bluegrass and folk into what we know today as Red Dirt music.

A six-bedroom, two-story farmhouse once stood on the property that was the home and gathering place for musicians, songwriters, poets and artists. Bands were formed. Collaborations spawned. Songs were swapped around the campfire, and young musicians like Garth Brooks picked up a few tricks from the older guys.

As we know, Brooks went on to Nashville and became a megastar. What is not as well known is that the band he went to Nashville with was called Santa Fe and featured Tom Skinner on bass.

When Santa Fe was formed in Stillwater in 1986, Skinner was already a well-respected and popular local musician, playing frequent gigs with his brothers Mike and Craig in the Skinner Brothers Band.

The Skinner Brothers, along with Steve Ripley, Bob Childers, Randy Crouch and others had created something in Stillwater throughout the 1970s and 1980s: not just a unique sound, but a community.

Being a college town, Stillwater attracts a mixture of kids from rural areas who grew up with country music and kids from larger cities who grew up listening to rock and roll. The willingness and eagerness to collaborate among people from different backgrounds led to something entirely new that changed the musical landscape.

That's why I'm proposing that we replace members of congress with Red Dirt musicians. I'll lay out the details of that plan in a later column.

Steve Ripley, whose band Moses recorded under the label "Red Dirt Records" for their self-published album in 1972, is credited with naming the genre, but Bob Childers is widely considered the godfather of Red Dirt music.

"Three chords and the truth," says fellow Red Dirt Pioneer Randy

Crouch when recalling his friend Bob Childers, who passed away in 2008. "Of course, if you got a song about a pretty girl, you only need one chord. And it don't have to be the truth!"

I'm not sure if he was quoting Childers there or not, but it doesn't really matter. As Crouch would tell you, "we're all in the same band."

That "same band" mentality, is a theme among Red Dirt musicians. It goes deeper than, a little bit country, a little bit rock and roll. It's working together, playing and writing songs together that is a unique and defining characteristic of Red Dirt music. Childers called it "cross pollinating." It should be pointed out that Childers' status as godfather is not unanimously agreed upon.

"I respectfully disagree," says Ronald Boren, director of museum operations at the Oklahoma Music Hall of Fame in Muskogee. "If you ask me, Red Dirt music traces back to Woody Guthrie."

Interesting and valid take. Feel free to debate that one among yourselves. But keep it civil, we're all in the same band.

Getting back to Tom Skinner, he's also in the same band. He was an essential part of the Red Dirt community, and that community was part of him in a way Nashville never could be.

You can take the musician out of the red dirt, but you can't take the Red Dirt out of the musician.

After an amicable parting of ways with his soon-to-be-famous partner, Skinner left Nashville and returned to Stillwater just as the genre he helped pioneer began to flourish.

It was the late 1980s and influential Red Dirt musicians like Jimmy LaFave were gaining popularity in Stillwater, playing gigs like Willie's Saloon and becoming regulars at the farm.

In 1988, LaFave offered a slot at a musicians' reunion festival to one of the original tenants on the farm who had been playing open mic nights with a few friends on campus at OSU. He was a young mandolin player named John Cooper, who, along with Brad Piccolo and Ben Han, accepted the offer and took the stage under the name Red Dirt Rangers for the first time.

In the 1990s, a new crop of young talent that featured Stoney Larue, Cody Canada and Jason Boland

Searching for The Sound

By BRYAN CANTRELL

BRYON WHITE: The Damn Quails singer/guitarists joined the Red Dirt Rangers to perform an inspired version of the Tom Skinner song and festival namesake, Skyline Radio.

JACOB TOVAR: He would have been popular at Cain's Ballroom 90 years ago, yet somehow he's a fresh voice. Check this guy out ASAP.

GENE COLLIER AND CRAIG SKINNER: These two teamed up with Grazzhopper and mandolin player Kurt "Frenchy" Nielson for a set at The Mercury Lounge.

RANDY CROUCH: The legendary fiddler got down with the Red Dirt Rangers during the song, Get Down Randy, Get Down at Tom Skinner's Skyline Festival.

began showing up at the farm and learning from their predecessors. As these artists' popularity grew regionally and nationally, Red Dirt music became an official export of Stillwater.

While the genre itself and many of its ambassadors are still going strong, the farm is no longer a haven for musicians and artists. The house burned down in 2003, but the Red Dirt spirit of community and family is alive and well.

That spirit was on full display in October, as 45 musicians gathered for Tom Skinner's Skyline Festival. Playing across two venues, The Shrine and Mercury Lounge, the event raised $5,213 for Red Dirt Relief Fund, a non-profit organization that has provided more than $60,000 to musicians in need since its inception in 2012.

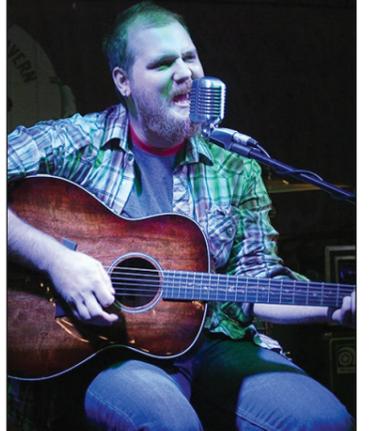

Named for the Tom Skinner song, Skyline Radio, the Oct. 15 event was a celebration of the late great songwriter's music that entertained fans and benefitted musicians. It was a win-win.

Another win-win event coming up is the Horton Records Folk n

Rock n Chili Cookoff, Nov. 11 at Cain's Ballroom. In fact, this event deserves more than two wins. It's a win for musicians, as it raises money for Horton Records, a Tulsa-based non profit that spends thousands of dollars annually to help Oklahoma musicians with recording, promoting, distributing and touring. It's a win for music lovers, as everyone on the lineup is worth the price of admission alone. It's a win for lovers of chili, as a dozen local restaurants including Ike's Chili, Burn Co. and Lambrusco's will be putting out their best chili offerings. And, most importantly, it's a win for people who are hungry or need a coat this winter. In the last two years, the Folk n Rock n Chili Cookoff has collected more than 200 coats and more than 1,000 pounds of food.

Now that's a community I want to be a part of. No wonder Tom Skinner left Nashville.

To hear and learn more about Red Dirt Music, check out Red Dirt Radio Hour with John Cooper and Brad Piccolo Sundays at 9 p.m. on KOSU, 107.5 FM in Tulsa.

CHRIS BLEVINS: Fresh off the release of his debut album, Better Than Alone, this Okie original will perform at Cain's Ballroom for the first time at Horton Records Rock n Folk n Chili Cookoff Nov. 11.

I hope to see you on Nov. 11 at Cain's with a few cans of food and an outgrown coat or two. We are in the same band after all.

Until then, keep searching, keep listening.

Development, Sense of Place Unite in Rose District

I moved from Broken Arrow to downtown Tulsa five years ago. few antique shops and one restaurant.

This was my first time living in a bustling area that afforded me various recreational and entertainment opportunities just beyond my doorstep.

So, when the weekend came, the last thing I ever expected to do was spend my evenings in downtown Broken Arrow. Never say never, as my mother often says.

If you grew up in Broken Arrow like I did, you would know that, just a decade ago, traffic pretty much disappeared on Main Street after 4 p.m.

Because all that you would find in downtown Broken Arrow is a

Out & About in Greater Tulsa

By EMILY RAMSEY
Managing Editor

Main Street Broken Arrow, although many decades ago the epicenter of Broken Arrow, had long ago dissipated and was showing no signs of revitalization.

That is, until a small group of individuals decided to move toward change.

In 2011, Jason Scarpa started the movement by opening Main Street Tavern—a gutsy move considering the area's lack of an evening draw.

In 2012, the first of many streetscaping projects Main Street more in that year, the city rebranded the district as the Rose District.

There were grumbles along the way from shoppers and from shop owners regarding construction and lost sales revenue; city managers came and went, but progress continued.

I recently spent a Sunday afternoon exploring the shops in the Rose District, particularly those in Main Street Square, a retail area that sits at the corner of Main and Dallas streets.

Although Fleet Feet Sports is located at the front of the center, a parking lot separates it from the rest of the shops, which include a number of stores that I plan to regularly frequent, including Hops & Hangers, a two-story clothing shop with an interesting concept to merge shopping with a bar on its first floor. (Why hasn't anyone else thought of this?)

Also, home decor shop Simplicity offers many unique finds, and Rocket Fizz Soda Pop and Candy Shop plans to open soon.

After that, I popped into Nouveau Chocolates for an iced mocha, which sits just down the street—a shop which has held its own, operating in downtown Broken Arrow since 2006.

Across the street are additional stores and restaurants; add to that the towering trees, the flowering rose bushes and the many pedestrian-friendly crossing areas, and B.A. (no bias, I promise) has become one of the more interesting and vibrant places to visit in Greater Tulsa.

Poke Bowl Love Brings Fast-Casual Poke Bowls to Tulsa

Local Dining

By BLAKE AUSTYN
Contributing Writer

On Oct. 21, Poke Bowl Love opened as the first retailer in the Meridia Building in downtown Tulsa at 522 S. Boston Ave. The fast-casual sushi concept was brought to Tulsa by Janet Love and a silent business partner.

Poke (pronounced: Po-keh) bowls are a Hawaiian dish that basically takes sushi from a roll to a bowl.

Love, who grew up in Tulsa, spent her college years in California.

While in California, "I discovered so many different options for food, including poke bowls," she says.

"Every time I would visit my family in Tulsa, it was always a struggle to find anything similar—affordable, quality and fresh sushi.

"After speaking with friends and family that work in downtown Tulsa, the constant feedback from everyone was that they love sushi, but they do not want to spend $15 on a role at lunch and not feel satisfied."

Although Love's target may be largely the weekday lunch crowd, the restaurant remains open until 9 p.m. every day of the week.

The decision to locate in the Meridia Building had to do with the space's convenient location and the building's modern design and LEED (Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design) status, she says.

"We use all plant based compostable to-go containers in our store."

The restaurant's interior is bright and clean, with green walls and white tables and chairs.

The simplicity of the space matches the straight forward nature of the menu.

Guests have a choice between a Poke Bowl or a Sushi Burrito. Both are available in two sizes: regular and large. They, then, must choose between making their own bowl or burrito or ordering from the menu's bowl and burrito dishes. There is also a Kids' Meal option.

As I was walking down the line of ingredients, one of the employees asked me if I wanted additional vegetables at no extra charge, which is a nice perk, I thought.

For my meal, I chose The Works Poke Bowl, which consists of tuna, salmon, yellow tail, cherry tomato, cucumber, tangy ponzu, house shoyu, sriracha aioli, masago and ginger.

Reading some of the sauces, I was concerned that the bowl would be too spicy, but the girl at the counter confirmed that it was not. However, for me, and I can tolerate a fairly medium spice, it was extremely spicy.

The flavor of the bowl, though, as a whole was good, and the size I chose (Regular) is large enough to satisfy an adult.

My friend ordered the Slammin' Salmon in a burrito, the concept like eating one long, uncut sushi roll, one of the employees told me. The burrito combines salmon, jalapeno, cucumber, tangy ponzu, house shoyu, sriracha aioli, crispy onion, masago and ginger.

Regarding the spice level, many of the same sauces from my dish were in this dish, and it wasn't as spicy as The Works. Maybe one of the girls just had a heavy hand with my bowl.

For dessert, Love is proud to be the first to bring Macaron ice cream sandwiches to Tulsa. The restaurant sold out all of its ice cream sandwiches within three days of its grand opening.

Poke Bowl Love is open seven days a week, 11 a.m. – 9 p.m.

Philbrook Museum Offers Behind-the-Scenes Look

In October, Philbrook Museum of Art opened Museum Confidential, running through May 6, 2018.

This groundbreaking exhibition, unique to Philbrook, gives visitors the opportunity to observe museum practices, hear stories, and see an unprecedented number of never-before-seen works of art. The format of this exhibition allows Philbrook Director (and Museum Confidential curator) Scott Stulen the opportunity to present a unique, behind-the-scenes experience that illuminates the inner workings of museums, collections and their workers.

The exhibition explores how museums work from the inside out through four participatory sections:

- Museum Mysteries (Research and Investigate)
- The Other 95% (Look Closer)
- DIY Exhibition (Curate a Show)
- Locally-Inspired Installation by Artist-in-Residence Andy DuCett (Work With an Artist)

Museum Mysteries

Every work of art has a story. Often, that story that extends beyond the subject of the work itself. Through Museum Mysteries, visitors join the Philbrook team to investigate and discover the stories, history and complicated issues behind works from the collection.

The Other 95%

The average museum typically shows five percent or less of its collection at any given time. This exhibition reveals hundreds of rarely or never-before-seen items from Philbrook storage through a large-scale, salon-style presentation, including pieces from the Phillips family, design objects, and dozens of paintings and prints.

SCOTT STULEN: Philbrook Director Scott Stulen discusses Museum Confidential. The exhibition is unique to Philbrook and offers a behind-the-scenes experience that illuminates the inner workings of museums, collections and their workers.

DIY Exhibition

See what it takes to be a museum curator. Curating is about making choices. In DIY Exhibition, visitors will learn the considerations that curators must weigh, and then they will make their own choices to create a unique exhibition.

Work With an Artist

Resident artist Andy DuCett takes over a section of the gallery with a site-specific installation titled, "At the Intersection of Everywhere," which playfully illustrates the ongoing relationship between museums and artists. The installation features a working motel lobby, research library, and other elements focused on the everyday objects humans collect and cherish. A nearby portion of the gallery will offer insight into the artist's process by presenting preparatory sketches, photographs and ephemera from DuCett's Minneapolis studio.

Museum Confidential will also feature dozens of scheduled and pop-up programs throughout the run of the show, including an evening with NPR show, Invisibilia, to Tattoo Roulette, where guests can get an artist-designed tattoo. Visitors can chat via Skype with museums around the world, take irreverent Museum Hack tours and learn about the ongoing care of the collection and villa. Every guest will receive an experience punch card, which can unlock access to exclusive experiences, based on frequent visitation. And with the new Philbrook Fridays platform, every weekend starts with late night events and programs at the museum.

"Museums are much more than places to store beautiful objects," says Philbrook Director Scott Stulen. "They're alive and constantly changing, full of stories, history, and collective community experience. They're also a lot of fun."

The Philbrook main campus spans 25 acres of grounds and formal gardens, and features an historic home, as well as a modern museum complex. The satellite location in downtown Tulsa showcases the Philbrook modern, contemporary, and Native American art collections, as well as the Eugene B. Adkins Collection and MINIATURE MUSEUM: Jeff Martin, Philbrook communications manager, works with a miniature museum gallery to illustrate how exhibitions are set up.

New Leadership at Tulsa Spine & Specialty Hospital

With the retirement of Terry Woodbeck, chief executive officer of Tulsa Spine & Specialty Hospital (TSSH), a part of Hillcrest HealthCare System, at the end of the year, Trent Gastineau, TSSH's current chief operating officer, will assume the CEO role.

Woodbeck has served as CEO of TSSH since its inception in 2002 and was instrumental during TSSH's development. Under Woodbeck's leadership, the hospital has established itself as a leading provider of spine care in northeast Oklahoma and has received both the Outstanding Patient Experience and Patient Safety Excellence Awards from Healthgrades, a third party resource that provides comprehensive health care data to help consumers evaluate and compare hospitals.

"We are incredibly grateful for Terry's service to TSSH. His commitment to excellence can be seen throughout TSSH and is felt by each and every patient," says Steve Gaede, M.D., a TSSH founding physician and board chairman. "I join the team at TSSH and all of Hillcrest in congratulating him on his upcoming retirement."

Woodbeck will retire in December.

Gastineau has served as COO at TSSH since 2010. Prior to joining TSSH, he served Houston Hospital for Specialized Surgery and has worked for hospitals in Texas and Oklahoma.

"Trent has the experience and cultural collateral to continue to grow TSSH and its patient experience, services and impact on the Tulsa community," says Kevin Gross, chief executive officer of Hillcrest HealthCare System. "His knowledge of the organization will facilitate a smooth transition."

TSSH, 6901 S. Olympia Ave., was founded in December 2002. It is jointly owned by Hillcrest HealthCare System, the majority owner, and a group of surgical physicians. Hillcrest acquired its interest in 2014. TSSH offers surgical services, diagnostic imaging and pain management. Its services include ENT, general surgery, gynecology, ophthalmology, orthopedics, pain management, podiatry and spine care. TSSH has received both Outstanding Patient Experience and Patient Safety Excellence Awards from Healthgrades, a third party resource that provides comprehensive health care data to help consumers evaluate and compare hospitals.

For information on TSSH and its services, call 918-388-5701.

Senior Star Announces Internal Changes

Senior Star Management Company recently announced the promotion of Anja M. Rogers to chief executive officer. Previously chief operating officer, Rogers now leads the company's customer-focused team in its ongoing mission to provide a community lifestyle that inspires people to embrace senior living.

"Anja has been an integral part of this company for 34 years, and she has led Senior Star as COO for the last four of those years," says Senior Star Principal William Thomas. "Anja has been the major architect of our company culture, and she thoroughly understands this business, its fundamentals, and the strategies and tactics required for success."

Commenting on Rogers' new role, Senior Star Principal Robert Thomas says, "Anja will guide the company's positioning for the future – both in strategic direction and organizational support. Her seniors housing knowledge and experience make Anja the ideal person to lead Senior Star through a successful leadership and organizational transition."

Senior Star also announced a restructuring of its corporate office staff.

"One of our long-time company goals is to maintain a framework that allows for superior communications, sound decisions, diversity of thought and best business practices," says Rogers. "Our new structure will improve Senior Star's ability to quickly and effectively execute our plans for the future."

The following members of Senior Star's management team take on new or expanded roles and report directly to Rogers:

Matt Clifton, who has served as senior vice president and chief financial officer for five years, assumes additional responsibility for acquisitions, development and information technology.

Letitia Jackson has been promoted to senior vice president with responsibility for innovation and programming, marketing outreach initiatives, and fortifying the company culture. Jackson has been with Senior Star for 20 years and most recently served as its vice president, corporate engagement.

John Dornblaser, senior vice president, who has been with Senior Star for 18 years, continues leading the company's strategic planning and also assumes responsibility for human resources, risk management and legal functions.

As a result of these changes, two positions have been eliminated: senior vice president/operations and senior vice president/general counsel.

Hillcrest Partners with Cascia Hall for 'Free Library'

Community leaders have joined forces with students from Cascia Hall's Library Advisory Council to promote literacy in downtown Tulsa through the development of the area's first Little Free Library.

The project has been a labor of love for Cascia Hall's librarian and several students, along with two community spirited landlords, says Ashley Hudgeons, vice president of communications and government relations for Hillcrest HealthCare System.

Hillcrest is especially engaged in this project as a proud "next door neighbor" and champion for the revitalization of this community nestled between historic Route 66 and Cherry Street.

A ceremony officially introducing Tulsans to the new Little Free Library at 12th Street and Rockford Avenue was held in October.

In addition, Hillcrest plans to develop the land in the background of the photo into a community park.

Holland Hall Announces 2017 Distinguished Alumni

The Holland Hall Alumni Association and its board recently honored Dr. Jay Wohlgeomuth (Class of 1988) as its 2017 Distinguished Alumni Award winner and Dr. Kara Bear Butler (Class of 2002) as its 2017 Young Alumni Achievement Award winner.

The Distinguished Alumni Award recognizes an alumnus/a who demonstrates exceptional service on a local, state or national level, exhibits a high degree of character and integrity, exemplifies accomplishment in his/her profession and whose achievements, affiliations and career(s) have honored the legacy of excellence at Holland Hall.

Dr. Jay Wohlgeomuth, M.D. is a senior vice president at R&D Medical and the chief medical officer for Quest Diagnostics, located in San Juan Capistrano, California. Previously, he served as senior vice president and chief healthcare officer at HealthTap, a health information start-up. He serves on the board of directors for the Personalized Medicine Coalition Diagnostic Labs of Oklahoma and The Anne and Henry Zarrow Foundation.

The Young Alumni Achievement Award recognizes the alumnus/a from the last 15 years who excels in his/her profession or pursuit of higher education and has made a significant mark on the community in which he/she lives.

Dr. Kara Butler is associate vice president of health affairs at the University of Tulsa and medical director at the Alexander Health Center and Hurricane Health Clinic. Previously, she was the clinic medical director at the University of Oklahoma Wayman Tisdale Specialty Health Clinic and a program director for the Heart Improvement Project and Youth Services of Tulsa's Outreach Clinic. Butler also served as chief resident in Medicine/Pediatrics at University of Oklahoma School of Community Medicine and created initiatives to provide healthcare and screenings for patients in rural and underserved areas.

Students to Perform at Carnegie Hall

Two Cascia Hall seniors have been chosen to participate in the Honors Performance Series, a program through Carnegie Hall and Sydney Opera House.

Celyn Grigson and Wilson Hoyt were both selected as members of the Carnegie Hall Honors Choir. Hoyt was also accepted for the Sydney Opera House Honors Choir.

Their next step will be to meet with the other winning students in New York City to participate in four days of rehearsal with world-renowned conductors, culminating in a performance on the famous Carnegie Hall stage.

Career Academy Student on Mayor's Youth Council

Career Academy students, like all Tulsa Tech students, work hard to succeed and, ultimately, are responsible for achieving their academic and personal goals. They are required to do the work, complete the assignments and pass the exams in order to thrive. They truly make their own path to success.

Tulsa Tech's Career Academy students spend half of each day earning high school credits in math, science, English, and social studies through a combination of teacher-led instruction and on-line, computerized learning. Students are offered credit recovery or "first time" credit courses, or assistance for GED exam preparation. The remaining half of each day is spent in a CareerTech training course available on Tulsa Tech campuses.

Dyonea Mitchell, a former student at Edison High School, is one of many successful students currently enrolled in the Career Academy.

"By my sophomore year, my grades began to drop, and my GPA was a 2.0," Mitchell says. "Now, some of my classes are college level courses, and I am making perfect grades, so the Career Academy has been a great fit for me."

To further illustrate how well the Career Academy provides a rewarding, yet challenging, learning environment, the current high school senior not only improved her academic performance, she also applied, and was recently appointed to the Tulsa Mayor's Youth Council.

The Tulsa Mayor's Youth Council is a learning organization designed to encourage high school students to become active in the community by participating in local government. Members of the Council get to see firsthand the many faces of city government in action and learn to appreciate how each entity contributes to the city's goals of public safety and quality of life. The selected members also learn about the political process and how youth in our region can have a voice in local government issues.

The daughter of Fran and Tyrone Mitchell had heard about the Mayor's Youth Council and was immediately interested but lacked the confidence to submit her application.

"I was very excited when I found out about the council," says Mitchell. "But I didn't really think I could do something like that. Then my counselor, Miss Orr, visited with me about my strengths as a student and encouraged me to apply."

Kori Orr, counselor at the Career Academy, feels that the most common misperception is these students are often the "bad kids" or "those kids" when in fact, it is usually the complete opposite.

"So many of these students are very talented," Orr says. "They are kinesthetic learners, so they need to be hands-on and in an environment where they can benefit from a little extra one-to-one instruction."

The application process for the Mayor's Youth Council requires interested students to submit a short essay explaining why they want to serve, outlining some of the issues they feel are important to youth in our area. Mitchell didn't have to wait long to see if her counselor's assessment and encouragement would pay off.

"Just a few days after I had submitted my application letter, I was checking my email and discovered that I had been accepted," Mitchell says. "I was so excited and couldn't believe that it happened so fast."

While the focus of the Mayor's Youth Council, of course, is youth, with appointed students selected from various public high schools, private schools, and alternative schools, many of these issues affect everyone in the community, regardless of age.

Mitchell feels she has been given an exceptional opportunity to make a difference and looks forward to working with other youth from across the Tulsa metro area.

"I really feel like with such a diverse group of students from different parts of the community, we have a unique opportunity to really make a difference," Mitchell says. "I feel if we can get the youth in Tulsa more involved, then we will generate more ideas, more solutions and eventually more leaders."

The council began meeting in early October and consists of approximately 20 students. Participants are given exclusive access to the City of Tulsa as they work to develop leadership skills, learn how local government works, and make recommendations based on the research and discussion of topics that affect citizens across the city.

Mitchell is proud of her improved academic performance and extremely honored to have been selected to serve on the Mayor's Youth Council. She is also very quick to point out that without the support of others, including her Career Academy instructors, classmates, and especially her family, none of this would have probably ever happened.

"My parents and my younger sister Jasmine have been the biggest influences in my life," she says. "I would really like to acknowledge them, along with everyone at the Career Academy, and thank them for everything they have done for me."

City of B.A., BAPS Announce Partnership

In October, the City of Broken Arrow and Broken Arrow Public Schools launched a unique and unprecedented joint collaborative effort to develop an environmental enhancement program along portions of the Upper Adams Creek watershed.

The aim of the program is to create an outdoor environmental classroom and ecological training center along a portion of the Upper Adams Creek floodplain corridor adjacent to the Broken Arrow High School. Another goal is to make the corridor more accessible to the general public and more useful for students at the high school.

City and school officials hope to see the program introduce floating wetlands, rain gardens, cascade aerators, fountains, nature preserves, pervious walking trails, specific types of ecological-friendly vegetation and other beneficial features to the area in order to enhance the environment and ecological system while improving the overall water quality of the stream.

“Having an outdoor amenity accessible to our students will provide the opportunities for hands-on engagement in critical STEM (science, technology, engineering, mathematics) areas, particularly

Students and City staff will develop a plan for the land during this semester and begin implementing that plan in the spring semester and continue improving and maintaining the area in the following years.

BAPS Names Teachers of the Year

Broken Arrow Public Schools (BAPS) has announced its 2017-18 Site Teachers of the Year, considered one of the highest honors a teacher can receive.

The selected teachers will go on to submit a portfolio to the BAPS Teacher of the Year Professional Development Committee, a group composed of teachers, administrators and previous Teachers of the Year, in order to be considered for District Teacher of the Year, which will be announced at the annual Star Awards Gala in the spring.

The district winner will go on to represent BAPS in the State Teacher of the Year competition next summer.

Broken Arrow’s 2016-2017 District Teacher of the Year Donna Gradel went on to be named the 2018 Oklahoma Teacher of the Year.

New Subdivision, Additional Traffic Has Homeowners Upset

By BOB LEWIS
Concerned Resident

Construction of a residential subdivision on Broken Arrow’s east side has neighboring homeowners asking for help in relieving what they say is a “terrible situation” that will be made even worse.

City officials led by Michael Skates, director of the Development Services Department, met with residents of the Oak Creek and Oak Creek South additions on Oct. 23 to bring them up to date on the development’s construction status and to discuss their concerns.

The neighborhood is located on Houston (81st) Street, just west of Highway 51. Plans for the subdivision, which is being labeled as a new phase of Oak Creek South, call for construction of more than 100 single-family homes. The problem, homeowners say, is that the only way in and out of that project is through two residential streets that are already overloaded with traffic.

Several residents pointed out that the main route in and out of the addition would be South 31st Street, which they said is “like a parking lot” most mornings because of a major bottleneck where it intersects with Houston Street.

Drivers cutting through the development to avoid the intersection of Houston Street and the Broken Arrow Expressway and numerous school buses only add to the confusion.

“If you assume an average of three cars per household, we are talking about adding more than 300 cars a day to make this situation even worse,” one homeowner said.

Skates said he understands the homeowners’ concerns but that there is nothing, at least for now, that he can do to provide the additional access streets that residents are requesting.

At the City Council’s request, one temporary road has been built to allow heavy construction equipment to directly enter the work zone without traveling through the existing neighborhood, he said. But for a number of reasons, the city cannot make that a permanent street.

Several homeowners pointed to a sizable block of land located immediately west of the housing projects that could provide the room needed to add additional entrances. But Skates said owners of that property have rejected purchase offers and indicate they have no interest in selling at this time.

Skates pointed out that it would take a year or longer for infrastructure work to be completed, new homes to be built and sales to be made. He is hopeful within that time that the landowner might have a change of heart and decide to sell the property.

He also promised to continue looking for additional possibilities.

After the conclusion of the meeting, City Manager Michael Spurgeon said that he would ask city staff personnel to look into the suggestion of one homeowner to add a mid-block traffic signal to the intersection of 31st and Houston streets to help relieve the bottleneck there.

DISTRICT CONSERVES ENERGY

ENVIRONMENTAL AND FINANCIAL IMPACT: From left, Broken Arrow School Board of Education President Steve Allen, BAPS Superintendent Dr. Janet Dunlop and BAPS Energy Specialist Jadon Dykes hold a check for $53,294.45 that the school district recently received for its energy conservation efforts.

Last year, Broken Arrow Public Schools (BAPS) began a partnership with energy conservation company Cenergistic to implement an energy conservation program throughout the district.

Between September 2016 and July 2017, the program has provided BAPS with an estimated cost avoidance of $128,279. Cost avoidance is defined as the value of energy not used and is the total benefit to the district after fees.

The amount of energy conserved during that time period is the equivalent of one of the following: 384 passenger cars not driven for 1 year, 47,315 tree seedlings grown for 10 years or a reduction of 1,845 metric tons of carbon dioxide.

Cenergistic delivers a comprehensive behavioral-based energy conservation program that is backed by technology. Analysts and energy specialists work with BAPS to optimize systems, schedules, and operating procedures to save significant dollars.

Cenergistic has partnered with more than 1,400 schools and organizations across the country who have saved over $4.7 billion with the same program.

As part of the program, Cenergistic provides Jadon Dykes as a full-time energy specialist in Broken Arrow. In his role, he looks into every aspect of utility usage and searches for ways to save energy. The majority of his work is done when buildings are unoccupied, visiting sites at various hours of the day and night to search for opportunities to save.

“Our partnership with Cenergistic has far exceeded our expectations,” BAPS Chief Operating Officer Michelle Bergwall says. “We have saved money through cost avoidance, and we have also learned many things from their experts to prepare us for the future.”

Recently, PSO presented a check for $53,294.45 to the school district as a result of additional savings that BAPS incurred through two PSO energy reduction events.

Strong Talent to Help B.A. to Another Mat Title

Two State Champions Return

By MIKE MOGUIN
Sports Writer

Two state champions and five other state qualifiers from last winter return to wrestle for Broken Arrow. There are some outstanding newcomers too, so, with that said, another championship-filled season appears to be in store on the mat.

Juniors Gavin Potter and Zach Marcheselli are the returning state champs, respectively at 182 and 195 pounds, but are expected to go up a weight class. Potter looks to repeat and Marcheselli will aim for a threepeat.

"They're just big kids that have wrestled since they were young and just super athletic," Broken Arrow coach Shawn Jones says. "Both of them have a head full of confidence. Both are on the football field right now. They'll split time, Potter will go a little at (182) at the first of the year, but 195 and 220 (respectively) are where those two are going to wrestle for us. They are the returning state champions. They both are phenomenal kids and great athletes and really great wrestlers. They're both now juniors and have matured a little bit. Fortunately, we get to have those guys back for two more years."

Senior Caleb Wise returns at 160 pounds after taking third last year. He also took third in 2016.

"Caleb Wise is a two-time state placer. He's taken third, both his sophomore and junior years. He'll be back at 160 pounds and honestly, there is nobody better in the state than Caleb Wise. The one guy who beat him at state last year is from Yukon and he graduated. We always had fits with that kid."

"Jalen Curry (2017 6A state champion at 160) will be back at Choctaw, but we don't know what weight he is going to be at yet,"

Jones says.

Sophomore Bryce Mattioda will also be back, moving up four weight classes.

"He was a freshman last year and placed fourth at 138 pounds. He's going to be wrestling 170 this year. He has grown quite a bit," Jones says. "As a sophomore, he's a starting cornerback for the football team, which you don't see very often."

Other state qualifiers who return are Blake Gonzalez at 120 and Brady Mattioda, older brother of Bryce, at 152.

"Blake Gonzalez is big, more mature," Jones says. "He's a junior instead of a sophomore. I always say that year is a big difference."

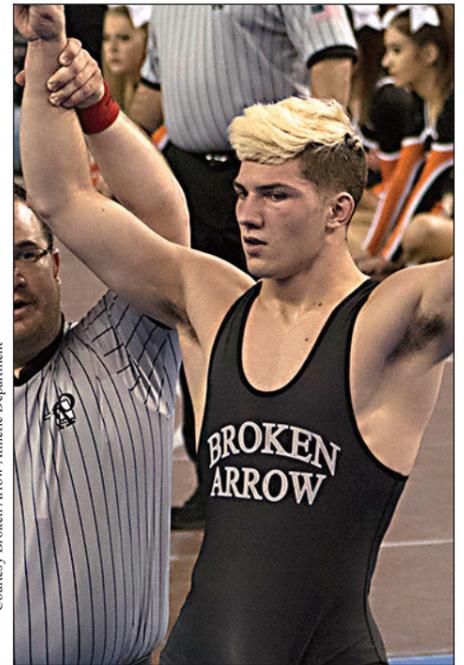

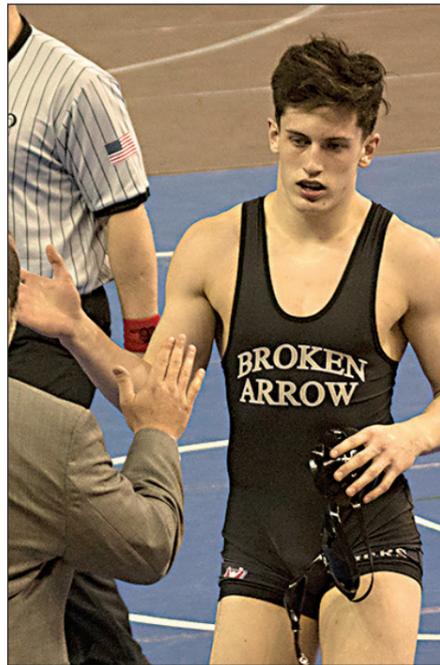

"Brady Mattioda is pretty determined as a senior to get on that podium. He's as good as anyone out there," Jones says. "He beat the guys that went first and second at state last year. He had beaten both of them during the year, we just happen to wrestle him at (145) instead of (152). This year, he'll be a 152-pounder."

Jackson Cockrell qualified at 106 pounds last season but is expected to compete for the 113-pound spot with Blazik Perez.

"He's a phenomenal kid," Jones says of Cockrell. "He went to North Dakota this summer and wrestled in the junior nationals and earned second place at 100 pounds. So, he is a junior national All-American. He is one of the hardest workers in the room, trying to attain himself a position. He's a non-stop, goes everywhere, does everything-type kid."

The newcomers are freshman Jared Hill, who won the 106-pound position last week, and Reece Witcraft, who will be wrestling at 126 or 132. Witcraft was a two-time state runner-up in 5A for Coweta.

"We're super proud of them and think we're going to achieve some things. Jared Hill is a good kid. He's won about everything there is to win," Jones says. "He is a super wrestler. He's been competitive in about everything that there is out there. I'm really excited to put him in that black singlet and showcase him. We have another kid, Blazik Perez that is also just a little stud."

POTTER AND MARCHESELLI: Gavin Potter, left, and Zach Marcheselli hope to win state wrestling championships again for Broken Arrow in February.

"(Witcraft) is a stud in his own right," Jones says. "He was a cadet national Greco champion this summer. He's going to be a pretty good deal."

Jones expects his squad, Sand Springs and Choctaw to be the top three again.

"It's a new season. It's new maturity," he says. "Our main focus the last several years has been not to be out of the top two spots in anything – dual state regionals or state. We got somewhat of a tradition established out here, and our kids know how important it is individually; they know how important it is team-wise. We're Broken Arrow! We're Broken Arrow wrestling. We don't just compete statewide, we try to compete nationally."

"For our kids to try to attain what their goals are, they got to have success in the state as well as in the big national tournaments," Jones says.

TU Soccer an Underrated Commodity in Tulsa

By GLENN HIBDON
GTR Sports Writer

Sometimes unappreciated by the public and overlooked by the media, there is nothing wrong with the University of Tulsa men's soccer program that winning the NCAA championship won't cure.

The most successful men's team sport on campus has produced 242 victories in 23 seasons under head coach Tom McIntosh, including 10 conference championships and 10 NCAA tournament appearances. However, the Golden Hurricane is still waiting on the golden moment when TU soccer becomes a household word.

McIntosh, a true believer, says he and his program are dreaming of the day they finally reach the pinnacle.

"We always put ourselves in position to win our conference championship," says McIntosh, whose team has won three straight American Athletic Conference tournament titles. "That goes a long way for our program to take the next step to get to the College Cup and win the national title."

The Hurricane has played in league tournament championship games nine times in the last 11 years, earning the program national respect among coaches. Seventeen players have been drafted or gone on to play professionally since 2004, and Tulsa reached a No. 2 national ranking in 2010.

TU was named national Team of the Week in September after beating Santa Clara and top-ranked Stanford on the road. The performance earned a No. 20 ranking, the Hurricane's first time in the polls since 2014. Except for the team's die-hard fans, there was little in the way of fanfare.

"Sometimes the university in general seems overlooked athletically and maybe a little academically," says McIntosh. "We're in the middle of the country and Oklahoma doesn't get much publicity. Our program is overlooked, but we always play a difficult non-conference schedule. Some things we control and some we don't, but very few programs in the country can say they've done what we have on a consistent basis."

McIntosh says his team does have support within the university, but various factors limit soccer's visibility and appeal to prospective fans.

"Oklahoma is a big football state for high schools and colleges and we fall in the same time period," he says. "We have to play a lot of Saturdays and that leads to limited press coverage. The end of our season comes at the beginning of basketball. We (NCAA soccer coaches) are working on trying to play the same amount of games but spread them over the fall and spring semesters. It would be better for the athletes if we did that."

Standing 4-5-1 in mid-October, McIntosh says he's disappointed in his team's 2017 record, but the strength of schedule is second among 205 soccer playing schools. Tulsa has fallen to a No. 39 RPI rating, but like any sport and any team, victories make everything brighter.

"Very few teams have gone to the places we've played," says McIntosh. "We understand that our road is more difficult than most. The ACC schools play in the No.1 conference and play all their non-conference games at home. All the teams in their league are good.

"We used to have to play guarantee games, but teams never returned them. We don't have to do that anymore. Big teams come here like Virginia and Creighton, but fans don't turn out like they should. Arguably, along with tennis, we have the highest ranked opponents come to Tulsa than any other sport."

Despite the tough slate, McIntosh says his current team is a good one and still has a chance to make some noise when postseason tournaments roll around.

"I think we're pretty well balanced," says McIntosh, who noted that nine different players have scored goals this season. "We don't have a guy who scores tons of goals, the guy who carries the load, but we're balanced and deep. We've played 24 different players and this is one of my more competitive teams. We are a very good passing team and pretty athletic overall. Our chemistry is very good since we came back for fall camp. We have guys on the team who have won three conference championships, so we have experience."

Maybe so, but the one experience McIntosh's players don't have is tasting the champagne of a national title celebration. He says the solution is simple. Win more games.

"We need to have a little bit more regular season success. That would put us in position (for an at-large NCAA berth)," says the coach. "Teams with high RPI rankings play at home, and we want to put ourselves in position to play a few more home games."

PLAYING TOUGH: Tulsa soccer plays a tough schedule and defeated Stanford, the number-one team in the nation, earlier this season.

TOM MCINTOSH: The successful coach is in his 23rd season at TU.

"That would give us a chance to rest. A lot of times in conference tournaments you end up playing on Fridays and Sundays. The tournaments are out of town and you have to fly and travel. You're on the road on Thursdays and sometimes your team can be exhausted. If you do a better job in the regular season you get another home game or two. If you get past the second (NCAA) round it evens out, everybody gets a week between games."

To worry about that, Tulsa has to get there first. McIntosh says his team's 2-0 victory over No. 1 Stanford infused confidence and displayed how TU can compete with the top teams. However, a sub .500 record won't qualify for NCAA play. He says teams must have an RPI rating in the low 20s. "We control everything we need to do in order to achieve our goals," McIntosh says. "We have a lot of things going for us as far as strength of schedule, big wins and no bad losses. Every team on our schedule, except one, is a team that will be considered for the NCAA tournament."

"Now we have to improve our record. We'll probably have to get two or three games above .500. We need to get to the point where we can compete for the national title. We've achieved some good things but not the ultimate."

If anything will force Green Country to sit up and take notice of University of Tulsa soccer, sweeping the College Cup should be the answer.

Victory Christian Celebrates Volleyball Title

By MIKE MOGUIN
Sports Writer

Victory Christian overcame adversity to capture a state championship in volleyball back on Oct. 17 in Sapulpa. The Lady Conquerors were one point away from defeat three times and prevented it by scoring the point they needed. Eventually, they would score the points that would win the match.

Victory would win the Class 5A title, by beating Mount St. Mary, 3-2 (25-23, 11-25, 18-25, 25-21, 18-16). The championship was the second sports championship in school history. The first came from the boys' basketball program in 2000.

The Lady Conquerors, ranked No. 5 throughout the year while finishing with a record of 29-10, won the first set of the match but had their backs up against the wall after dropping the next two. They bounced back to win the fourth. They fought off elimination in the last set with a combined seven kills by middle blockers Jaxie Wakley (sophomore) and Gem Summers (junior).

"We really had to come together," Wakley says. "In the two sets we lost – two and three – we didn't have the enthusiasm that we should have to win the game. Without enthusiasm, you won't win. In the fourth and fifth set, we really had the enthusiasm to be able to win the game and get to a different level."

"I felt proud of my team for winning, because we had never won a volleyball state championship and we've been to state ever since I've been here," Summers says.

"It just felt very rewarding because we would practice hard every day, along with our conditioning," Summers says.

Victory had been to the 4A state semi-finals the previous two years. The Lady Conquerors had used that fact in the offseason for motivation. The program has also been to state in volleyball for 14 of the past 15 years. It also played in the state championship game in 2007 and lost.

"Our players knew of that tradition and knew they could be the first team to win the whole thing. With that attitude, it drove them," Victory coach Dan Donohue says.

"That was neat to see as the coach.

Donohue became the head coach in 2006 and was an assistant for one year beforehand.

Victory had a tough stretch at the end of the regular season as it lost three of its last five games.

"Right before state, we had a losing streak. But, we pushed through it and worked it out," Summers says.

Wakley and Summers led the Lady Conquerors in kills throughout the season. Wakley totaled 489 kills, an average of 4.6 per game, and 81 blocks. Summers produced 207 kills, with a hitting efficiency of 0.31, and 26 blocks. Ruthie Udoumoh was also a factor for Victory with 51 blocks.

While 25 points are needed to win a set, a team only needs to reach 15 if the match goes to a fifth set. But a two-point cushion is the minimum required to finish.

Three times Mt. St. Mary was one point away from taking the title with leads of 14-13, 15-14 and 16-15. In each instance, Victory prevented it by getting the point needed to keep the match going. They eventually got the points needed to finish it off, 18-16.

"I'm like, 'okay, we need to get this right now. We can do it. Let's just play smart defense. Let's be the best we can be,'" Wakley says.

Wakley and Summers combined seven kills in the final set.

"We had to take advantage of it," Wakley says. "We couldn't be on our heels. We had to attack. They had it three times. We had to take advantage of this one time and just put the ball down or just play smart and let them make the mistake."

"Fighting off the three match points, they never panicked," Donohue says. "They never looked worried. It's like, 'okay, we're going to get the next point. We're going to eventually get this.' Just that resolve to carry us through the rough spots, and it carried us through to win the thing."

"When we came back to school, everybody was congratulating us, and it was just good knowing that it was a big deal to everybody for winning a second championship at the school," Summer says.

The girls were recognized and honored the following Sunday during a service at the church, Victory Christian Center, which is connected to the school.

"I liked it," Summers says. "It was nice, because it was not only people from our school that go to the church. It was like a community congratulating us on the way."

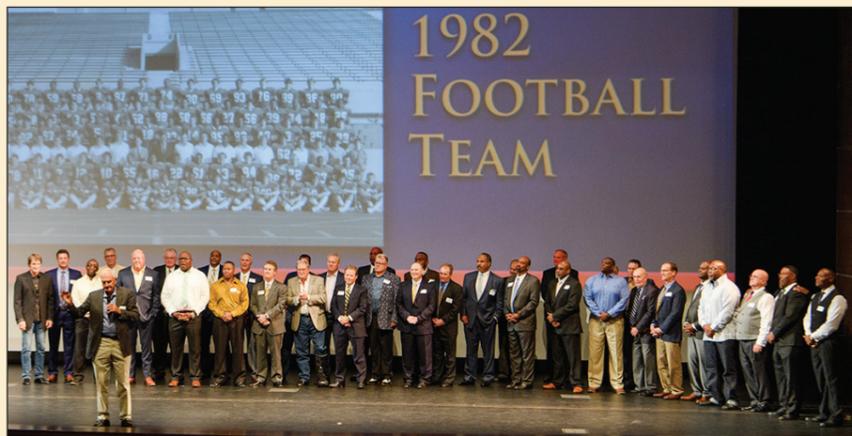

Victory only loses one senior, Olivia Stenzel, to graduation. Wakley, Summers, Udoumoh and the rest of the team will be back next year.

"We are a very young team, and we have got a great opportunity for the next couple of years to carry through and gain a couple of more titles," Donohue says. "This team has been so determined. The spot in the middle of the season where we didn't play so well almost served as a good thing for us. They used that to drive themselves to get better and carry us to the state tournament."

GREAT TEAM: The 1982 Tulsa Golden Hurricane football team was honored at the recent TU Athletic Hall of Fame event. In their sixth year under head coach John Cooper, the Golden Hurricane compiled a 10-1 record (6-0 against conference opponents) and won the Missouri Valley Conference championship. The team defeated Big Eight Conference opponents Oklahoma State (25-15) and Kansas (20-15). Head coach John Cooper was later inducted into the College Football Hall of Fame.

Boxer Eddie Oakes Turns Injury Into Opportunity

By JULIE WENGER WATSON

After close to a decade on the rugby field, Eddie Oakes knows a thing or two about the downside of contact sports. In fact, it was a torn ACL from a match in Memphis that first landed this 30-year-old Tulsan in the boxing gym three years ago. What started out as a way to rehabilitate his knee post surgery has now turned into a serious pursuit of the “sweet science.”

“I’d always loved boxing since I was a kid, but I’d never really participated in the sport,” Oakes recalls. “After I tore my ACL, it was my opportunity to get into something different. I wanted to try my hand at it and see where it took me. Once I started sparring, I fell in love with it.”

Oakes is currently preparing for an amateur fight on Nov. 17 at Greenwood Cultural Center in downtown Tulsa. On top of his full-time job as a building engineer, Oakes trains at the Engine Room Boxing Gym in the Pearl District six days a week. Soon, he’ll be adding an early morning run into the mix in anticipation of his upcoming match.

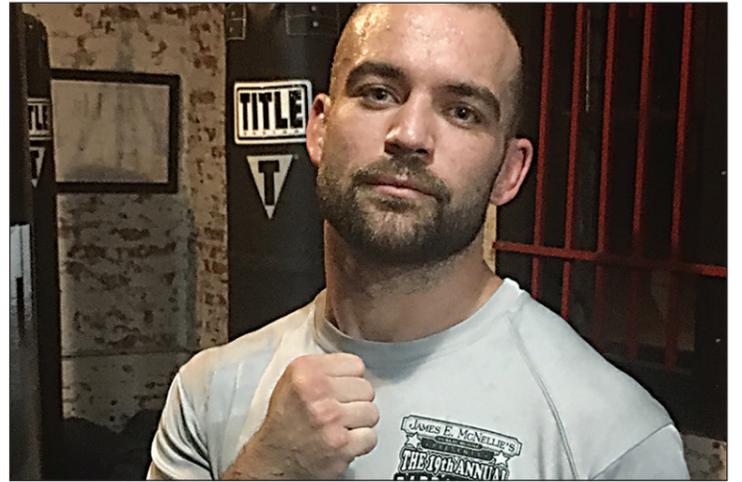

“I’ve always loved physical sports, and I really love the mental aspect of boxing,” he explains. “The biggest thing to me is when you’re in the ring, and you’re hurting or exhausted – or both – and your body is telling you to quit and your mind is telling you to quit, but you just keep going. It’s a great feeling, just the mental fortitude it takes to be able to compete in a sport like boxing.”

While Oakes isn’t sure where the sport will lead him, for now, he’s taking it one fight at a time.

“I was almost 28 years old when I first walked into the gym,” he says. “I never really had any expectations of fighting for a world title or anything like that. I just wanted to see how far I could take it and how well I could do with it. My whole goal behind it was to gain a better understanding of the sport.”

Engine Room Fight Night V
Friday, Nov. 17. Doors at 5 p.m. Fights begin at 6 p.m.

Olga Morgan's Accomplishments Are 'Vydayushciysya'

From Russia to Oklahoma: A Fascinating Success Story

By BOB LEWIS
Contributing Writer

The tongue-twister in the headline is Russian for "outstanding," a word that reflects the accomplishments of a woman who came to the United States from that country and has earned a place as one of the most credentialed professionals in Oklahoma's financial services industry.

After successfully completing nine different business exams – eight of them on the first try – the controller of the First National Bank & Trust Co. of Broken Arrow proudly claims the title of "Olga Morgan, CPA, CFE, CITP."

To put all those letters into the proper perspective, CPA is short for Certified Public Accountant. CFE designates her as a Certified Fraud Examiner. Her most recent designation, CITP, shows she has qualified as a Certified Information Technology Professional.

"I have a perfect career balance," she jokes. "There are 10 letters in my name and 10 after it."

Morgan's rise to the top of her profession is "a true American success story," according to Gregory Graham, First National's Board chairman and CEO.

"Olga is a tremendous individual and a tremendous asset to this bank. She has worked very hard to get where she is today and is a terrific role model for anyone who wonders if they will ever be able to make it in today's highly competitive marketplace," he says.

Born in Kazan, a city about 500 miles east of Moscow, Morgan earned a bachelor's degree in mathematics and a master's degree in applied mathematics (computer science) from Kazan Federal University and worked for a year as a computer programmer.

She came to the U.S. in 2002, married Bill Morgan, a long-time travel agent and financial investor, and later went to work for what is now Central Bank of Oklahoma.

Despite her university degrees, she says she realized further education was needed if she was to achieve her goal of becoming a Certified Public Accountant. So

OLGA MORGAN

When asked to identify the biggest challenge she faced in relocating from Russia to Oklahoma, Morgan again flashed her keen sense of humor by saying, "learning the language. I thought I spoke English well when I came to this country, but Okie English is different from what I was taught in school. It was almost like learning an entirely new language. But I caught on pretty quickly."

While admittedly uncomfortable in the spotlight, Morgan says she doesn't mind telling her story in hopes it might prove to others that if you are willing to work for it, anything is possible.

"Persistence really does pay off," she says. "I had to keep telling myself 'you can watch TV or go out with friends when you get where you want to go.' That kept me focused in the classroom and on the job. I still try to go the extra mile, because it isn't crowded there. Anything I can do to make a better version of me, I want to do it."

Away from the bank, she and her husband are travel enthusiasts. She said she has been back to Russia a few times, but her real love is visiting Spain, Italy, Great Britain and parts of Europe they haven't seen before.

As a person responsible for focusing on the "big picture" in her job, Morgan says she can't help but wonder what things would be like in the biggest picture of all if Russia and the United States could put aside differences and truly work together for the good of the planet.

"I would love to see it," she notes. "Both countries have such terrific power, it is hard to imagine all the good things that could be accomplished."

Winter is an Economical Time for Tree Care

We B Trees Owner Tim Nall Says Prices Go Down During Colder Months

By BRANDON SCHMITZ
Contributing Writer

Certified Arborist Tim Nall created his tree care company in part to break away from the competition. Whereas many of the tree services in Tulsa specialize in removal, We B Trees focuses primarily on preservation.

Established in 1995 by Nall and his wife, Barbara, We B Trees boasts a plant health care program that covers all aspects of tree maintenance, including trimming, cabling and bracing.

"We've got climbers, bucket trucks, loaders, you name it," Nall says. "We can do anything from the smallest job to the largest job."

According to Nall, these last few months of the year are the ideal time for homeowners and business owners to remove dead wood from their trees. Additionally, he suggested the removal of any unwanted branches.

"You could take out branches like the one over the child's swing set or the one over the house," Nall says. "Anything that's not desirable for whatever reason, whether it be for the health of the tree or the safety of the people."

Root pruning is best saved for either fall or winter, too.

"It would need to be done if the tree has girdling roots or if there are undesirable roots in the yard that you're hitting with the mower," Nall says. "You always want to prune roots when there are either no leaves on the tree or if leaves are falling off."

TIM AND BARBARA NALL: The owners of We B Trees have been recognized by the Better Business Bureau for excellence in ethics in the marketplace.

Winter in particular is ideal for maintenance such as cabling and bracing, for the trees are going to be dormant.

"They're not going to have any leaves on them, so you're not taking away from any photosynthetic activity," Nall says. "Just about anything that can be done to a tree, winter is probably the best time to do it."

As far as We B Trees as a service is concerned, the main difference between fall and winter is the rate at which the company charges.

"Normally the rates are a little bit cheaper in the winter because everybody's slower," Nall says. "If you know you need to do the work and you're not on a timetable, then why do it in November when you can do it in December for a better rate?"

Home and business owners' knowledge on how to care for their trees is generally limited. Nall suggested that, if nothing else, they should have a professional look at their trees and offer some advice.

Speaking of professionals, perhaps the most sure-fire way to determine whether a company offering their services is reputable is by calling the Better Business Bureau of Tulsa, of which We B Trees is a member.

Nall has watched the average home or business owner make their fair share of mistakes when tending to their trees, chief among them being the types of cuts they make.

"If there's a difference in price, then there's probably going to be a difference in the quality of work," he says. "I guess people sometimes consider trees like they would grass in that they don't think it really matters who cuts it; but you can really make bad cuts on trees that really affect how it grows in the future. The whole idea of the certified arborist is that you're hiring a professional, and he's going to be a little more expensive."

Joe Robson Honored by Home Builders

Tulsa-based builder and developer Joe Robson has received the National Housing Center's 2017 Exemplary Service to Home Building Award. Robson served on the leadership team of the National Association of Home Builders' Board of Directors for five years and was NAHB Chairman in 2009.

"This award was established to recognize individuals for outstanding and commendable accomplishments in service to the housing industry," said C. Kent Conine, chairman of the National Housing Center Board of Governors, which administers the awards. "The contributions of these honorees have had a broad impact on new construction and home building."

These accomplishments may include extensive leadership in builder associations and housing-related service at the local, state and national levels; development of market enhancements related to such concerns as housing finance or regulation; or other contributions that have a broad impact on new construction and home building.

Other recipients of the 2017 award include Brian Catalde from El Segundo, California; Gerald Kosmenschky from Southgate, Michigan; Jean MacDonald from Austin, Texas; Ted Schlossman from Dallas; and Wayne Stetson from Arlington, Virginia.

BUSINESS & PEOPLE NOTES

FIRST STATE CELEBRATION

CONGRATULATIONS: Sid Shupack of First State Investment Advisors congratulates colleague Matthew Redmond who was recently appointed vice president of the firm. Redmond also recently became a CFA Chartholder. The event was held at a First State Open House at the firm's Tulsa office in October.

Schnake Turnbo Frank, a strategic communications and management consulting firm with offices in Tulsa and Oklahoma City, has announced the recent election of Steve Turnbo as chairman of the Oklahoma Judicial Nominating Commission (JNC), effective immediately.

TURNBO

In this role, Turnbo will conduct all meetings and business of the JNC during the one-year chairman term. Turnbo is only the second non-attorney to be appointed to this position. The only other non-attorney to serve as chairman was Lowe Runkle, the first chair of the JNC in 1969. The chairman is annually elected by the JNC sitting commission members.

"We are so proud of the work Steve does not only for the firm, but in the community as well," said Becky Frank, partner, chairman and CEO at Schnake Turnbo Frank. "He is a great example of a leader and will serve Oklahomans well in his new role as Chairman of the Oklahoma Judicial Nominating Commission."

Turnbo's six-year appointment as a sitting commission member of the JNC began Oct. 5, 2013 and will end Oct. 5, 2019.

Hope Forsyth, a student at The University of Tulsa College of Law, has been selected as the college's Oklahoma Bar Association (OBA) Outstanding Student in 2017. Annually, each law school in the state selects a graduating student to receive the award at the OBA meeting in November.

"I'm honored and excited to be selected as TU's representative for this great honor," says Forsyth. "I greatly appreciate the stellar education, mentorship and opportunities I have received throughout both my law and undergraduate education at TU."

Forsyth is the executive editor of the Tulsa Law Review, a student member of the Council Oak/Johnson-Sontag Inn of Court and a member of Phi Delta Phi. She has earned eight CALI Excellence for the Future Awards for the highest grade in various classes and the George and Jean Price Award for legal reasoning, research and writing.

During her time at TU, Forsyth has gained experience at multiple levels of the federal court system through internships for Chief Judge Gregory K. Frizzell, former Magistrate Judge T. Lane Wilson and Magistrate Judge Paul J. Cleary, all of the Northern District of Oklahoma. In the spring of 2018, Forsyth will extern for Tenth Circuit Senior Judge Stephanie K. Seymour.

Forsyth's law review comment, "Mutually Assured Protection: Dmitri Shostakovich and Russian Influence on American Copyright Law," will be published in the Tulsa Law Review Spring 2018 issue. Prior to law school, her examination of the historical and current use of the word "forum" was published in Princeton University Press' Digital Keywords: A Vocabulary of Information Society and Culture.

Forsyth grew up in Cushing, where her father practices law. She earned a bachelor's degree magna cum laude in communication and media studies with minors in English and philosophy from The University of Tulsa.

Tulsa Regional Chamber has announced the promotion of Kuma Roberts to the role of executive director of talent attraction, retention and Mosaic. Roberts was previously appointed interim executive director in April. Before that, Roberts served as the Chamber's program manager for education. In that capacity, she drove engagement between the Tulsa business community and area school districts.

ROBERTS

In her new role, Roberts will direct the Chamber's workforce development efforts, including the areas of training and degree attainment, as well as Mosaic, the Chamber's diversity business council.

Roberts is a native Tulsan who graduated from Booker T. Washington High School and went on to study English and theater at the University of Tulsa. Prior to joining the Chamber staff, Roberts worked at Volunteers of America, where she developed her desire to work in a community betterment capacity.

In addition to her Chamber work, Roberts serves on the Leadership Tulsa board and is the education co-chair for the Tulsa Area United Way Women's Leadership Council. In June, Roberts was appointed to the mayor's inaugural African American Affairs Commission. She is on the program committee for LEAD North and a graduate of Leadership Tulsa Class 51.

Ruslan Ilyushenko has joined the Broken Arrow-based Oseco team as vice president of manufacturing. With over 17 years of industry experience, Ilyushenko will lead manufacturing operations for Oseco.

ILYUSHENKO

Ilyushenko received his Bachelor of Science in Economics and Finance from the University of Tulsa in 1999. He went on to receive his Master of Business Administration from Oklahoma State University in 2013.

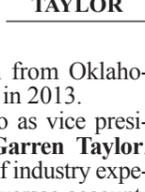

Also joining Oseco as vice president - finance is Garren Taylor. With over 10 years of industry experience, Taylor will oversee accounting and internet technology operations within the Oseco organization.

TAYLOR

Taylor received his Bachelor of Business Administration in Accounting from Baylor University in 2004 and became a CPA in 2007. He went on to receive his Master of Business Administration from Oklahoma State University in 2014.

Lloyd Landreth has been honored with the 2018 "Best Lawyers" distinction. Best Lawyers is the oldest and most respected national, peer-review publication in the legal profession.

LANDRETH

Landreth, a resident of Jenks, practices with the GableGotwals law firm and was recognized for his expertise in the areas of natural resources law and litigation-environmental. GableGotwals is a full-service law firm of more than 90 attorneys representing a diversified client base in Oklahoma, the Southwest and across the nation. The firm has offices in Tulsa, Oklahoma City and San Antonio, Texas.

AVB Bank announces the hiring of Jody Manning and his election to the position of executive vice president, finance. Manning will serve on the bank's executive management team.

MANNING

Manning has more than 20 years of experience in the financial industry as both a controller and auditor.

"I'm excited for the opportunity to work at a bank so deeply rooted in state history, serving the community through innovative banking solutions and traditional personal service," says Manning. "AVB demonstrates a unique blend of the traditional customer experience of banking, along with the ever-changing world of 'on-the-go' banking services."

Manning went to McAlister High School before attending Oklahoma Baptist University, where he received his bachelor's degree in Accounting. Since 2012, he has served as a board member of the Oklahoma Accountancy Board. Manning and his family reside in Tulsa.

Sparks Reed Architecture and Interiors has hired Tulsa architect Tyler Sappington.

SAPPINGTON

Sappington brings to Sparks Reed an in-depth knowledge of three-dimensional printing and milling, a skill he also shares with Tulsa's Fab Lab as an advisory committee member and volunteer. Developments in this emerging field fuel his bullish outlook on the industry's future.

A Tulsa native and Holland Hall graduate, Sappington worked at two other Tulsa architectural firms before coming to Sparks Reed.

Sparks Reed Architecture and Interiors was founded in 2011 by Gary Sparks, Jill Selman, and David Reed. These three have worked together on private and public architectural and interior projects valued at more than $500 million. To learn more about the firm and its past projects, visit sparksreed.com.

Governor Mary Fallin has appointed Dr. Lori McGinnis-Madland to serve as a commissioner for the Oklahoma Commission on Children and Youth (OCCY). McGinnis-Madland will serve for a minimum of two years and work with 18 other commissioners who will work to develop and improve services to the children and youth of Oklahoma.

McGinnis-Madland serves as the president and chief executive officer of Street School located in Tulsa, a position she has held since 2003. Prior to Street School she was a field coordinator for the Oklahoma Technical Assistance Center and also began alternative education programs for Sand Springs Public Schools. Early in her career, she was a special education teacher at Sand Springs Public Schools.

McGinnis-Madland has a doctorate in educational administration from Oklahoma State University.

Tulsa's Sophian Plaza a Popular Residential Choice

River View Apartments Reflect An Era of Luxurious Amenities

At 1502 S. Frisco Ave., Tulsa's very first high-rise apartment building sits serenely, overlooking the Arkansas River. It was built by developer Harry J. Sophian and probably financed by his brother, Kansas City physician Dr. Al Sophian.

The Sophian Plaza has a larger, more elaborate look-alike sister: the Kansas City Sophian. The Kansas City big sister is two floors higher with a more elaborate ornamental exterior.

Both buildings were designed by the Kansas City architectural firm of Shepherd and Wiser. The Tulsa Sophian Plaza was completed in 1926, several years after its Kansas City sister.

The Sophian Plaza reflects an era of luxurious amenities when elegance was important. The building staff included a valet, a porter, a gardener, garage attendants and laundry maids. There was a separate servants' entrance and a bell and buzzer system to summon the servants. Originally, no children or pets were allowed. Its 45 apartments are a mix of five-room efficiencies and seven-room suites, which have three baths. Most units had hardwood floors and crown moldings. In this H-shaped building, the units are arranged along a double loaded central corridor with the most popular ones facing the river on the west.

The main lobby harkens back to the New York Waldorf Astoria Palm Room décor with walls of yellow Kasta marble and black York Fossil base. The floor is white Italian marble with black York Fossil squares set in a checker board design.

The exterior of the eight-story Sophian Plaza is clad in a dark red brick highlighted by double hung wood windows with muntined upper sashes and limestone highlights and detail. The central main entrance is approached by a circle drive. The lobby/lounge overlooks a large lawn, which is terraced down to a pool and croquet court. Tenant garages are concealed and tucked into the hillside.

The Sophian Plaza's north and south wings are faced in limestone at the first floor. This treatment terminates in a carved floral frieze capped by dentil molding. At the north and south wings are arched windows with limestone rope surrounds and central keystones. Bas-relief baluster panels occur below the windows at the rear elevation.

FIRST HIGH RISE: Built in 1926, the Sophian Plaza, 1502 S. Frisco Ave., was Tulsa's first high-rise apartment building. The building's western views of the Arkansas River have helped it to maintain popularity as a residential property. It currently is a condominium facility.

On the south is an open recessed utility stairwell, a common practice in the 20s. A series of limestone arched plaques below small finials surround the parapet at the top of the building. These become a strong repeating band at the gabled front of the north and south wings.

Following the stock market crash of 1929, Harry Sophian's two apartment buildings went through years of low occupancy and hard times. He died in 1945. Today, Tulsa's Sophian Plaza is a condominium facility. Its units are popular enough to justify a waiting list for ownership and occupancy. Exterior façade and interior common areas continue to be well-maintained. The Sophian Plaza is another example of how Tulsa respects and values its past.

Tulsa History: Why Downtown's Streets Are Skewed

By CHARLIE CANTRELL
Editor At Large

Ever notice how all those downtown streets encapsulated in the inner dispersal loop are slanted precisely 34-degrees off true north? Why are they skewed compared to the rest of Greater Tulsa? To understand, one needs to go back to when Green Country was an uninterrupted expanse of plush prairie grasses and hardwood forest.

After the Civil War, much of the tall grass prairie was known as Indian Territory, and what was destined to become northern Texas, Oklahoma and much of Kansas was opened to railroad right of way by the federal government. Rail lines running south from the transcontinental lines of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe and the Union Pacific were needed to transport cattle to growing urban markets like Kansas City and Chicago. Demand for rail lines continued growing as the post civil war cattle industry spread across Green Country.

Slow, cumbersome cattle drives northward to market centers became a thing of the past, replaced by the more rapid transporting capabilities of the mighty Iron Horse. Railroads were like blood vessels to the Tall Grass Prairie, bringing in the lifeblood of new settlers and exporting their agrarian products into the heart of growing urban markets.

In 1871, the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad (A&P) conducted a survey plotting a course through what was to become Tulsa in hopes of bringing rail service into burgeoning cattle country. But due to financial challenges, the actual construction of the rail line was halted approximately 60 miles northeast in the town of Vinita.

Finally in 1882, the A&P reorganized into a new entity: the St Louis-San Francisco Railway, forever to be known as the Frisco Railroad. Solicitation for contractors to build the new rail line began, and a contract was awarded to Harry Constantine Hall, an experienced railway contractor who helped build the famous transcontinental Union Pacific Railroad, completed in 1869.

Most Tulsans probably won't recognize the name Harry C. Hall or that of his younger brother, James Monroe Hall, who soon joined Harry to help carry out the work of completing the Frisco rail line south from Vinita to the Arkansas River. Yet, these two historic figures through force of will, ingenuity and good old frontier gumption were instrumental in determining the location and birth of the City of Tulsa.

The Hall Brothers were like other early settlers who came to Indian Territory in search of a foothold in the vast expanse of territory. They were multi-skilled, resourceful, energetic and in search of opportunity. But they differed from many of the less refined characters drawn to Indian Territory in that they were personable, mild-mannered, reasonably well-educated, ambitious family men, with what turned out to be keen judgment and foresight.

After receiving the Frisco railroad contract, Harry recruited his brother, known to all as J.M., to help him corral the often-rowdy construction crew. In the spring of 1882, the building of the Frisco Railroad out of Vinita began in earnest. Although J.M. was mild mannered and slight of built, his personable approach and friendly countenance somehow succeeded in keeping the raucous work crew focused on the task at hand.

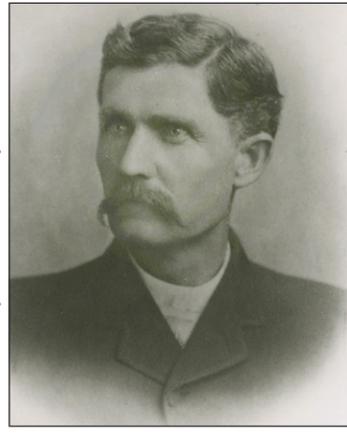

Construction progressed quickly, soon crossing the Verdigris River and continuing south. During the last leg, the brothers searched ahead along the grading stakes of the survey line for the optimum location for a depot. Establishing a depot in the heart of cattle country was the primary purpose of the rail line. The brothers understood the location of the depot would become the commercial center of the region. It would be the destination of cattle drives from the many area ranches. Wherever a depot was built, commerce and eventually a community would likely follow. The two entrepreneurs planned to return to their first love: that of successful merchants by building a trading post near the depot. They believed becoming merchants would offer more financial stability and enhance the prospects of family life. Both men had left their families behind in pursuit of the opportunity afforded them by the railroad contract.

A burgeoning population of cowboys, farmers, ranchers, railroad workers, and most importantly, Native American tribes made up the increasingly diverse population of Indian Territory. The region needed a trading post, and as railroad contractors, the Hall brothers had positioned themselves to know exactly where the trains would eventually stop and therefore where best to locate their planned enterprise.

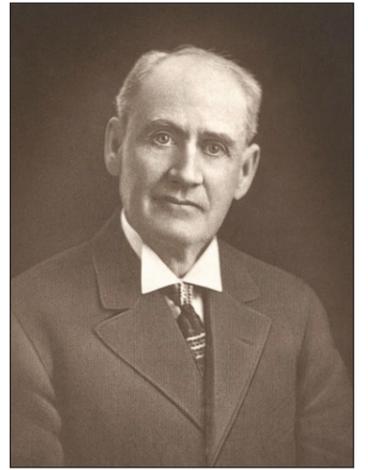

It's easy to imagine why they chose a location in the fertile Arkansas River basin on Creek Nation land for the depot. Not only were nearby large cattle ranches poised with market bound herds of long-horn cattle, but the sandy loam soil awash with Blue Stem and Buffalo Grass was perfect for farming, and close by was abundant hardwood forest for lumber. Also, less than a third of a mile to the north was the convergence of the Creek, Cherokee and Osage nations. A little farther west were the Pawnee and Sac & Fox Nations.

Harry Hall's insistence that the depot be located on Creek Nation land meant less hassle when it came to restrictions that other tribes imposed on non-Indian residents. The Creeks were ahead of other tribes in the region when it came to assimilation with the influx of white settlers. Therefore, the chosen location offered more potential for a white settlement to succeed.

HARRY CONSTANTINE HALL: Had he lived to see Tulsey Town grow into a thriving metropolis, Harry Hall would likely be remembered as the founding father of modern Tulsa. Instead, due to longevity his younger brother J.M. Hall holds claim to that title.

JAMES MONROE HALL: After the death of brother, Harry, J.M. continued pursuing their dream of a city on the prairie. Evidence of his success is modern day Tulsa.

By coincidence, the location the two brothers chose for the depot was within a short buggy ride of the Council Oak Tree where 46 years earlier the Loachapoka Tallasi people of the Muscogee Indians (called Creeks by white settlers) had settled after their long, torturous journey on the infamous Trail Of Tears.

The establishment of the Frisco Railroad Depot began the history that shaped a little prairie settlement once known as Tulsey Town into "America's Most Beautiful City," "The Magic Empire" or "The Oil Capital of the World." Take your pick.

But wait. What about those skewed streets?

J.M. knew that to have a town, one must first have streets. When the railroad grading crew showed up to prepare the grounds for the depot construction, he directed two streets be graded south of the depot location. One grade was a two-block-long, eighty-foot-wide swath to serve as Main Street. It ran perpendicular to the newly completed rail line while the other street, the one dubbed First Street, ran parallel to the tracks. First Street connected to Main Street to form a T intersection. The Frisco rail line was not true north thus neither was Tulsa's first two streets. The direction of streets to follow was set and that is how early downtown Tulsa got skewed.

Even if the early grid of Tulsa streets was not laid out true north, everything else was right on track thanks in large part to the Hall brothers' insistent focus on creating a civilized, family-friendly community centered around education, opportunity, commerce and faith as the governing forces serving as counterpoints to the all too often turbulence of frontier life.

Soon to follow were the Hall & Co. Store, the Presbyterian Mission School, a two-story hotel named Tulsa House, the Archer Store, and the Perryman Store. As anticipated by the brothers, these enterprises sprung up in the next five years close to the Frisco Depot. It was the beginning of Tulsa.

Harry Hall's death in 1895 robbed him of witnessing his vision of a fledgling prairie community growing into a thriving city. On the other hand, J.M. lived for eighty-four years and saw it all come true.

Today, Greater Tulsa benefits from the legacy of accomplishments of the Hall Brothers, from their tireless efforts to build a city on the prairie, and from their entrepreneurial spirit and their uncanny vision.

The Hamlet Returns to South Tulsa

By BLAKE AUSTYN
Contributing Writer

In October, The Hamlet returned to its original south Tulsa location at 9107 S. Sheridan Rd.

"Everyone was wanting The Hamlet back," says Owner Gordon Pendergraft. "The demand was really large, so The Hamlet returned."

"The restaurant returns revamped and rebranded with a new look, and we are excited to see all of our returning customers."

The restaurant features a dine-in cafe for daily lunch dining, 11 a.m.-3 p.m. The patio includes a large fireplace and heated atmosphere for fall afternoon dining.

The menu features wraps, sandwiches, and salads, including grilled ham, chicken caesar and turkey club, a kids menu, and catering options.

The restaurant also includes a retail store with spiral-cut hams and turkeys available year round. A second retail store is located at 71st Street and Trenton Avenue.

The Hamlet recommends calling ahead to order hams and turkeys, especially during the busy holiday season.

The Hamlet has been locally owned since 1986.

BROKEN ARROW NEWS

City Anticipates Southern B.A. Growth, Future Projects

public meeting held by the City of Broken Arrow in August.

The 101st and Elm intersection, which 20 years ago was a thriving, highly trafficked area, continues to disintegrate as city growth increases in other portions of the city.

In August, city staff recommended to the City Council that a feasibility study be conducted and to work with property owners to find new opportunities for redevelopment of the intersection, noted Norm Stephens, Broken Arrow economic development coordinator.

The study is expected to be completed in 2018.

Regarding the need for the study, "what we have been doing isn't working," he said.

Yet, with the problems that the city needs to address at 101st and Elm, "much has happened in south

B.A. recently to prime the area for future development," said Spurgeon.

South Broken Arrow has undergone a number of infrastructure improvements over the past eight years, including construction of utilities and a south B.A. fire station, with another to come, said Kenneth Schwab, assistant city manager of operations.

Fire Station No. 2, 2300 W. Norfolk Dr., opened in 2013.

South Broken Arrow is also seeing a housing boom with close to 2,000 lots currently planned or under construction.

Those numbers will do much to add to the attractiveness of the area to developers, said Stephens.

When companies are looking for areas to open new businesses, at the top of the list include the amount of vehicle traffic, proximity to existing stores, number of homes and household income levels.

In the area of income levels, south B.A. is a step ahead of north B.A., said Michael Skates, B.A. director of development services.

The income of south B.A. residents is $5,000 higher than north Broken Arrow.

Because density often drives commercial development, developers also want to see residential development, he continued, something "we have been able to improve on in the past 10-12 years in the southwest portion of the city."

Additionally, construction will begin early next year on the first retail development at the Shops at Aspen Creek, noted Stephens. The building will sit south of Warren Theatres close to Tucson (121st) Street and will include a Starbucks and Great Clips.

"We are also in talks with a couple restaurants interested in com-

DOG PARK COMING SOON: A rendering of Rose West Dog Park, which will sit on five acres of land located on New Orleans (101st) Street, east of Garnett Road. The city broke ground in October and expects to complete the project by spring 2018. The park will feature two fenced play areas, one for large and one for small dogs; a holding area prior to the play areas; and restroom facilities and water fountains.

Broken Arrow Table Tennis Club Forming

By BRAD BALMER
Table Tennis Aficionado

Looking for something to do this winter? Join us in playing the second most popular participant sport in the world and the most popular racket sport—ping pong.

Ping Pong is the perfect activity in that it is inexpensive, healthy, fun and can be enjoyed by individuals of any age and physical ability.

Top table tennis players are some of the greatest athletes in the world, yet the sport is also enjoyed by millions of children, teenagers, students and adults of all ages and abilities.

Table tennis is a tried and true staple of American homes, proven to bring families together through a non-electronic channel.

Competitive league play will begin on Friday, Nov. 11, 6-8:30 p.m. Participants will be assigned a rating based on skill level or use their current USATT tournament rating. All skill levels are welcome and will be matched with others at your level for round robin play.

We will also have instructional classes for juniors aged 7-16 on Saturdays starting Nov. 18, 9 a.m.-noon. The club will play at the Northside Christian Church Gymnasium, located at 1221 N. Elm Pl. in Broken Arrow, just south of the B.A. Freeway exit.

Please bring your paddle if you have one, or we will have extra paddles available. Tennis shoes and dark colored clothing is recommended.

The first league night will be free; for future events, however, there will be a fee to cover the facility rental and equipment.

Top 10 Health Benefits of Playing Ping Pong:

*Improves hand-eye coordination and stimulates mental alertness, concentration and tactical strategy. This makes it the perfect game for young people to sharpen reflexes and for older people to refine tactics.

*Develops mental acuity. The speed, spin and placement of the ball are crucial in table tennis, and practiced players are highly skilled in both creating and solving puzzles involving these three attributes.

*Improves reflexes. Due to the fast-paced, short-distance nature of the sport, both gross and fine muscle movements are improved. The game is distinguished by bursts of exertion and recovery, leading to fast-twitch muscle development.

*Easy on the joints. Have you had knee surgery or back problems or are tired of twisting your ankles? Table tennis is a great way to improve leg, arm and core strength without overtaxing joints.

*Burns calories. A 150-pound person can burn 272 calories by playing table tennis for an hour.

*Offers a social outlet. Whether you play in the community center or at home with friends, table tennis offers a great way to bond with other people. Because young and old people can play the game, it can help improve communication and build relationships, irrespective of age. Playing at home with siblings or parents can bring family members closer and enable them to spend more quality time with each other.

*Keeps the brain sharp. Alzheimer's Weekly reports a clear increase in motor skills and cognitive awareness from playing table tennis, after a series of preliminary clinical studies in Japan found that table tennis markedly increases the flow of blood to the brain and could possibly even prevent dementia.

*Improves coordination. Following the ping pong ball as it moves quickly toward you, and following its trajectory as your opponent hits it helps to improve hand-eye coordination.

*Improves balance. Staying balanced and being able to quickly change direction are key to being successful in a ping pong rally.

*Stimulates various parts of the brain. By anticipating an opponent's shot, a player uses the prefrontal cortex for strategic planning. The aerobic exercise from the physical activity of the game stimulates the hippocampus, the part of the brain that is responsible for allowing us to form and retain long-term facts and events.

Dairy Queen to Expand

Despite the recent closings of two area Dairy Queens, the company is planning to further expand in the Tulsa area with its growing Grill & Chill restaurant concept.

Currently, the company has stores in the Tulsa area, with a plan to add upwards of seven additional stores in the next five years, says Dairy Queen Vice President of Development Mike Mettler.

Dairy Queen's Grill & Chill concept launched in 2002. Currently, there are more than 2,134 Grill & Chill restaurants in 46 states.

The company also operates Dairy Queen Treat locations throughout the country.

"Dairy Queen's Grill & Chill concept makes up 50 percent of the company but is currently 100 percent of company growth," he says, "making us the fastest growing burger store in the U.S. currently."

About 85 Grill & Chill restaurants are being added across the country per year.

The Grill & Chill concept endeavors to round out Dairy Queen offerings by combining its historical and nostalgic cold treats with a lunch and dinner menu, including burgers and chicken sandwiches, a $5 lunch special, and artisan-style sandwiches.

There are various factors in the company's decision as to where to open new store locations, Mettler says, factors such as daily traffic numbers, retail and residential developments, area income levels, and the area's proximity to families and community activities.

The company operates under a franchise model, so executives are currently working to identify local, potential franchise owners and the appropriate real estate locations with the goal to begin construction on two new stores in 2018, Mettler says.

Two stores would continue to be developed for the following five years.
