From 1999 through 2014 the number of U.S. adults taking daily vitamin D supplements above the recommended levels increased, and 3 percent of the population exceeded the daily upper limit considered to possibly pose a risk of adverse effects, according to a study published by JAMA. A 2011 report concluded that vitamin D was beneficial for bone health but noted possible harm (e.g., abnormally high levels of calcium in the blood or soft tissue, or vascular calcification) for intakes above the tolerable upper limit of 4,000 IU daily. The recommended dietary allowance for vitamin D is 600 IU/d for adults 70 years or younger and 800 IU/d for those older than 70 years.

***

Examining vitamin D levels in the blood may help predict whether a person is at risk of developing multiple sclerosis (MS), according to a large new study published in Neurology, the medical journal of the American Academy of Neurology.

***

In the first year of availability of the cholesterol-lowering medications PCSK9 inhibitors, fewer than 1 in 3 adults initially prescribed one of these inhibitors actually received it, owing to a combination of high out-of-pocket costs and lack of insurance approval, according to a study published by JAMA Cardiology. Since 2015, the PCSK9 inhibitors alirocumab and evolocumab have been approved for adults with persistently elevated low-density lipoprotein cholesterol (LDL-C) levels despite maximally tolerated statin therapy and those with familial high cholesterol.

Many manmade Christians are quick to blame pharisees for not accepting Christ as the Holy Messiah (Mt 23:3) and for upholding oral traditions. They say Christ is The Holy Messiah and call Him Lord (Lk 6:46), testify to know Him (Jn 5:39, 1Jn 2:3-4) and then teach traditions and oral interpretations by theories of Christ for the church Christians to believe and plainly deny Christ's Biblical Words to sin no more (Jn 5:14, 8:11, Acts 3:23, 1Jn 3:8-9). So Be It!
