Ibuprofen is associated with increased blood pressure and hypertension compared to celecoxib in patients with osteoarthritis or rheumatoid arthritis and increased risk of cardiovascular disease, according to a study published in EHJ. Nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDs), both non-selective and selective cyclooxygenase-2 (COX-2) inhibitors, are among the most widely prescribed drugs world wide, but are linked with increased blood pressure and adverse cardiovascular events. Indeed, 19% of the U.S. population use at least one NSAID on a regular bases, including 30 million Americans with osteoarthritis, of whom more than 40% also have hypertension. NSAID labels include warnings about potential increases in blood pressure but there is little data on the effects of individual drugs. Maintaining or achieving blood pressure control in patients with arthritis and concomitant hypertension (treated or untreated) could avoid more than 70,000 deaths from stroke and 60,000 deaths from coronary heart disease each year, making it important to investigate the effects of various NSAIDs on blood pressure.

Liraglutide injection, a prescription medication used to treat type-2 diabetes and obesity is associated with marked slowing of stomach emptying and is an effective weight loss therapy. These are the findings of a randomized, double-blind, placebo-controlled study by Mayo Clinic researchers published in The Lancet Gastroenterology & Hepatology.

A new review published in Photodermatology, Photoimmunology and Photomedicine highlights the potential of nicotinamide (Vitamin B3) for preventing skin cancers, including melanoma in high-risk individuals. Nicotinamide can help reduce or reverse DNA damage, inflammation, and immunosuppression cause by ultraviolet radiation.

The United States is supposed to be one nation under The Holy Elohim with just bylaws for all of its citizens, yet it is badly divided. Many so-called Christian churches are so divided even The Holy Bible does not bring them together. Mt 10:35, Lk 12:51, a house divided will fall Mt 12:22-28, Mk 3:25! Quite a bit of difference than what most churches are teaching. So Be It!
